The Cards and the Yanks go merrily along outclassing their respective opposition. Even Tex Hughson, ace of the Boston Red Sox who for a long time had the New Yorkers looking like cousins could do nothing yesterday to stop the onward progress of the McCarthyites who racked up a 9 to 3 win and drove him out of the box with a seven-inning barrage. Meanwhile the Cards, getting smooth pitching from Lefty Max Lanier, who picked up his 12th win were nosing out the Chicago Cubs 2 to 1. It was Stan Musial, National League batting leader who supplied the winning punch. He doubled off Claude Passeau in the seventh to drive in the two runs that meant the ball game. Cleveland Indians tightened their hold on second place in the American League race by grabbing of both ends of a double-header from the Detroit Tigers. One of the wins was scored at the expense of Rufe Gentry, just up from Buffalo and making his American League debut. Gentry lost a tough one at that. He held the Indians to six hits, did not allow a run until two men were out in the ninth and then lost when a rookie player with the Tribe, Hank Edwards, slapped out a homer.

Brintons Lose 13 to 6; Play Monday

Generals broke out in front last night in the final series of the Girls' Softball Leauge intermediate championship and the Knox Cup by defeating Brintons, last year's champs, 13 to 6 in an interesting game played in football weather. Generals outhit the Brinton outfit and were steadier in the field, earning their win.

Second game in the series will be played Monday night at 6.30 o'clock at the East City Bowl and if a third game is needed it will be staged on Wednesday.

Generals threw away scoring chances in the first two innings by bad base-running and Brintons finally started the run-making in the first of the third when they pushed two runs over on a pass to Beryl Lee, Dot Walker's single through short, an infield out and an error.

Generals got their bats swinging in the fourth when Gladys Young, Mary Crowe, Marg Barrie, Ruth Thomas and Marg Thompson all singled and Pat Wilson came through with a timely double. With a couple of errors mixed in with this hitting the winners found it easy to cross the plate five times.

Brintons got one back in the first of the fifth when Regina Killen, Betty Hamlin and Agnes Weir came through with singles but Generals came back in their half to break the game wide open by scoring half a dozen markers. A triple by M. McCarroll, and singles by Gladys Young Mary Crowe, Pat Wilson, Marg Barrie and Audrey Scott with a couple of costly errors did the trick.

That was all for the Generals who were blanked the next three innings but it was more than enough.

Brintons managed to cut a couple of runs off the margin in the ninth. Marg Batley opened with a clean homer to right field and Betty Hamblin and Agnes Weir both hit safely to score the former but the rally was soon shot down.

Marg Barrie had three singles for the winners in five trips and Pat Wilson, Ruth Thomas, Gladys Young and Mary Crowe came through with two blows. For Brintons, Agnes Weir had a double and two singles and Betty Hamblin who came into the game late and batted only three times had three singles Marg Batley slapped out the only home-run of the game.

Hockey Heads Discussing Plans

TORONTO, Sept. 11 —(CP) —Representatives of Amateur Hockey Associations in Canada and United States will meet to-day with National Hockey League officials to discuss "relationships between our organizations for the coming season," Dr. W. G. Hardy, president of the International Ice Hockey Association said late last night.

He said Canadian Amateur Hockey Association officials met officials of the Amateur Hockey Association of United States and his own association yesterday and later met N. H. L. representatives. He refused to divulge details of the discussion because "everything was too indefinite."

A proposal that a hockey hall of fame be established in Kingston, Ont., will be presented to the National League Board of Governors to-day, Mervyn (Red) Dutton, managing Director of the N. H. L. said. C. A. H. A. and N. H. L. representatives met a delegation from Kingston last ngiht to discuss the project.

Other officials present at the meetings declined comment when reached by the Canadian Press.

NAVY RUGBY SQUAD HAS YOUTH AND SPEED ONLY ONE VETERAN

Halifax Team Has Many Top Notchers

By HAL WALKER

TORONTO, Sept. 11—When anchor's aweigh for Navy's football squad next Saturday Coach Ted Morris will be pitting youth and its terrific enthusiasm against the trial and true gridiron requisites of brawn and experience.

H.M.C.S. York's football team won't be large enough in a physical way to strike fear into the opposition's hearts; it won't be experienced enough to earn any special marks. But it will have speed and fight and in this popular Ted Morris believe he has the recipe to success that might otherwise be denied the Tars.

Ted's Not Sure

"Honestly, I'm not sure what we can put on the field," Ted said last night preparatory to giving his young Sailors a chalk talk on the upper (or was it the lower?" deck.

"We haven't any 'name' players outside of Sandy Milne. We have a bunch of hard trying kids with no senior experience, and that's what we'll have to go along with," Morris said, not at all regretfully either.

Nobody ever rated higher in loyalty to a team than the self-same Ted Morris, and when he speaks optimistically it's perhaps because loyalty is manifesting itself more than drab realism.

Ted is in a tough corner, and won't admit it. He prefers to work with what he has in the way of playing strength, come hell or high water. Truth to tell, right now he hasn't got much.

Three Young Stars

Around Milne, hard-smashing line plunger of last year's Navy squad, Morris plans to build his 1943 Sailor team. He has three outstanding high school players for backfield duty, and, without saying so, it is obvious that he's counting on their work to bring Navy above the term "mediocre."

In this respect let us reintroduce you Royal Copeland, speedy running half, late of Humberside Collegiate; husky Steve Karrys, who used to scintillate for Northern Vocational School, and Tom Waldon, erstwhile North Toronto C.I. backfielder whom Bobby Coulter held in high regard.

His backfield, other than those mentioned, is strictly the $64 question.

Along the wingline there is no name you'll recognize as tried and true material. Perhaps, though, Les Heinbuck, a gent who scales 6 feet 5 inches without even trying, may help things considerably at end wing. Morris thinks he will, anyhow. Then there's a truly fighting gent aspiring to place at middle wing, and without further ado we give you Bruce Richardson, one of the most promising welterweight boxers we've had in this city in years. "Rich" at one time exercised the silly idea of being a sports writer before he left a newspaper to join the navy. This is his first try at football. If fight counts for anything he'll make the squad.

Halifax Has Real Club

Despite the obvious lack of material Coach Morris is not at all dismayed, or if he's dismayed he's not telling anybody. Not even Lt. Hal Smith, team manager. Says Teddy: "I don't know how good or how bad we'll be, but I know one thing, this team will be fast and they'll be in shape."

Navy has only Milne as a carry-over from last year's squad. Steve Levantis, Jack Wedley, Pat Reid, Jack Plaxton and Frank Morris of last season's team are expected to play with Halifax Navy this season, according to word we had last night. Not only that, but big Bob Isbister, the ex-Argo and Tiger great, and Al Lenard, Hamilton's triple threat backfielder, are also candidates for the Halifax club. The Maritimers are endeavoring to form a league with the Air Force and Army in order to challenge for the Grey Cup.

Oh, yes, we almost forgot, Mike Hedgewick, the ex-Sarnia and Hamilton fleet-footed smoothie; and Scotty, Wright and Dick Pawley, also ex-Hamiltonians, are available to the Haligonians.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 11—(CP)—One week from to-day the Ontario Football season gets under way and the following Saturday the Western Union will tee off. Prospects are the football will be much better than was expected two months ago when the manpower situation looked a trifle bleak. Some of the big names have gone from familiar haunts—Tony Golab, Wayne Sheley, Eddie Thompson and Bill Stukus— but quite a few top notchers remain.

Punts and passes:

Bobby Porter, long-time Toronto Balmy Beach quarterback, has announced his retirement from the club but there's a possibility he will show up with the Toronto Navy team. Meanwhile Porter's place is filled by Annis Stukus and coach Alex Ponton figures big Stuke's placement kicks will be quite an asset ...... There's plenty of useful material in the Montreal Senior Circuit. Jimmy Riddell, veteran punting star is out with Verdun Grads and kicking them with all his old-time vigor. Coach George Ellson comments: "If he kicks like that for us then may be that Grey Cup will be more than a hope."

Canada's greatest:

FO. Lew Hayman, considered by many to be one of the greatest coaches in Canadian football history, gives his idea of the greatest player he has seen in Canada. Hayman picks Abe Eliowitz, the Michigan State graduate who played for Ottawa and Montreal. "When he played against Argos I seldom took my eye off the guy," says Hayman. "He was a wonder. He could kick, run and hit a line with the best of them."

Incidentally:

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson recalls that many hockev students rated Boston's Shore-Hitchman the perfect defence and Fergie says Montreal R.C.A.F. may turn up with a modern version next winter. Jack Stewart, now with the R.C.A.F., was a real "Hitchman" body-cheker with Detroit Red Wings last season while Frank Eddolls is a blocker and a play-maker after the Shore style. Eddolls was chosen the most valuable player in the Quebec Senior League last season, even over the great Neil Colville ... Members of Montreal Canadiens enlisted since last season are Jack Portland, Ching Dheer and Charlie Phillips .... Members of a Toronto cricket team scheduled to plav an R. A. F. eleven were without equipment to mow the cricket grounds. So they loaded their own lawn mowers in cars and spent a day clipping acres of grass.

The win and second place for the Peterborough owner made the 13th heat victory and sixth seconds in the four days of racing.

Miss Abbe Peters, owned by Donald Peck, Gouverneur, N.Y., and piloted by J. Champion, scored a straight-heat win in the classified, but there was a wild scrambling for the other money positions.

Yankees Trim Boston 9-3 With 14 Clouts

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associatd Press Sport Writer

New York Yankees, who have stayed on top of the American League all season chiefly because of their superb pitching, suddenly have started to terrorize their foes with their hitting.

In winning their last three games they have made 12, 15 and 14 hits, respectively.

The victim of their latest and best uprising was Cecil (Tex) Hughson who was pitching a 3-0 shutout going into the seventh inning yesterday. In that frame the Yanks broke looose for seven runs and a 9-3 triumph over Boston.

Charley Keller hit his 26th homer and two doubles added another run in the seventh. In the eighth Bud Metheny hit a homer, Bill Johnson a double and Hughson gave way to Mace Brown, but the Yanks kept right on parading until they had pushed seven runs across the plate. Metheny, who had opened the rally, closed it with a two-run single.

Cards Win Again

St. Louis Cardinals also won yesterday but had to wring out a 2-1 decision from the Cubs on the strength of a double by Stan Musial in the seventh inning. Max Lanier, who gave eight hits, and Claude Passeau, who allowed nine, pitched a scoreless duel for six frames.

Cincinnati remained in second place in the National League by half a game over the idle Brooklyn Dodgers by dividing a twilight-night doubleheader with Pittsburg. The Pirates took the free-hitting first game 9-6 but were shut out 1-0 by Bucky Walters' five-hit hurling in the afterpiece.

New York Giants walloped Boston Braves 10-2 with a 15-hit offensive.

Cleveland Indians reinforced their hold on second place in the American League by sweeping a doubleheader from Detroit Tigers 4-2 and 1-0.

Washington whipped Philadelphia Athletics 5-0 with Early Wynn pitching a three-hit classic and St. Louis Browns stopped the Chicago White Sox 6-2.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 11 —(CP)—Lefty Flynn, coffee-colored holder of the Jamaican welterweight title, won't fight the British lightweight champion at London's Albert Hall as scheduled. Through no fault of his own, he was on the receiving end of a knife in a dark Soho street.

Flynn, fighting on the front-line as a member of Britain's merchant marine, suffered a severe head wound when he was attacked by an American Negro soldier as he left his training quarters. Another member of his party received a gashed ear. The Negro, said to have run amok after a drinking bout, was arrested.

Always perfectly-conditioned, the 28-year-old West Indian earned the non-title bout with Champion Eric Boon on the strength of a series of victories against the country's best waiters and lightweights. The knife injured him also struck indirectly at Cpl. Harry Hurst, Montreal fighter with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Hurst was signed to meet London's Harry Mizler in an eight-round preliminary to the Flynn bout. Following the accident, however, the promoters decided to cancel it and match Mizler, who lost the British lightweight title to Kid Berg nine years ago, with Boon.

All this talk about queues must have gone right to the head of Acclaimed, three-year-old racer owned by Lord Derby. He wasn't having any of it.

On his way with a dozen other mounts to line up for the start of a Newmarket handicap, Acclaimed threw his rider and bolted through gap in the ditch. The last view by those unfortunates who placed a few bob on his ability showed Acclaimed galloping a mile away over the heath in the direction of the town.

Trainer Walter Earl, who sent search parties out for the queue-hater, needn't have bothered. Acclaimed ran straight to his stable and was waiting for dinner when the trainer arrived.

None of the German figures formerly well-known in Britain has been the subject of more conflicting rumors than Baron Gottfried von Cramm, outstanding pre-war tennis player and near-winner of a Wimbledon lawn tennis title. Now he's believed to be a prisoner in American hands.

"Yank," illustrated paper printed for American forces here, said in an article referring to a prison sentence imposed on the Baron shortly before the war that he "was jailed by Hitler because he 'swished' every time he took the goose-step." Later he was released to fight with Rommel and fell into the Allied bag in Tunisia.

A. J. Elvin, sport promoter and managing director of Wembley Stadium, was described as "The Prime Minister of Spectacular Sport" when he was made a freeman of Wembley at a special meeting of the Wembley council. It was the second time in history that the freedom has been conferred.

Royals Defeat Buffalo 9-4

With the first three places in the International League race definitely determined, the Governor's Cup play-offs will get under way in Toronto, 1943 champion, and Syracuse next Tuesday night.

The dates were announced last night by League President Frank Shaughnessy.

Syracuse will be host to Newark but the foe for the Leafs still is to be determined. Right now Montreal and Rochester are tied for the fourth and final spot in the play-offs which determine the league's representatives in the Little World Series with the American Association.

Montreal moved into the fourth-place deadlock last night by defeating Buffalo 9-4. Rochester and Toronto were idle but Syracuse clinched third and Newark second in other games. The seasons ends to-morrow with the Red Wings having four and Montreal three games left to play.

Newark clinched second by defeating Baltimore, 7-2, behind the three-hit pitching of Walt Dubiel. Syracuse, meanwhile, got a permanent grasp on third by giving Jersey City its 30th white-washing of the year, 1-0, with Tom Delacruz giving up only two hits.

Garbage Trouble For Council Is Increasing

A surge of business for the hardware stores and the galvanized metal trade, if times were normal and the priority order abandoned, would ensue from an inclination of the city council to crack down with the letter of the garbage bylaw as it applies to householders.

In spite of a recent appeal to the heads of Peterborough homes calling attention once more to the requirements that garbage must be strained and wrapped, and must be put in fairly well defined types of containers, together with the exclusion of lawn clippings, corn stalks and other sappy garden materials, no improvement has reacted to the incinerator.

After a night of heavy rain this week, saturating uncovered garbage cans and boxes, the collecting wagons arrived at the incinerator yard dripping moisture. That kind of material is not combustible, dampens and almost extinguishes the fires, and is tolerated now only because the council knows the supply of metal and topped containers is extremely short.

The property committee has been convinced by experience in the last year that the only solution of the continuing difficulty of firing the incinerator is to enforce strictly the regulations of the garbage bylaw. Incinerating efficiency cannot otherwise be attained, but the committee is checked and stymied by wartime metal restrictions and also by consideration for ratepayers to the extent of hesitating to put them to the expense of buying, if there was a supply, of regulations containers.

And so the official worry continues from week to week as householding ratepayers ignore the fact that they have a $50,000 investment in their new incinerator are doing nothing to facilitate its operation. They are actually hampering it, and some of the worst offenders, especially in neglect to drain and wrap garbage, are tenants of Wartime Housing who have not had as many reminders of the bylaw requirement as those who have been living here for years.

Spouted Blue Flames

ELMIRA, Sept. 10—(CP).—"Jumping blue blazes" is no mere exclamation, void of meaning, hereabouts. Elmira firemen, called out last week at the height of an electrical storm, reported a lightning-struck tree sprouting blue flames from each of its newly-pruned limbs.

Steel Workers Get Increase

OTTAWA, Sept. 11 — (CP). — Workers of Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, N.S., who at last March 23 were earning more than the minimum base rate have been granted wage increases by the National War Labor Board.

Under the Board ruling, announced here late yesterday, Algoma workers receiving more than the base rate of 45½ cents an hour at March 23 will receive an increase of 4½ cents an hour, while Dosco employees receiving more than the 43½ cent base rate will receive an increase of 6½ cents.

The Board directed that the increases be made retroactive to March 23. They will not apply to workers who have left the employ of the companies since that date, except those who have entered the armed forces.

The Board dismissed an application for an increase of the base rate at the two plants from 50 to 55 cents an hour but said its action did not prejudice the opportunity of the Workers' Union, United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.), to make a similar application to the Regional Labor Boards in Ontario and Nova Scotia.

MILLBROOK

Speaker Tells Of Conference

MILLBROOK, Sept. 11 —(ENS) —Miss Blanche Clarry, and her sister, Mrs. Maxwell Cameron, of Ottawa, were joint hostesses for the opening meeting, after the holiday season, of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's church on Wednesday. The president, Mrs. A. L. Sisco, presided for the business and gave the call to worship, "Christ for all the world, and all of life."

A handsome quilt top, donated by Miss Maud Finnimore, was shown and quilting will be at the parsonage on Thursday of next week. The fall thank offering will be taken at the November meeting, and a special speaker will be secured if possible.

Miss M. E. Hethering gave the financial report for the initial six months of the year, $98.79 being taken in from all sources, and $95.00 remitted to the Presbyterial treasurer. The president pointed out that a special effort will be necessary to reach the year's objective. When the offering was received a special donation in loving memory of their mother, the late Mrs. L. S. Clarry, one of the oldest and most loved members of the Auxiliary, was given by her daughters, Miss Blanche Clarry and Mrs. Cameron.

Mrs. H. W. Johnston took charge of the program, Miss Nellie Hetherington reading, "Jesus and Joshua at Jericho," and Mrs. Edmund Ball offering prayer, after which Mrs. F. J. Smith brought the Christian Stewardship message, "Thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."

A report of the time spent at the Canadian Keswick, Ferndale, Muskoka, was given by Miss E. L. Hetherington. She told of the voluntary, earnest prayers and personal testimonies of the 150 students who were in attendance while the local delegates were there, and the excellent speakers from various quarters of the globe. Among those acting as chairman during Miss Hetherington's term of attendance were Rev. Canon Patterson, formerly of All Saints' church, Peterborough, and Mr. Hunter, of the Globe and Mail, who until recently conducted the church news page in the Saturday issue. Cottages and tents are available for those who are not housed in the main building, and Keswick goes on from June until September each season. The W.M.S. Watchword closed the meeting.

Black Markets Scourge Italy

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE CANADIANS IN ITALY, Sept. 9. — (Delayed)—(CP Cable.) — Flagrant black markets have been operating for a long time in every town in the Italian toe and the same situation probably exists all over Italy, according to Canadian security officers who have been moving with the forward troops as they occupy town after town.

Rationing regulations which were laid down by the now defunct Fascist government were disregarded, these officers said, and the rationing laws abused everywhere. They pointed out that Fascist party chiefs and their henchmen in the local communities always got as much food, fuel, clothing and gasoline as they needed while thousands of others suffered because of inequalities.

The result was black markets in every sort of commodity.

Now, with the 8th Army troops going through the country, black marketeers are coming out in the open, trying to sell produce to the soldiers at fancy prices. However, the troops have been told to have nothing to do with these salesmen.

LAKEFIELD

Books Not Popular During Vacation

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 11 —(ENS)— Mrs. W. Gillman presided at the board meeting of the Library on Thursday.

Librarian Miss Grace Yonge and members of the board, Mrs. W. Leonard, Mrs. A. Davis, Mrs. J. Ridpath, Mrs. R. Doubt and Mrs. E. Sloan attended.

Miss Yonge read correspondence from the Deputy Minister of Education giving the board permission to send discarded magazines to the Navy League as soon as they wished instead of keeping them a year as formerly.

A discussion was held on the advisability of installing a new book index system. After a new system had been decided on, Miss Yonge was authorized to purchase a new index book for this purpose on motion of Mrs. Doubt and Mrs. Leonard.

Accounts to Ryerson Press were passed by Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Leonard.

In the librarian's report a sharp decrease was shown in the juvenile department for July and August, only 170 books being taken out in the two months. Adult books for this period taken out was 251.

3000 Big Planes Would Knock Japan From War

BALTIMORE, Sept. 11 (AP). — Major Alexander P. de Seversky, hailing Italy's capitulation as a "victory through airpower" for Allies, believes 3,000 super-planes larger than 70-ton Martin Mars flying boat can turn the same trick against Japan.

Germany, he believes, can be blasted out of the war by the aerial route in less than a year.

"Man for man and gun for gun we probably can defeat the Japanese in the kind of warfare in which they are proficient, to which they are used, on land and on the sea.

"But why waste the lives and the time when Japan probably could be defeated by 3,000 planes of the proper size and design? On the other hand, it could take 500,000 little planes to do the job."

The giant planes needed to defeat Japan are "something we don't have but could have had," he said.

De Seversky, in Baltimore in connection with the opening of "victory through air power," a Walt Disney adaption of his book by that name, said in an interview that he did not believe that Germany ever would be invaded, but would merely be "occupied" when the time comes, just as Italy is now being occupied.

He said the Italian surrender became inevitable when the Allied forces took over supremacy of the skies.

"Victory through airpower does not mean the destruction of a nation," he said, adding that conquest could be accomplished by assuming control of the air over the enemy's territory and holding over him the power to destroy."

Plan Safety Week As Community Project

Safety Week, October 11-16, sponsored by the Industrial Accidents Prevention Association, will be extended in Peterborough as a community project with the support which the city council has given it.

The idea was proposed by Alderman Sands who briefly mentioned the importance of safety in industrial operations, and suggested that the council's co-operation would lend emphasis to the association's purpose which would thereby be impressed upon motorists and pedestrians and the people generally.

Alderman Gordon's resolution, seconded by Alderman Swanston, left the details to Alderman Sands' legal committee.

Factory Survey To Check Worker Status

TORONTO, Sept. 11 — (CP). — A considerable number of men in war plants here are being told to report to the mobilization section, National Selective Service, as the result of an industrial survey program which has close to 50 investigation in the Toronto area checking on the essential of individual workers in their present wartime jobs.

The check is also revealing whether workers have complied with National Selective Service orders that have been issued to an exemption permitting them to remain at their present work. Investigators are also asking workers for documents showing that the holders have been either rejected or discharged from the forces or hold a deferment.

"This industrial mobilization survey has been proceeding in a quiet way for some weeks but is now being intensified and the inspecting staff enlarged," it was stated last night by Bart Sullivan, regional director for Ontario, National Selective Service. "Many of the workers in Toronto war plants are on military call but subject to defement."

Mr. Sullivan said that workers in the Massey-Harris Co. had been investigated and that his staff of inspectors were now engaged surveying the plants of Research Enterprises Ltd., and Small Arms Ltd. The John Inglis Co., Ltd., will follow. Some 80 plants throughout Ontario are on the scheduled list to date and the survey will be comprehensive and complete as further firms are added. War industries are being taken first, said Mr. Sullivan.

Ice Club Meets For First Time

The first meeting of the Ice Club of Peterborough was held this week at the Staff House on Monaghan Road. Twenty people attended.

Newly organized under the direction of Oscar Weiss, the Ice Club aims primarily at providing figure skating facilities and tuition in figure skating. A temporary outdoor rink will be established in November at Patterson and Monaghan Road, on the site of an arena which it is hoped can be built at the end of the war.

There are 22 members of the club at present, and these are actively engaged in forwarding the plans for the coming winter season. The cost of membership for a year has been set at $10.00 for seniors, $5.00 for juniors, and $5.00 for members of the armed services.

Pedestrian Injured When Crossing Street

James Fram, Empress Hotel, received bruises on his head, arms and leg Friday when he was struck and knocked down at the corner of Park and Rink Streets by an automobile.

Angus MacDonald, 748 St. Mary Street, told police that he had been driving north on Park Street and started to make a left turn into Rink street. He said that six men were crossing Park Street and that they stopped when he sounded his horn. However as his automobile drew near to the men Fram walked in front of the vehicle and was struck by the bumper and knocked down.

Girl's Effort Gives Credit To Her School

The story of a young girl's loyalty to her school has been unfolded as a result of a splendid effort in which she played a leading role on behalf of the sufferers from air raid attacks over Britain through the Peterborough and District British War Victims fund.

It all started with her father, C. F. Veenman of 570 Douglas Avenue, making a model of a team of horses and wagon, and then his young daughter Lois suggested that they sell tickets for a draw on it to give the fund a helping hand, and this they set about doing with a real zeal which has had the wonderful result of raising $70.00 in the short space of two week's time, an outstanding achievement considering that the girl herself is only 10 years of age and played a leading part in the effort which brought such good results.

Then to top it all, she hands the money over with the expressed wish that her school be given the credit for this donation, hoping thereby that others may be prompted to undertake some effort on behalf of the war victims and play the same role in respect to their own school. Lois Veenman is a pupil at Prince of Wales School in Grade 5, taught by Miss M. Green, and so it is entered on records of the books of the fund, that this donation of $70.000 goes to the credit of that school.

The draw was made by the secretary of the fund, and resulted in ticket No. 839 being drawn, which gives the prize to Mrs. J. A. Wood, who lives at 411 Edison Avenue, bringing to a conclusion an effort worthy of congratulation to those who worked to bring such good results.

Two penny box collections are included in today's receipts, another $2.75 coming to the fund as a result of the weekly collection of the box sponsored by Chris. Graham at the Empress Hotel, and the box at Loblaw's Grocerteria, another good supporter of the fund adding $2.00 to its previous good record.

Outstanding Sports Event

On many occasions, a number of the lads in blue from England at the R.A.F. station at Picton have visited this city through the Peterborough Whitaker Cricket Club, and last year they were responsible for a very high class game of soccer, the most popular of sports in England being played here between a team from this station and another from the R.A.F. station at Mount Hope.

This event was of such a stellar character as to bring forth the hope that a further fixture of the same nature could be arranged, and this has been now possible, with this repeat game being played next Saturday, September 18, at the Riverside Park, commencing at 2 p.m.

The lads themselves are paying their own expenses, and the local end is being looked after by the Cricket Club, so that all proceeds may come to the fund, which last years was responsible for the splendid contribution of $311.00 as a result of their efforts.

Tickets which are only 25 cents may be secured in the various industrial plants from interested workers or from members of the Cricket Club, or at the Examiner Office.

Better Air Mail Service Begins

New plane connections between the Maritimes, Toronto and Winnipeg, affecting the delivery of air mail and improving the air mail service across the Dominion will come into effect with changes in the present Trans-Canada Airlines schedules on Sept. 15, it has been announced by the Post Office.

Air mail volume is steadily growing as a result of air-minded Canadians taking advantage to an increasing extent of the air mail facilities provided, the Post Office states, and the Department is constantly alert to meet the needs of the business and general public and to help speed the war effort by effecting improvements in air mail services.

A Trans-Canada air mail trip will commence operating daily each way between Toronto and Winnipeg, and changes are being made in the schedules of other air mail flights to provide expeditious connections.

Improved Connections

As a result of the new schedule the mail plane leaving Halifax at 6 p.m. and Moncton at 7.10 p.m. connects with the new trip leaving Montreal at 10 p.m., Ottawa at 10.50 a.m. and Toronto at 12.45 a.m. and reaches Winnipeg at 6.50 a.m. Air mail posted in time to connect with these planes should reach Winnipeg in time for first letter carrier delivery the next morning and surface connections from that city.

The eastbound trip leaving Winnipeg at 11.50 p.m. reaches Toronto at 7 a.m., Ottawa 8.55 a.m. and Montreal at 9.45 a.m. Thus air mail posted at Winnipeg up to 10.15 p.m. should be delivered in the downtown business districts of Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal late the following morning.

The morning flight from Halifax will operate 15 minutes earlier than at present, departing at 8 a.m. in order to improve letter carrier connections at Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto.

Special arrangements have been made providing fast "mail plane-to-mail train" connections at Toronto and other points. Accordingly the benefit of the new service will not be confined to the cities mentioned but extended to various other centres throughout Eastern Canada not directly on air routes.

Supply Of Peaches Dwindling Rapidly

Only straggling baskets of peaches are expected in the local fruit channels next week. The crop is about done, so the trade reports.

Full effect of the light yield this season will be felt from now on. A few peaches, plums, pears, that is the prospect for next week.

Better quality grapes are booked for the coming week, and with a price rein on them. Without a control check on them they were soaring away over the heads of the public, and people were amazed that even rapacity could brazen such a demand into the market. So buyers began yelling for a ceiling curb, and the Donald Gordon authority caught grapes on the wing and brought them down to earth.

A few bananas reached the city this week and were doled out to retailers.

10 Days In Jail For Stealing Ham

Jack Edwards, employe of Canada Packers, was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to ten days in jail after he had pleaded guilty to stealing a ham from the plant of the company.

A. Fred Innes, superintendent of Canada Packers, told the court that Edwards had been caught yesterday attempting to carry the ham out in his lunch pail. The ham had been missed from the cook room of the plant.

"Since rationing came in we have had a lot of pilfering," the witness stated.

"He has no record." Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., said.

"This kind of thing has to stop," remarked Magistrate Langley in imposing the jail sentence.

Many Homes Are Still Without Fuel

Smoke from the chimney of the post office this morning, a full bodied black smoke that you knew had covetable warmth in it, was dancing merrily into the chill west wind above the down town roofs.

Only a few minutes before that sign of coal burning, and it was not the only one, was noticed by a reporter, a woman called at the J. E.A. Fitzgerald office and told a plain little story of peremptory necessity.

"There is a baby coming to that house tomorrow, and the woman who spoke to us said there was no fuel for the Sabbath event," Mr. Elliott said. "We'll have to get something up to them."

Mr. Elliott did not hand out a homily advice about saving fuel until frosty weather arrives, but he added, "there are many homes in Peterborough that are without fuel of any kind. We are going to get only three-quarters of our coal this winter, according to the announcements."

The city hall staff worked all day Friday with their jackets on, and in some other offices visited by reporters the furnace had not been stirred out of its summer slumbers. Sweaters were being worn with assurance of something more than smug ulterior purpose.

In the meantime Welfare Officer A. G. Metheral reported to the fuel committee yesterday afternoon that deliveries of wood purchased by him for the city were on the roll, and if the producers carried out their promises he expected to get up to 5.000 cords of hardwood. Other wood is available but the city has kept hands off the soft varieties as something to be left to citizens to buy for themselves.

This is the council's effort to make up the deficiency caused by the failure of the commercial fuel dealers to obtain wood supplies in districts where the city is now demonstrating that it can be done, and could have been done all summer.

Intimations that some wood has been stolen from the Park street piling lot were discussed by the committee, and preventive action will be taken. The new wood will be stored on Townsend street and the old lacrosse bowl will be lighted and the police department will be asked to keep an eye on the lot during the night.

A bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering, he is spending a year's time gaining practical knowledge of the theory he learned in college, and when he completes his training here hopes to continue in the employ of the Company.

Mr. Keeley, whose parents arrived in Saskatchewan 30 years ago and eventually had their name legally changed to Keeley from Cheung, was born 21 years ago. He has three brothers and three sisters. One of his brothers is working for the International Nickel Co. at Sudbury. Another works at Malton Airport and a sister is employed in the office of the Department of Munitions and Supplies, Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10 — (CP). — Ideas from the experts to ease the tasks of busy housewives with the approach of fall:

TOMATO SHERBET: With fresh tomatoes at their best, a tomato sherbet makes a delicious entree for a meal or an unusual accompaniment to a crisp vegetable salad, say the home economists in tthe consumer section of the agriculture department.

To make the sherbet, combine three cups of quartered, unpeeled tomatoes, six peppercorns, three cloves, one teaspoon salt, a bit of bay leaf, one tablespoon sugar and a slice of onion. Simmer 10 minutes in a covered saucepan. Strain and add one-half teaspoon lemon juice.

Soak two teaspoons of gelatin in two tablespoons cold water and then stir over hot water until dissolved Add to tomato mixture pour into refrigerator pan and freeze. Stir and beat the mixture several times while freezing. If the sherbet is being used with a salad, the ice cube frame may be greased and placed in the mixture after the last stirring. When fresh tomatoes are no longer available, the sherbet may be made by using two and one-half cups of canned tomato juice.

BLOOD DONORS: For those who make regular deposits in Red Cross blood banks, Marion Harlow of nutrition services comes up with a suggestion for the proper foods to maintain the blood count at the level required of a blood donor.

Donors should eat green vegetables and whole grain cereal daily; three or four eggs a week, and a generous serving of liver, heart or kidney once a week, oftener if possible.

Provided the proper foods are eaten regularly, donors may give blood at three-month intervals without suffering any ill effects, Miss Harlow says.

RATION TIPS: Now that the new No. 3 ration books are in circulation, Byrne Hope Sanders, director of the Prices Board's consumer branch, has issued the following reminders to the women of Canada.

Ration books should not be loaned to friends. The purchase of rationed goods without stamps encourages "black markets," and it is wrong to ask retailers to sell goods in return for ration stamps which have expired. No one except members of the immediate household concerned should use books for the purchase of rationed articles.

Anyone who finds a ration book should return it to the nearest local ration board at once. Retailers should not accept unused stamps. These should be removed from ration books and destroyed. Finally, says Miss Sanders, no one should attempt to make purchases with loose ration stamps.

SLEEP IN COMFORT: Now that Canadians cannot buy mattresses of the spring-filled type, they are finding the solid-filled mattresses have much the same resilience, providing the ticking is filled or packed with good quality materials. To get the best wear from a mattress, it should not be rolled or bent, since such treatment affects the even distribution of the filling. Sit on the edge of a mattress and you'll break down its side walls. Failing to turn the mattress at least once a week produces sags and hollows. Covering it with a protective sheet of muslin guards against dust and tears, and it can be kept clean and re-fluffed by vacuum cleaning, airing and occasional sunning.

American Nurse Describes Bartering With the Arabs

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 11 —(ENS)— Strange and interesting letters arrive frequently these days from the battle fronts, and news from a slightly different angle to those usually received in Canada has come to Mrs. Harry Jewel, from her cousin, Second Lieut. Doris J. Watson, an United States Army Nurse now in Sicily.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Watson, East Lansing, Michigan, and her father was born in Lakefield. Her grandmother, Mrs. Joseph Watson, still resides in the village, and she has many relatives in this area.

She has served for the past three years in the U.S. Army Nurse Corps and has been through the entire African and Sicilian campaigns, with experiences and scenes both amusing and grim which she describes in her letter.

Dickering with Ali Ben Hassan, an Arab, for eggs in North Africa, sleeping on lumpy straw mattresses in barbed wire enclosures, and digging fox holes in Sicily have all been taken in stride by Nurse Watson.

The letter begun early in July in North Africa is concluded with an appended message from Sicily about two weeks later. Her journey from the former war zone could not, she affirms, be described in detail but was full of thrills and near-escapes.

She continues: "I can now say I am a true soldier, for I know what it is to hit the ground on the double. I'm well acquainted with dirt, for I slept on the ground in a pup tent until recently. For several days our water was limited to two canteens a day for all purposes. We found a shallow salt creek nearby and soon learned to dig a hole and bathe."

Sicily she describes as "dirty and dry, worse than Africa in that respect, but not as 'buggy'." Wearing apparel has been unique—and somewhat uncomfortable, Lieut. Watson writes: "For two days I lived in my bathing suit, always soaking wet."

In North Africa shortly before the departure for Sicily army nurses found themselves in a confined area with only their field equipment and the clothes they wore.

Always, it was indicated they were allowed to purchase eggs. When she went to the road to watch for traffic she took some small change in case they saw an Arab with some eggs. Soon one came along to the watering point, which is a cement well and trough. He brought two eggs for which I paid him double (with a real purpose in mind). As a result, after insisting he had no more, he returned with two more."

Thus began an extended egg business with Lieut. Watson as manager for she was the only one able to speak French. Other nurses joined, some bringing money, others G. I. equipment to exchange. Every Arab coming by with cattle to water was asked to come back with eggs. "Before the evening was over" the letter continues "we had collected three dozen eggs which we later boiled over field stoves."

A pair of G.I. shoes fairly drove Arab No. 1 "wild," and his efforts to bring more eggs marked the beginning of another day. This vendor she vividly describes as a fairly clean Arab, who wore the conventional attire of jacket, white droopy drawers and a straw hat (Mexican style) in addition to his fez. Ben Hassan was clad in a maroon wool bathrobe and G. I. shoes.

This progressive son of the desert has "Westward ho!" aspirations. He wants to come to America, "raise beef and vegetables and get rich like the wonderful Americans."

The fun which started off the second day of egg-bickering included native exhibition of dancing and acrobatics with the hoped for reward of clothing. But the merriment changed to grimness when tents were struck, leaving us to the mercies of the sun and wind, sitting on the ground, surrounded by field pack, gas mask, canteen and belt, blanket roll, half a pup tent, make-up case and wearing fatigues.

"A dream-like place" was finally reached the letter continued "when we reveled in our first shade in many moons. We are in an olive grove and the trees are old twisted specimens. We are surrounded by barbed wire and have armed guards. We are on C. rations, one can per meal plus one cup of beverage. You have no idea how grand it is to hear the wind rustling in trees instead of howling through wheat stubble. Tomatoes are plentiful and it makes me homesick for the old days when I helped you can them.

"Strung up like violins" is the term used by the writer as she senses coming conflict and "high morale." She adds that the enemy does not attack Red Cross hospitals, so don't fret.

Concluding her letter in Sicily Lieut. Watson says "I have now seen the terrible fear on children's faces during the raids and it tears my heart. I surely will have a deeper appreciation of the little things of life. Just a glass of cold water, a comfortable bed, or the sight of green grass will probably bring the tears, and the thought of seeing your dear faces is almost more than I can bear." She concludes with "Keep your chins up for I have a hunch it won't be long now."

Mrs. Kenneth Ketchum McCallum of Cobourg has announced in Toronto the engagement of her daughter Marjorie Ellen, to Lieut. George Robert Kirby Lye, of Petawawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ossian Gardiner Lye of Guelph. The wedding will take place at St. Peter's Anglican Church, Cobourg, on September 25.

McKenzie—Lang

The wedding took place in the Presbyterian church at Bowmanville of Patricia Blanche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Lang, of Fraserville, formerly of Peterborough, to Ivan Anderson McKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne W. McKenzie of Jasper, Ontario. Rev. W. G. Blake officiated at the double ring ceremony and the attendants were Mrs. Cyril Norris of Oshawa, twin sister of the bride, and Dr. A. F. McKenzie of Orono, brother of the groom. Owing to the serious illness of the bride's father there were no guests and immediately after the ceremony the couple left by motor for Ottawa. Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie will live in Oshawa.

Bride And Groom Honored

More than 80 friends and neighbors were present at a community miscellaneous shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. "Bun" Kingdon, held at the home of the latter's father, Mr. J. M. Hope. Miss Agnes Weir read an address and gifts were carried in in a prettily decorated basket by two little girls, Margaret Lang and Ruby Staples. Prior to the wedding Mrs. Kingdon (Nee Velma Hope) was guest at three delightful showers, two held at their home by Mrs. A. H. Lewis and Miss Harriet Reid and one held by the girls of the office staff of the Quaker Oats, at which she was presented with red and white kitchen-ware. The office staff of the Quaker Oats presented Mrs. Kingdon with a floor lamp and a table lamp.

O'Neill—Heffernan

The wedding took place at St. Peter's on Monday of Elizabeth Ann Heffernan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Heffernan of Otonabee to Stanley Joseph O'Neill, son of Mrs. Michael O'Neill of Downeyville. Father Malane officiated and the music was played by Miss Marion Best.

Given in marriage by her brother, James Heffernan, the bride wore a two-piece street-length frock of airforce blue crepe with matching hat and carried a bouquet of Bettertime roses. She was attended by her niece, Miss Anna Carey, who wore brown sheer crepe with matching hat and a bouquet of Bettertime roses. Mr. Elmer O'Neill was his brother's best man.

After a wedding breakfast for about 30 guests at the bride's home the couple left on a wedding trip, the bride travelling in a navy sheer dress, navy coat and black hat and accessories. They will live in Toronto.

St. Paul's W.M.S. Hears About Hungarians

The first fall meeting of St. Paul's W.M.S. was held Friday afternoon. The president, Mrs. E. H. Howson, conducted the devotional exercises and very interesting reports of the summer's work by the secretaries of the Welcome and Welfare and Home Helpers departments followed. The missionary topic for the meeting was "Our Work Among the Hungarians in Canada" and this was discussed in very able manner by Miss M. Ross.

The speaker traced the early history of the Hungarians which clearly showed the reason for the emigration of so many to foreign lands. In Canada there are about 80,000 who have retained many of their national characteristics, although they have become loyal citizens who take part in all our agricultural and industrial life. In art, literature and music they have also made notable contributions In turn, through our church, we have helped them retain their Christian beliefs and social service and nursery schools have added to their development.

Mrs. J. D. Smart thanked Miss Ross on behalf of those present, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem and the benediction.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, September 12

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a splendid one for stabilizing the affairs and is particularly propitious for the church, clergy, and all those of a studious or profound state of mind and character. Possessions also show increase and security. But in romantic or domestic affairs there is a separative influence of estrangement.

For The Birthday

Those whose birthday it is will enjoy a year of excellent success in putting the affairs and the fortunes on a sound and enduring basis. There may be increase in investments, accumulations, real estate, or perhaps a legacy or substantial gift. In domestic, social or romantic attachments there is a sign of separation, disruption or other regrettable event, unless faithfully safeguarded.

A child born on this day will have a studious and sturdy character, with practical ability. It may be less stable and fortunate in its romantic life.

For Monday, September 13

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a rather conflicting one, with much promise of affairs being put on a sound and enduring basis by the use of certain peculiar talents, by mystical or psychic lead or insight rather than the keen logic or reason. Prudent and discreet conduct may avert quarrels. Many perplexing or obscure phases may negative domestic happiness or success.

Birthday Forecast

Those whose birthday it is, although having stability of character and sound intentions, yet may be influenced by psychic tendencies, emotional disturbances or other obscure or chaotic proclivities. These may react unfavorably on domestic happiness or solidarity. Be discreet, prudent and reasonable, particularly in romantic affiliations and there may be some constructive benefits.

A child born on this day will have excellent qualities, which should be directed into practical channels, with regulation of psychic or mystical talents.

DOROTHY DIX

BABY MAY PART A WIFE AND HUSBAND

Mother Gives Child All Her Time and Neglected Mate Stays Out Late.

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband and I have always been very much in love, very close to each other, but now our happy marriage is about to be broken up by our baby. I wanted children. My husband did not, and he was put out by the arrival of this youngster.

Now the baby is several months old and my husband does not care about it, though he does all he can for me and does not shirk his duty towards the child. As you know, the baby takes up so much of my time and now I find that my husband has taken to staying away from home more and more. He still loves me but just the same we are drifting apart. He never says anything, but if I am working with the baby when he comes home, he just says "I'm going downtown a minute," and that is the last I see of him for the evening.

I realize that many times when I get the baby in bed I am too tired to be as interesting and loving a companion to my husband, as I was before baby came. What can I do to keep my husband and baby and still be happy? I want them both, but the way things are going I am pretty sure to lose my husband.

A TROUBLED MOTHER

ANSWER—Children are always pictured as the tie that binds a husband and wife closer together. Sometimes they do but just as often they are the wedge that drives people apart, and in many and many a divorce case, if the true correspondent were cited, it would be junior instead of the "other woman." When this happens it is generally the wife's fault because so many women do not seem to be able to take parenthood in their stride, as their husbands do. They become fanatical infant-worshippers, give all their time, thoughts, and caresses to their children, and apparently lose all interest in their husbands except as purveyors to their broods. And not many men enjoy having their noses put out of joint by a squalling baby.

Surely you must have noticed how many married men take to wandering soon after the first baby is born. Up to that time the husband had been devotion itself to his wife and people wonder why he so suddenly changed, and criticise him for tiring of the pretty young creature so soon. But the fault isn't his. It is the wife who pushed him out of his house, out of her life because she didn't have any time to give him, go places with him, or even to dress up and look attractive. Everything was for baby.

That is your situation, and unless you meet it with more intelligence than you are doing you are going to lose a perfectly good husband. You have to realize, in the first place, that your husband is jealous of the baby. Foolish, of course. But there it is. The baby is all-in-all to you, but it isn't to your husband. You come first with him, and he wants you to be the same tender, affectionate, loving companion you were before baby was born, and to give him as much attention as you do the youngster.

You will say that you can't do this, that baby takes all of your time. That is because you don't know how to manage it. You don't have to sit up and watch it breathe all the time, spend hours getting it to sleep, and have a fit every time it cries. My earnest advice is, get a trained baby specialist to spend a week with you. She will straighten both you and the infant out, cure your husband's jealousy, and let you resume being a wife once more instead of a baby nurse. It will be lots cheaper than getting a divorce.

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband and I have been married almost three years. He is 22 and I am 20. When we were going together before our marriage we were jitterbugs, but now I have settled down to the extent where this seems childish to me. I thought, perhaps, he would lose his craze for it, too, but he seems to enjoy it as much as ever. Most of the night clubs now object to jitterbugging but my husband insists on doing it until the management frequently puts us out. This has gotten me so nervous that I am stiff when I try to dance, and that makes him furious. He says that if I take away his dancing I will be removing the thing he likes best. I know you have to baby a husband a lot to get along with him, but don't a man ever grow up and get tired of showing off? And do you think that forty years from now I will still be jitterbugging?

A REFORMED JITTERBUG.

ANSWER—I am afraid that there are a lot of men who never do grow up and become adult, and certainly one who has such a mania for jitterbugging as yours seems to belong in the perpetual adolescent class. Such men are Peter Pans who are still boys at heart when they are grey-headed and paunchy, and while that is very charming in a whimsical novel it is hard luck for the women they marry.

For they never acquire any sense of responsibility, or get any perspective as to what marriage really means. They never settle down to honestly pursuing a career. They always stay the kind of cut-ups that make everybody tired, and who think that amusing themselves is the chief thing in life.

And if their wives try to restrain them, and make them be their age and act like sensible human beings, they consider the wives domestic tyrants and complain of being nagged. So I fear there is no way you can keep your jitterbug from indulging in his contortions without danger of losing him. You will have to have patience and string along with him and hope he will break a leg, or something. And be comforted by the thought that these fad dances don't last long. Already jitterbugs have quit jittering.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married to an army officer for two and a half years. He is 59 and I am 28. He wants to adopt a child, I don't, and we quarrel bitterly over this. What should I do?

LONELY WIFE.

ANSWER — Give the stork a chance. Wait three or four more years anyway, before you abandon the idea of not having children of your own. But if you do adopt a child you need not be afraid you won't love it. Most people seem more foolish about adopted children than real parents are over their own youngsters.

Dyer-Macdonald Bridal Vows At Saint Paul's

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, decorated with vari-colored gladioli, was the scene at one o'clock this afternoon of the wedding of Margaret Eleanor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Macdonald, to Leslie Frederick Mabbett Dyer, son of Mrs. W. T. Dyer and the late Frederick Mabbett. Wedding music was provided by Mr. Martin B. Chenhall A.R.C.O. and during the signing of the register Mrs. L. R. Mitchell sang "Because."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown of ivory satin with a French lace bodice. Her matching Mary Queen of Scots head-dress was accented with tiny white velvet orange blossoms which held the floor-length illusion veil. She carried a shower bouquet of deep red bettertime roses and bouvardia. Miss Maria Mullen, Reg. N. of Niagara Falls was bridesmaid, a lovely frock of cloud blue mist with violet accessories and a bouquet of pink picardy gladioli and blue delphiniums. Mr. Walter Dyer was his brother's best man and the ushers were Mr. Howard Macdonald, brother of the bride, and Mr. Fred Constable.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where her mother received in a powder blue two-piece ensemble with silver fox furs, black accessories. Mrs. Dyer, mother of the groom, who also received, wore copen blue with navy accessories. Both wore corsages of pink briarcliff roses.

When Mr. and Mrs. Dyer left on a wedding trip to Montreal and Ottawa the bride was wearing a two-piece suit of romance blue, navy accessories and mink furs, the gift of the groom.

Hospital Work Shown In Film

The motion picture, "White Battalions Serving Mankind" which is to be shown on Monday afternoon in St. Andrew's Sunday school at the annual meeting of the Nicholls Hospital Auxiliary, is an interesting movie, complete with sound, showing the workings of a great hospital and the important part played by the hospital in the life of the community. The film belongs to the American College of Surgeons, and was obtained by the Auxiliary from the Department of Hospital Service at Toronto, of which Dr. Harvey Agnew is secretary. Bedford-Kruger Vows Taken HAVELOCK, Sept. 11—(ENS).— A wedding of local interest took place in the Sacred Heart Church, Chapleau, recently, when Rita Mary Florence Kruger, B.A., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Kruger, became the bride of Mr. James R. Bedford, formerly of Havelock, Rev. J. B. Gascon officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a two-piece street-length costume of island turquoise crepe, fashioned with gored skirt and brocaded jacket. Her small straw hat was trimmed with ostrich feather tips, and short veil, and she carried a turquoise pearl rosary, mounted in silver, the gift of the groom. Her corsage was Swansonia roses and Madonna lily petals.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Lucretia Kruger, wearing a two-piece dawn grey crepe dress, with an eyelet embroidered jacket and a small grey hat and veil. She carried an arm bouquet of fuchsia, sweetpeas, blue delphinium and Briarcliffe roses. Mr. Edward Downey of Chapleau assisted the groom.

After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate families. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in the afternoon for about 200 guests, who were received by Mrs. Kruger, assisted by Mrs. Jay R. Bedford. Later the bride and groom left on a honeymoon trip to Muskoka and Toronto, the bride travelling in a costume of turquoise blue with matching hat and a coat of beige English flannel.

Toronto Raiding Parties Seeking Draft Dodgers

TORONTO, Sept. 11 —Sweeping through the downtown area yesterday afternoon, 44 police officers under the direction of Inspector Robert Davie of the Dundas St. W. Station, Sgt. W. J. Dickson of the R.C.M.P. and Enforcement Officer James Butler of the National Selective Service Board, searched poolrooms, hotels, bowling alleys and suspected bookmaking resorts for draft dodgers and men and women evading the National Selective Service regulations.

Shortly before 6 o'clock last evening, Inspector Robert Davie announced that 97 persons had been interviewed by the raiding parties between 3 o'clock and 5:30. Of these, 11 were arrested, 10 for failing to notify the National Registrar of changes in address and one for failing to report for a military medical examination under the Mobilization Act.

The ages of those taken into the net ranged from 18 to 40 years. The raids started at 3 o'clock and 25 calls were made at poolrooms, hotels, restaurants, gypsy joints and suspected bookmaking spots. Twelve cars were used to transport persons picked up at various addresses along Queen St. from Bay St. to Spadina Ave. and along Elizabeth St.

Women Produce Essential Foods

ROSENEATH, Sept. 11 (ENS)—The local W. I. held its regular progressive meeting on Thursday afternoon.

Each meeting totals up a business session, when war time activties are planned, community welfare attended to, and timely address of interest to rural women engaged in war work.

The meeting was held in the Town Hall, Mrs. James L. Timlin was hostess and Mrs. Earl Waldie, president, in the chair.

During the business session, several pairs of mittens were handed in for the ditty bags the society has promised to fill. In connection with this project, the society would welcome donations for the bags from anyone in the community. Ten pounds of yarn were distributed to be knitted into socks for soldiers from the district.

Fair Prizes.

It was decided to offer prizes of $1.00, 75 cents and 50 cents, first, second, and third prizes respectively, at Rosenath Fair, for a hand-made apron by girls 14 and under. The competition is open only to residents of Alnwick Townships.

Owing to scarcity of fruit, the making of jam for the Red Cross was postponed for the present.

Plans for the October meeting included a grandmohers' program with Mrs. Clarence Thackeray as convener; and an apron parade.

Homemaker First.

Mrs. H. C. Nixon, wife of the former Liberal leader of Ontario, was chosen as the subject of Miss Leila Taylor's paper—"A Noted Canadian Woman." Miss Taylor classed Mrs. Nixon as a homemaker and housekeeper of note, vital ambitious, with a striking personality, interested in people, making friends easily; a former chemist and an accomplished pianist.

Above everything else she puts her family of two sons and two daughters" said Miss Taylor in conclusion.

Women Produce Food.

Agriculture in war time. was the subject of a paper presented by Mrs. Barton Thackeray. That hard times are necessary to bring out the best in each of us, and that women of to-day are doing equally as well as their pioneer ancestors was the opinion of Mrs. Thackeray as she commented on the contribution made by the pioneer woman in church, school and home.

"To-day in spite of war nerves. women are making their contribution as they produce nutritious food for Britain. Of the new crops grown during the war, to provide essentials, she named milkweed, sunflowers, dandelions, flax seed and soy beans. Another contribution made by women is the morale building through letters to soldiers," Mrs. Thackeray said.

Musical Program.

The program period convened by Mrs. J. W. Pacey, included a large display of cut flowers. the judges Mrs. E. Timlin and Mrs. C. Thackeray awarded the prizes to Mrs. Earl Waldie and Mrs. E. Sandercock.

Miss Gene Brown played a piano solo, "When Its Twilight On The Prairie," whistling accompaniment. Marjorie and Lois Sandercock sang "Waltzing Matilda." There were readings by the convener and Mrs. C. Sandercock, and contests arranged by Mrs. E. Timlin and Mrs. Pacey.

War Costs $600 For Every Man, Woman

OTTAWA, Sept. 11 (CP).—Expenditures on war construction and production in Canada since Sept. 9, 1939, total $6,500,000,000—approximately $600 for every man, woman and child in the Dominion, the Munitions Department announced yesterday.

As Canada enters her fifth year of war, the record shows more than $720,000,000 in new factories, machinery and land sites financed by the government to speed the output of munitions. This cost would average approximately $65 for every person in Canada.

The completed munitions themselves have cost the people of Canada nearly $5,000,000,000, or about $455 out of every $600 spent by the Department. War goods not produced in Canada but purchased from abroad account for approximately $25 of every $600 spent, or a total of $250,000,000.

To help house workers engaged in essential industries more than $65,000,000 has been invested in pre-fabricated homes, a sum representing an estimated $5 out of every $600.

In the construction of defence projects, such as airports, more than $515,000,000 was expended, about $50 out of every $600.

From every $100 invested in the construction of new plants and equipment, $15 was allowed to the ammunition industry, $18 to the chemicals and explosive industry, $17.50 to the gun industry, $1 to the machine tools and guages industry, $4 to the automotive industry, $20 to industries producing raw materials, $1.50 to the signals and instruments industry, $10 to the airraft industry, $4.50 to shipbuilding and repairs, and $8.50 to housing.

All these facilities are the properties of the people of Canada.

Nazi Gain Control Of Vital Brenner Pass

MADRID, Sept. 11 (CP). —The Germans, it was learned here today, obtained control of the Brenner Pass line through the northern Julian Alps after severe fighting with the Italian garrisons in which there were a number of casualties.

German reports here said the Italian units are withdrawing to the west in the Alps near Caporetto.

(The Germans announced yesterday that Italian troops had occupied the Brenner Pass, important link between Italy and Germany, and tried to give the impression the Italians were friendly to them).

Only Yes-men Wanted By Gov't. – Cohen

OTTAWA, Sept. 11 — (CP). — J. L. Cohen, K.C., of Toronto, whose membership in the National War Labor Board was terminated by the Government on Thursday, said yesterday in a prepared statement that "what the Government sought (in the Board) was a servile Government instrument."

Mr. Cohen termed a "piece of hypocrisy" a statement in the Government Order-in-Council terminating his Board membership that the Board "clearly envisaged an independent and judicial attitude on the part of its members."

"The quarrel with me is just that I insisted on being independent of Government influence," said Mr. Cohen.

"They (the Government) sought to make the Board and every member of the Board a servant of the Government and not in any way of the people...."

Big Fish Caught At Lakefield By Toronto Man

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 11— (ENS). Arthur Kirschmann of Toronto, holidaying in the village, literally "snatched" himself one of the biggest muskies taken out of Lake Katchewanooka this year, when he hooked and after half an hour's struggle tossed a 19-pounder out on the Dummer shore. Casting off the old gravel-loading dock at Kidd's farm on Wednesday morning, Mr. Kirschmann hooked the fish with a pikie minnow. There was a strong west wind blowing at the time and with no one to aid, the boat drifted slowly across the lake while the fisherman and fish fought it out. The struggle lasted the entire way across the lake and through several big weed beds with the boat drifting into the shallows just below the old Down farm, with the muskie still fighting.

Finally Mr. Kirschmann, having no gaff or "headache stick" managed to get the fish close enough to rap it on the head with an oar, knocking the fish off the single hook on which it was snagged. The blow stunned the monster and as it lay feebly flapping on the surface the angler in desperation leaped out of the boat up to his waist in water and mud, wrapped his arms around his prize before it could recover and floundered ashore.

The episode is the highlight in Mr. Kirschmann's fishing career, and he is having the fish stuffed and mounted to mark the occasion.

The Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough at a meeting held on September 8th, 1943, passed By-law 4345 entitled "A By-law to Provide for the Closing of Barber Shops in the City of Peterborough during Certain Hours," which provides that pursuant to Sub-Section 5 of Section 82 of the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, R.S.O. 1937, Chapter 194, all Barber Shops in the City shall Close on each Saturday throughout the year and on any day immediately preceding a Statutory Holiday at the hour of Eight o'clock in the Afternoon and shall remain Closed until Five o'clock in the Forenoon of the next business day.

There Are Many Smart Things You Can Make

Pretty Dressing Table

How would you like to be able to make a smart dressing table cover like the one pictured above. Even if you haven't sewed before, you will be able to make this fresh feminine "skirt."

It is truly enchanting in crisp dotted swiss with three-tone ruffles, raging from apple-blossom pink to deep rose. Or for a sunny southern color scheme, use organdy in eggshell, turquoise, and clear blue green. With a bedspread to match, your room's redecorated.

This is just one of the many things our 32-page booklet gives detailed instructions on. If you're interested in making novelty gifts which are tremendously simple, be sure to read our booklet. Clever watering pots, garden gloves, book ends, luncheon sets, lamp bases, knitting bags, are some of the things which you will be able to make after reading the booklet.

Anyone can make them with very little effort. All that you really have to do is to be sure and follow the directions most carefully. Handle materials so that articles will be fresh and clean when completed.

For your copy of "How to Make Pretty Things" send fifteen cents in coin or stamps to the Home Service Department of the Peterborough Examiner. Be sure to write your name, address and name of booklet plainly.

"The Authority on Authorities"

POSITION VALUE VAGUE

VALUING YOUR cards on a basis of their position in relation to those indicated by opponents' bids is risky business. It may turn out that the man at your right had bid a topless suit, and his partner has the honors in it sitting over yours. Penalty doubles founded on position value may therefore prove costly. The trick-taking power of your cards may also shrink because of another factor—that you have all which are held by your side and therefore must lead from them, instead of having leads come to them from your partner.

	North
	♠ 3 ♥ A Q 10 ♦ 10 8 5 4 2 ♣ A J 10 6
West ♠ K Q 8 5 ♥ K J ♦ K Q ♣ K Q 7 4 3	N W E S	East ♠ 7 6 4 2 ♥ 5 4 2 ♦ J 9 7 6 3 ♣ 5
	South ♠ A J 10 9 ♥ 9 8 7 6 3 ♦ A ♣ 9 8 2

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	2 ♣
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Dbl

North was tempted to double West's 2-Clubs, and would have done so if vulnerability had been reversed. As it was, he took a chance on his partner's heart suit being of five cards, and raised it in the hope of gaining the great value of a vulnerable game.

West, for his double, of course had visions of a trick in hearts, as he sat at the left of the heart bidder, and also thought he would get the equivalent of at least one trick from each of his king-queens, perhaps two in one or more cases. It looked like a juicy set to him, but was not.

The club K lead went to the A, and South at once led to his diamond A, then finessed the heart Q and ruffed a diamond. The heart A dropped the K and a second diamond was ruffed. The club 9 was led to the Q, and West led back a club which East ruffed with the defenders' last trump. When the spade 2 was returned, South played the 9 to force the Q. Now West could lead either into the spade tenace or a club to the dummy's J. He did the latter, the spade 10 being discarded. Now a diamond was ruffed, the spade A scored and the spade J ruffed by the heart 10, making game.

World League Outlined For Kiwanians

Stating that events of the past week have cast new light on the urgency and importance of discussing possible solutions to the problem of world order after the war, Victor Evan Grey, K.C., a member of the National Executive Committee of the League of Nations Society in Canaad, addressed a luncheon meeting of Kiwanians at the Empress Hotel on Friday.

He emphasized in his speech on "Canada and the New League of Nations" that recent events and the statements of Allied leaders, particularly that of Mr. Churchill at Harvard University on Monday, conclusively demonstrated that the time was not far off when decisions would have to be taken for the founding of a just system of international peace. It was, as Mr. Churchill had said, a question either of "world order or world anarchy."

Pointing out that in the time at his disposal it was not opportune to enter on a discussion of the probability or even desirability of establishing a new League, the speaker asked his audience to take its reestablishment for granted for the time being, for the immediate purpose of reviewing the form and outline which a new League of Nations might well take.

Ground Work.

He enumerated the fundamental principles which would guard the life of such an international association arising from the chaos of the war, and make effective its capacity to deal with disputes between member nations with dignity, justice and authority. First in importance was the necessity that membership in the League should be universal in character, including not only the United Nations of this conflict but representatives of our defeated foes as well, though in their case it would be necessary to examine credentials with care.

"Membership must be permanent," Mr. Grey asserted, "and there can be no such thing as coming in and going out at will." The new League would be the source of international law and the guardian of international justice; it would be the instrument for the enforcement of its own laws and for the restraint of aggression; and it would provide the machinery for peaceful change in the course of adjusting conflicting national interests. Finally, with a totally democratic makeup the very fibre of its being, it would be the natural instrument for furthering co-operation between nations and advancing social progress.

More Post-war Thought.

"You and I," the speaker said, "cannot decide and solve these questions, but on our own level of responsibility we can and must deal with their their important, fundamental elements. It is the duty of the individual Canadian to adopt an attitude toward the problem of re-ordering our world; we must be thinking and talking about it, for eventually we will be voting on it."

The speaker of the day was introduced by F. D. Kerr, K.C., and in moving the vote of thanks it was suggested by Jacob Low that the Kiwanis Club might well take out a corporate membership in the League of Nations Society.

The strong German occupying forces made their boldest blow of the Italian campaign yesterday by attacking Rome, and in the north were said to have taken over Genoa and possibly other major cities. Berlin claimed Rome had capitulated.

(A dispatch from Berne said Italian resistance in Lombardy in Northern Italy had ceased. It reported that an Italian radio broadcast by Gen. Italians Seek To Join Allies

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE CANADIANS IN ITALY, Sept. 9.—(Delayed)—(CP Cable.)— This typical mountain town in Southwest Italy received the news of the country's unconditional surrender with cheers, handclaps and loud applause for the Canadian soldiers here.

The whole town was in an uproar most of the evening, with everyone out in the streets discussing the good news. Wine kegs were opened and there were a dozen celebrations on the main street.

These people hope that their sons serving in the Italian forces now will come home. All they seem to want is to get back to normal. Many showed contempt and hatred for the Germans, and others honestly asked if they could join the Canadian army to fight the Nazis

Fast Train Smashes

When the train came to a stop the passengers crowded from the train and saw bodies lying about the right of way. Soldiers and airmen among the passengers immediately began aiding the injured and helping to remove the bodies. Other passengers returned to the coaches. There was no panic among the 75 or 100 who had left the train.

Train Goes On.

A staff of 100 nurses and 25 doctors was organized in Hamilton by Dr. M. G. Brown, medical superintendent at the General Hospital, following a telephone call from an excited woman at Aldershot.

Dr. Connell, the railroad physician, led ambulances in a 60-mile-an-hour dash over wet highways.

Dr. J. H. Mullin of Hamilton, chief coroner, allowed the train to proceed after an engine was obtained to replace the one damaged in the smash.

Dr. Mullin said an inquest will be held but it may be delayed in order that statements may be obtained from the two injured bus passengers.

Luck Saves Two.

But for a twist of circumstances, two other persons might have been aboard the ill-fated bus. Mrs. Frank O'Brien of Waterdown was ready to take the bus but turned back when rain began to fall and decided to wait for a latter bus.

Stanley Nesbett, 17, who lives a few yards from the crossing, missed the bus by seconds. It pulled away as he ran towards it. Then came the crash.

"I saw people hurled out of windows," he said. "Women and children were strewn along the length of the track, many of them thrown into the ditch."

Eye-witnesses near the station said the crossing bell was ringing at the time.

First of the relatives of victims to reach the hospital in Hamilton was truck driver Irving Bell, who collapsed after identifying his 15-year-old daughter Jacqueline. The Girl's mother died some time ago. Jacqueline lived with her grandparents in Hamilton and had arranged to spend the evening with her father and aunt, who were waiting at the station to meet her.

Allied Chiefs Tell Italians To Strike Hard

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP) — The Allies pledged today to oust Germans from Italian soil and by directing that promise to Marshal Pietro Badoglio and the Italian people immediately raised the question of what was to happen to the ancient House of Savoy.

Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in a jointly-drawn statement urged every Italian "to strike his blow" now and demonstrate that, rid of Mussolini and Fascism, he desires next to be rid of Hitler and Nazis.

They addressed the message to Badoglio, who succeeded Mussolini, and the people, utterly ignoring King Victor Emmanuel, head of Italy's ruling dynasty.

Whether it could be concluded that the United Nations intend to deal only with Badoglio, on the day of Italy's liberation, was pure conjecture, however.

The message was more than a mere statement—it was beamed by short wave directly to the Italian mainland where the British-American forces are at grips with the Germans.

Said Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt to Badoglio and the Italian people:—

"It has fallen to you in the hour of your country's agony to take the first decisive steps to win peace and freedom for the Italian people and to win back for Italy on honorable place in the civilization of Europe.

"You have already freed your country from Fascist servitude. There remains the even more important task of clearing the Italian soil from the German invaders.

"We have very strong forces and are entering at many points," the statement added. "The German terror in Italy will not last long. They will be extirpated. Take every chance you can. Strike hard and strike home. March forward with your British and American friends."

British Officer Freed In Italy

LONDON, Sept. 11 (CP).—Maj. Gen. Adrian Carton de Wiart, veteran British officer captured by the Italians in North Africa in 1941, has arrived in London, it was announced todav.

Details of his release were not given immediately.

He is the most important British personage whose freedom was disclosed since the surrender of Italy.

Holder of the Victoria Cross and probably the most wounded man in the British Army, Gen. De Wiart was taken prisoner when he swam ashore after his plane made a forced landing off Cyrenaica during a flight to the Middle East.

He lost his left eye and left hand in the First Great War and was wounded eight times in other engagements of that conflict and twice in the South African war. He took part in the Norwegian campaign in 1940.

Church Needs To Face Issues

TORONTO, Sept. 11—(CP).—The Church must "put first things first in facing up to the common challenge," the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada was told last night by Most Rev. L. R. Sherman, Archbishop of Rupert's Land, in a stirring call to advance in all departments.

The Archbishop said the human equation should not be forgotten in the immensity of the problems before the church. And he declared: "If we want this Synod to go down as one of great importance—and not one of impotence—the time to act is now. The Church of England in Canada knows for what she stands, and stands for what she knows."

He presented a report of a committee of the executive council to give a lead to the deliberations of the General Synod. The statement said the things the Church stands for in the life of men and nations must claim priority, and the only world worth building is a Christian world.

Maskinonge Weighing 34 PoundsIs Caught Off Hiawatha

Chief of Police Elmer E. Clark, Canton, Ohio, hit the fisherman's jackpot this week, when he tangled with a 34 pound Maskinonge in Rice Lake, off Hiawatha and battled the huge fish to a finish with the aid of his buddy, W. B. Burris, also of Canton.

The fishermen were out in a boat with Bert Adams of Hiawatha as guide and had been casting for some time when the monster tied into Clark's plug bait. The Chief was using a 24 pound test line, and the big muskie unlike most of the whoppers stayed on top instead of heading for the depths and sulking, and consequently the fight was visible to all in the boat. He made several runs, and at one time when Clark got him close to the boat, and he saw the people for the first time, he sailed away with a swish, and the reel fairly sang. Clark burned both his thumbs and when his arms tired he handed the rod to Burris who played the big fellow for quite some time before he brought it up to the boat again.

Adams, the guide made no mistake when he sunk the gaff into the muskie, having first administered a knockout blow with a headache stick, that would have "felled a horse" in the words of the Americans.

When measured the muskie was 54 inches long, and 22½ inches in girth, and practically the same width for his entire length. Spectators who saw the fish in the city later, all estimated its weight ten pounds heavier than the fish actually weighed.

Tom Bannon, another Canton resident was the other member of the party, and he had little to say for up to that time he was undisputed champion with a 20 pounder.

This is the largest fish caught in the Kawarthas for at least five years, the only larger one, within memory bring a 38 pounder caught two years ago by an Ohio doctor in the Trent River below Healey Falls.

Clark, who is a regular visitor to the Kawarthas had the fish frozen and took it back to Canton with him.

Germans Retake Spitsbergen

LONDON, Sept. 11 (CP). — The loss of Spitsbergen, the lonely Arctic island base north of Norway, to a German landing force, was indicated in a communique issued by the Norwegian high command in London tonight.

The communique said full details of the attack, disclosed last night in a German radio announcement, were not available but implied that the small garrison had been overwhelmed by forces which included capital ships.

The German radio earlier said German naval units and marines attacked Spitsbergen on Wednesday, capturing prisoners, destroying munitions and fuel supplies, and wrecking radio and meteorological installations.

Two years ago the island was raided by a brigade of the Canadian 1st Division which removed 1,000 Norwegian miners and destroyed German installations.

However, it was never disclosed whether an occupational force remained.

Russian Guns Menace Bryansk City

Major Advances Reported Along Entire Front

LONDON, Sept. 13 —(CP)—Bryansk, big German base and key to the Nazi defence position on the central front, was menaced by Russian heavy artillery today as Red Army troops drove to within 12 miles of the city from the east.

A Soviet communique, broadcast from Moscow, disclosed that Russian troops were at Belye Berega after a four-mile drive which resulted in the capture of 40 villages in bitter fighting.

Elsewhere the Russians were meeting with success in their campaign to push the Nazis to the Dnieper or beyond before winter, gaining up to 18½ miles and wresting 240 towns from German control in heavy fighting which resulted in the death of 3,700 German troops and the destruction or capture of 67 tanks, 210 trucks and 62 guns of various calibre, the Soviet war bulletin said.

The stab at Bryansk threatened to unsettle the entire northern end of the 600-mile active Russian front. Other Red Army columns cut the Bryansk-Vyazma Railroad at Bitosh, 40 miles north of Bryansk, leaving only the railroads through Roslavl and Gomel as possible avenues of escape for the Nazis. Roslavl, 80 miles northwest, already was menaced by another Russian column.

Other Russian troops were advancing along the Kiev-Konotop Railway toward Kiev, capital of the rich Ukraine, and were closing in on Nezhin, large railroad junction town only 72 miles northeast of Kiev.

Broken German divisions were reported still in full retreat out of the Donets basin, and in fighting along that front the Russians gained 18½ Miles, capturing 50 villages including the district centre of Stary-Kermenchik, 50 miles southwest of Stalino.

On the Sea of Azov the Russians had swept 15 miles beyond the port of Mariupol and were heading toward Melitopol, 85 miles to the west.

Bombers Raid Kurile Islands

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—(AP)—The Japanese Domei Agency said in a broadcast today 18 American bombers attacked Japanese installations in the northern Kurile Islands yesterday. The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

The Kuriles stretch northward from Japan and include the principal north Pacific naval base at Paramushiro.

Domei admitted two Japanese transports were set afire but claimed damage to land installations was "extremely light," and Japanese losses consisted of one plane.

A subsequent Domei English-language broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission claimed eight and probably nine American planes were shot down in the attack which the dispatch said occurred early yesterday morning.

The Japanese indicated 12 of the U.S. planes were medium bombers.

NAVAL UNITS SCUTTLED

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(AP).—Violent fighting is taking place between Italians and Germans in the Albanian port of Durazzo, across the Adriatic from Brindisi, and all Italian naval units in the vicinity have been scuttled, a BBC broadcast said to-day.

First Word Peterboro Prisoners Received

RALPH ALLEY

WALTER J. SPENCELY

Two Peterborough men who have been missing since the capitulation of Hong Kong in 1941 have gotten letters through to their families which were written more than a year ago. Walter Spencely is the son of Al Spencely, 103 Auburn Street, and Ralph Alley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Alley, Trent River, and both said they were well.

Soldiers Missing 2 Years Send Word From Jap Prison

Fifteen months ago, two Peterborough soldiers, veterans of Hong Kong, now in a Japanese prison camp, wrote to loved ones at home, saying they were well, but they never knew that almost a year and a half would elapse before the reassuring news of their safety would reach Peterborough.

On Christmas in 1941 Hong Kong fell to an overwhelmingly superior Japanese force, and the two Peterborough families had no word since that time, on whether the two men were dead or alive. The letters arriving this week indicate they were well a year ago last June, and should be still in good health as prison condition are reported improving.

Letter Cheerful.

Mr. Al Spencely, 103 Auburn street, received a letter from his son, Walter, a former Capitol Theatre employee, who was serving with the Quebec Rifles. The letter bearing a Japanese postmark and dated June 11, 1942, was cheerful in tone and read as follows:

"I expect you will be surprised to hear from me and I want you to know that I am fine and hope that everyone and everything is O. K. at home. We are having a good time and manage to get in a lot of volleyball and baseball.

"Tell Lois BcBride and family that you have heard from me and keep your chin up. I hope to be home soon."

For the first time since their son Ralph was captured at Hong Kong, Mr. and Mrs. George Alley of Trent River, have received word telling them that he is still alive. His letter was dated June 5, 1942, and the brief message follows:

"No doubt you will be surprised to hear from me after such a long time. I am enjoying life as much as possible under the circumstances when you consider where I am. One that that bothers me is the heat.

"We are treated the very best and we have lots of games to occupy us, so we are well off. Keep your chin up and best wishes for everyone around home."

Ralph Alley enlisted with the Midlands, but transferred to the Quebec Rifles when he was 18 and he has two brothers, Clarence and Carman, serving overseas.

A happy-go-lucky youngster, he was the Peterborough Examiner carrier boy at Trent River for quite some time and his family is well-known in the district.

The Japanese Government reported that 1,985 prisoners had been taken but no complete list of names has been issued. Many families have received no word on the fate of relatives in the Hong Kong fight. From time to time, casualty lists have been reported, but these applied to men killed and wounded. There was no mention made of unwounded prisoners.

Casualty List Totals 2,387

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—(CP).—The Defence Department to-day announced the total number of casualties in the Canadian (Active) Army in the Sicilian campaign to Sept. 10 was 2,387. Officers in the list numbered 171 and other ranks 2,216.

In detail the list showed 38 officers killed and died of wounds, 123 wounded and 10 missing or prisoners of war. In other ranks 438 were killed or died of wounds, 1,641 were wounded and 137 missing or prisoners of war.

The Department's announcement said the figures were based on individual reports received from overseas by the Records Office at National Defence Headquarters and were "subject to checking and correction."

The 23rd Sicily casualty list issued on Saturday brought to 2,262 the number of Sicily casualties officially reported to date.

Ralston Says 2 Divisions Will Disband

Units To Be Used To Reinforce Overseas Army

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 13 (CP)—Reduction of Canada's home defence operational military force by some 20,000 men was announced by Defence Minister Ralston today in a move which involves disbanding the 7th and 8th Divisions and partial disbandment of the 6th Division.

The step is one of a number taken or contemplated in the light of an improved strategic situation, a pressing manpower shortage in Canada and the fact that the army has "passed the expansion stage."

In a rough estimate of the military forces in Canada given the House of Commons by Defence Minister Ralston last June the 250,000 men were divided into three equal parts, 80,000 in the operational units, including the three divisions affected by today's announcement, 80,000 in the training stream and 80,000 in the home war establishment, engaged on staff work at headquarters and training centres and in servicing establishment.

Reduced to 60,000

Today's announcement, when carried into effect, will bring the home operational force down to something like 60,000.

Recently a number of training centres were closed in consequence of a reduction in the number of men in the training stream due to the army having passed the expansion stage and the fact that from now on training will be for reinforcement of existing units, not for manning new units.

The two developments together will permit of a reduction of the 80,000 odd men in the home war establishment as fewer men will be required in staff and servicing functions.

In place of the three divisions new formations with a smaller establishment will be created. They will be three complete brigade groups each capable of operating independently but administered and trained under a modified divisional headquarters.

Need Recruits

The minister said the need for enlistment in the army continues. The present fiscal year's program called for 100,000 new men, 75,000 for overseas, an intake rate of 8,500 per month. In the five months so far elapsed the average enlistment was about 5,000 a month and about 2,700 a month came in on call-up. Hence general service men had to be drawn from the home establishments to keep up the flow of overseas movements.

Men in the disbanded formations who are fit for overseas service will be used as reinforcements. Those unfit will replace others who are fit in other establishments in Canada or be returned to civilian life by discharge in order to aid in relieving the civilian manpower shortage.

The 7th and 8th Divisions were authorized in March, 1942, and were designed to serve as a "mobile reserve" for defence of both coasts when threats against both were real.

Bitter Bloody Battle Rages Around Nazi-held Naples

Two Destroyers Move Out Of Balearic Port

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

VALETTA MALTA, Sept. 12 —(Delayed)—(CP Cable) — Another force of Italian warships including the 23,000-ton battleship Giulio Cesare the 5,000-ton seaplane carrier Giuseppe Miraglia, four destroyers and a number of submarines have joined the 32 units of the Italian fleet that sailed into this placid harbor Friday and Saturday to surrender to the Royal Navy in keeping with the terms of Italy's capitulation.

The ships took varied routes to reach this haven from vindictive German bombs. Of the original 22 to arrive, one force scurried from La Spezia and ran the gauntlet of German air attack on the way. (During this engagement the battleship Roma was bombed and sunk off the coast of Corsica.)

The arrivals brought to at least 38 the known number of Italian warships in Allies hands, and naval authorities waited for word of other arrivals from a score of Mediterranean bases.

Six of Italy's seven battleships now have been accounted for. Five are in Allied hands, the Roma was sunk by German planes, and only the 35,000-ton Impero remains unreported.

The 35,000-ton battleships Italia and Vittorio Venetto and the smaller 24,000-ton Andrea Doria and Dulio, as well as six cruisers, eight destroyers and 14 submarines arrived here late last week.

(A dispatch from Madrid said an Italian cruiser and four other warships, destroyers and gunboats, had been interned at Port Mahon in the Balearics for overstaying the 24-hour leave as provided by international law. Two other Italian destroyers, the report said, departed from Polensa, Mallorca, one of the Balearic islands, last night after landing 24 wounded.)

7 Cruisers Safe

Seven of Italy's 10 known cruisers have joined the Allies and seven Italian warships reported to have put in previously at the Balearics before heading for an Allied port may have included others.

The surrender trek started Friday when 22 trim warships of the Italian navy came steaming into this harbor, escorted by a Spitfire force from Malta. Now practically the entire sea arm of Italy rests here under the protecting guns of the island it once hoped to approach as a conqueror.

Later, as the Italian ships dropped anchor in the placid waters of the inlet, the Commander-in-Chief of the beaten fleet, a sombre, grayhaird Admiral, came ashore to turn over his command to Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, Allied Naval Commander-in-Chief. And the surrendering Admiral did not seem unhappy, but run up the steps to the parade ground and smiled as he shook hands with Commodore Roger Dicks, Admiral Cunningham's Chief-of-Staff.

His feeling appeared general throughout the fleet. Italian seamen are pleased to be out of the

Labor To Enter Politics Mosher Says

MONTREAL, Sept. 13 (CP) — President A. R. Mosher told the fourth convention of the Canadian Congress of Labor today that "the Labor movement can no longer stand aloof from political action, and unless it has a voice and influence in the political field, it will be unable to make its full and proper contribution to the public welfare."

In his presidential address, prepared for delivery at the afternoon session of the first day of the convention, Mr. Mosher said that political action is becoming increasingly necessary "not only for the sake of the immediate interests of the workers," but also "it is even more esscential in view of the necessity for planning the kind of post-war world labor demands."

Organized workers, he said, will not be satisfied with any less vigorous effort to defeat our greatest peace-time enemy, involuntary poverty, than is now being made to defeat the Nazi-Fascist gangsters in Europe and Asia.

Must Fight Poverty

"But just as the war has called forth the greatest industrial and military effort in our history, the fight against poverty and all its train of evils will require the same spirit of co-operation, the same large-scale planning and the same determination to win through to victory."

The Congress, ne added, "will co-operate gladly with all other groups which share its convictions with regard to the possibilities of

Situation Static Germans Rush In Reserves

By NOLAND NORGAARD,

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 13 —(AP)—A bitter and bloody battle raged into its fifth consecutive day around the Allied 5th Army's Salerno bridgehead today with growing German forces resisting desperately the determined penetration into their hill positions girding the plain and protecting the port of Naples.

The Anglo-Canadian 8th Army, speeding steadily northward from the Italian toe against little or no enemy opposition, captured the port of Crotone, 110 miles from the southern tip of the peninsula, and found that habor in good condition for Allied use, a communique announced.

The British Force landed at Taranto—the Eastern left of the Allied invasion which had been thrown across the saddle of the Appenines—swiftly extended its hold on the entrance to the Adriatic after the capture of Brindisi. While reinforcements poured ashore to strengthen this right wing of the Allied assault, small German forces left in the vicinity were being pushed back rapidly.

Take Altamura.

(The B. B. C. broadcast that British troops had captured Altamura, 22 miles West of Bari. Bari is approximately 50 miles north of Taranto and an important port on the Adriatic. It is 65 miles up the coast from Brindisi. The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.)

Previously elements of the German 1st Parachute Division had been encountered in the push up the Adriatic shore, but whether these were the forces remaining to oppose the advance was not stated.

The main bodies of enemy troops in southern Italy were still converging toward the big Naples-Salerno battle, however, and it was there that the crucial action was being fought.

"Very heavy fighting continues in the area of the 5th Army at Salerno," said the communique. "The Germans are resisting desperately our determined thrusts to break through their positions."

(Also indicating fierce fighting in the Salerno area, the German communique claimed Nazi troops in the northern part of the battle area threw back Allied forces "to the town and coastal strip"—presumably Salerno.

Heavy Air Support

(It was conceded, however, that the Allied forces southeast of Salerno were making strong thrusts "to break through mountain positions east of the coastal plain.")

Enemy troop movements on the highways toward Salerno were heavily attacked all day yesterday by Allied dive-bombers and strafers

Fleet Units Shifted To Far East

Commando Troops From Britain To Attack Burma

By ERNEST AGNEW
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 13—(AP)—Great Britain was reported today to be transferring many of her heavier naval units to the far eastern fleet under Admiral Sir James Somerville for the opening of an Allied pay-off drive against the Japanese in southeast Asia this fall.

Lord Louis Mountbatten's new southeast Asia command forces probably will be strengthened, too, with the transfer of some thousands of Commandos from Britain—perhaps for operations against such outlying points as the Andaman Islands, which the Japanese have been using as a submarine and seaplane base, and against the Nicobar group in the Bay of Bengal.

It is anticipated here that the coming offensive will be on a far greater scale than anything attempted thus far in southeast Asia and will get under way some time in October when the Monsoon season ends.

In addition to early operations against outlying islands now in Japanese hands it is believed generally in London that recapture of the Burma Road is one of the immediate goals of the Allies, not only in order to speed supplies to China but also for political reasons.

Both Britain and the United States are expected to increase air power in that theater. The Arakan campaign which British troops undertook last December demonstrated that the key to the reconquest of Burma is naval and air power.

Three reasons are assigned here for the failure of British Empire forces to expel before now the five divisions which it is estimated the Japanese are employing to hold Burma.

Now the troops in Lord Louis' new command apparently are high on the priority list for supplies and moreover recent operations have given them experience in jungle warfare. Next time the story should be different.

Sank Ark Royal Now Prisoner

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13— (AP)—The United States Navy announced to-day that the skipper of the German U-boat which sank the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal had been captured by a United States plane which bombed and sank the enemy undersea boat off the coast of Brazil.

Lieut. Friedrich Guggenberger, who was decorated by Germany for the sinking of the British carrier, in 1941, was one of seven survivors picked up after a duel between the American Navy plane and the U-boat in which bombs finally shattered the submarine.

Guggenberger was commander of one of the two U-boats which the Germans credited for the Ark Royal sinking.

The Navy plane was flying anti-submarine patrol off the Brazilian coast when its crew sighted the submarine. Only minutes later the U-boat sighted the plane. Anti-aircraft fire came from the after deck gun as the submarine turned and increased its speed.

Axis Partner's Collapse Hurts Hitler

Humane Treatment Of Italians By Allies Has Effect

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Hitler's screams of rage at Italy's "treachery," and his feverish efforts to offset the debacle with bewildering barrage of propaganda and such theatricals as the establishment of a puppet government in Rome, show clearly that the moral effect of his Axis partner's collapse is like a knife between the ribs.

Frequently it's difficult to separate the moral and military effects at a confused moment like this, because military adversity follows the moral shock so quickly. However, it strikes me that in the long run the moral aspect of this historic surrender is going to be the biggest Allied gain.

Recognition of this drove the Feurher to the microphone Saturday to try to prevent a stampede at home and abroad by double talk. That speech was underscored with fear. This fear he deliberately handed on to his people in an effort to hold them in line.

At least twice the master gangster trotted out the old bugbear of Allied intention to destroy Germany and other Axis countries — one of Propaganda Joseph Goebbel's favorite lines.

Why did Hitler return to this idea so insisently? Undoubtedly because the humanitarian though firm manner in which the Allies have been handling the Italian situation makes him fear that the German people, and other Axis peoples, will realize that unconditional surrender doesn't mean that they are to be destroyed.

The whole world has been watching to see what would happen to a defeated member of the Axis. Now the world knows that while Italy must pay the full and heavy price for Mussolini's brigandage, she isn't going to be "annihilated" or "enslaved." On the contrary, the world sees that the Allies are preparing to lend the Italians a helping hand in the way of providing food and other essentials.

I believe that's going to have a tremendous effect on the German people and on other enemy countries.

Meanwhile, at advance Allied Headquarters Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said "a bitter battle" was in prospect in driving the Germans out of Italy. His statement, made Saturday, was reported in a delayed dispatch from Clark Lee, representing the combined United States press.

"Developments of the past few weeks have placed the United Natons in a more favorable position from which to begin the bitter battle for Italy," he said, in reference to the armistice, the surrender of the Italian fleet and Allied landings in Italy. However, he said, the battle is progressing about as expected.

Huns Brag Of Master Stroke

Il Duce's Rescue Hailed As Important Victory

By JOHN CHESTER
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 13.—(AP).—The German radio chortled to-day over the Nazi-reported rescue of former Premier Benito Mussolini and some of his henchmen.

Twelve hours after his "release" by German parachute troops and Elite Guards was announced by Berlin, German broadcasts began a full-blast exploitation of the incident, hailing it as a master stroke and "an audacious venture."

A DNB broadcast said "competent circles in Berlin state that other Fascist leaders were freed with Mussolini."

(The United States Office of War Information noted that while the Nazis were boasting about Mussolini's "capture," they hadn't seen fit to have him broadcast, and weren't even quoting him to-day.

The Netherlands radio said that Vittorio Mussolini, eldest son of the deposed Duce, had arrived in Germany, but it did not indicate whether he was one of those whom the Germans claim to have freed.

Some officials here said that if Mussolini did set up a puppet Fascist state Italian people, thoroughly sick of war and Fascism, would pay little attention to it.

Italians Battle For Islands

Isolated Fighting Gives Nazis Control

ANKARA, Sept. 13—(AP). — Reports from Turkish towns on the Aegean coast today said German-Italian friction had grown into general fighting throughout the Dodecanese as the Nazis tried desperately to win control of the islands.

Apparently the fighting was flaring separately on each of the islands, where a mixed Italian-German garrison is stationed, without any general campaign on the part of the contestants.

A report said the Italians on one small island were bewailing the fact that Allied forces had not arrived to take over. They were said to be complaining about the possibility of having to submit to the Germans.

Advices reaching Istanbul said German and Italian troops on Rhodes and in the Greek capital of Athens fought bitterly for three days after the Italian surrender. An informed neutral source said the Italians on Rhodes gave in Saturday.

(Berlin claimed Saturday German forces had won control there.)

A reported evacuation of German civilians from the island of Samos, off the west coast of Turkey before the Dodecanese, indicated, however, the Italians were having some successes in warding off the Germans.

Italian troops there are believed to outnumber the Axis at least three to one.

GERMANS RESIST DESPERATELY AS 5th ARMY DRIVES FORWARD

British Army Captures Crotone Port

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 13 —(AP) —An Allied Communique reported to-day that "very heavy fighting" is in progress in the Salerno battleground of Italy, with the Germans resisting "desperately" all attempts of the British-American 5th Army to break through.

(At the same time, the United Nations radio at Algiers reported in a broadcast heard in London that the British-Canadian 8th Army has captured the Port of Crotone on the east coast of the Calabrian Peninsula.)

The communique reported British Forces continuing to enlarge their bridgehead north of Taranto on the heel, with reinforcements pouring in. Strong German Forces were pushed back in that area, it was nounced.

The Allied war bulletin said the British and Canadian 8th Army on the Calabrian toe "continued its rapid advance" against "little or no enemy resistance," although extensive demolitions are causing some delay.

Blast Concentrations.

An Air Communique said that Allied aircraft continued night and day attacks on enemy concentrations streaming north out of the southern sections of Italy, presumably headed for the main battleground in the Salerno-Naples district. At Salerno, fighters also intercepted enemy aircraft and shot down four, the announcement said. Four more were knocked down elsewhere. Two Allied planes are missing.

Heavy bombers again attacked the German-occupied airfield at Frosinone, southeast of Rome.

Troops from the divisions affected by the announcement recently cooperated with U.S. forces in occupying Kiska Island.

15 Infantry Units.

Although divisions are being disbanded it does not necessarily mean that all units will be disbanded, Col. Ralston said. The disbandment will affect 15 infantry units, including six lately disbanded; three artillery units; four engineer units and three medical units.

In his announcement Col. Ralston said:

All personnel not of an age, rank or medical category suitable for operational duties and who are not required for less active posts in Canada will be discharged to resume civilian occupations and thus improve the manpower situation for essential civilian activities."

The re-organization will reduce the establishment for operational troops in North America by about 20,000, many of them being re-allocated according to the needs of the service.

The Minister said it was not possible to estimate how many would be released to civilian life but the number would be "substantial."

Japanese Garrison At Lae Doomed By Allied Blockade

By C. YATES McDANIEL, Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific, Sept. 13 — (AP).—The Japanese garrison at Salamaua today made desperate attempts to keep open a trail to Lae, its only channel of escape, so tight was the Allied surface and aircraft blockade along northeastern New Guinea's coastal barge route.

Australian pioneers who swam the flooded Francisco River Saturday overran prized Salamaua airdrome two miles from the city without encountering resistance.

In a drive around the outskirts of Salamaua, Australians saw no Japanese except the fallen, abandoned amid the ruins of a stronghold virtually obliterated by bombs since the first Allied air attack on April 1, 1942.

Strategy Effective.

Even if the survivors of Salamaua garrison succeeded in reaching Lae, their fat was sealed. For Japanese failure to offer serious resistance to the Australian landing on the Huon Gulf, September 4, and the apparent inability of the enemy to smash an Allied bridgehead on the Lae side of the Busu River seemed a clear demonstration of the decisive success of the Allied command's strategy.

That strategy was to weaken Lae garrison to a point where it could not hope to fight its way free of an Allied trap, set by the Australian-American drive to Salamaua, and sprung by the sea-borne landings north and air-borne landings west of Lae.

After seizing the airfield, the Australians drove north and east toward Salamaua, two miles away, and made a fresh contact with the enemy along a jutting ridge 1½ miles north of the airdrome.

At the same time seaborne Allied troops from the east and airborne forces from the northwest closed their lines to within eight miles of Lae, 18 miles above Salamaua and, except for the tottering base, the only remaining Japanese position of consequence anywhere along the 175-mile rim of Huon Gulf. Both fighting units encountered opposition.

In the Solomon Islands and in the waters around New Guinea and New Britain. big reconnaissance bombers attacked a total of eight enemy freighters, and set afire or otherwise damaged at least five, perhaps more. Other planes and Allied torpedo boats sank a Japanese coastal vessel, destroyed 12 barges, damaged four others and sank or damaged four more.

The importance the Nazi command attached to preventing a further enlargement of Gen. Clark's foothold immediately south of Naples also was shown by the continued presence over the battle area of large numbers of enemy bombers and fighters, both day and night.

German broadcasts heard here said Mussolini had been "rescued" by German parachutists but where and from whom and for what purpose remained obscure.

This Is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

Col. Drew's eleventh hour decision to delay the opening of the three upper grades of Ontario High Schools for two weeks in order that the students might help on the farms in the harvesting of fruit and other crops came too late to create anything but confusion and an unsought, though possibly welcome holiday, for many of the students involved.

Many girls and boys, believing school was to open as usual, gave notice to their employers and returned from their farm jobs and their farmerette camps and prepared to return to their primary businesses, that of acquiring an education. Almost as soon as they had returned home, they were greeted with the news that school, for them, would not open for a fortnight, and that they were expected to return to their jobs.

Many had worked on farms and in camps at a considerable distance from their homes and were naturally unwilling to pack up, bag and baggage, and return to them for a mere fortnight. Parents too, were unwilling to pay the cost of travelling such a distance when, to them it did not seem necessary. And it should not be necessary. If the situation is as desperate as Mr. Drew's action implies, then surely sufficient help can be recruited from cities in the immediate vicinity to tide over the emergency.

But, apparently, farm help is not required in the vicinity of Peterborough. In fact, many farmers have already left, and others are planning to go, and help harvest the grain crops in the west. There would seem, then, to be no good reason why the Upper Forms of PCVS could not have opened on Tuesday as previously scheduled. The suggestion that the students of PCVS, armoured with two extra weeks of teaching might carry off too many scholarships next June, is rather ludicrous, besides being a delicate compliment to the prize-winning proclivities of Peterborough students. Two weeks schooling, lost or won makes scant difference to the kind of students who win scholarships.

The matter of opening High schools now, or later, ought to have been left to the discretion of local school boards, who should be the best judges of the needs of the community. The harvesting of crops is important, but it is not more important than the education of the current generation of High school students, in whose hands will rest the security of the peace and the victory we hope to win.

Strikes Justified.

"It should be clearly understood by the public,' he said, "that where strikes have occurred there has been extreme provocation on the part of the employers and Governments alike.... Workers do not go on strike without giving very serious consideration to such a step, since it means an immediate loss of income, but so long as only such a drastic method will remedy intolerable conditions, the workers are bound to feel justified in using it ...."

"Preoccupation with questions of wages and working conditions in individual plants or industries alone is no longer justifiable; along with that essential service to their membership, the Labor Unions must widen their sphere of activity to include education in economic and political subjects, and participation in the making of national policies affecting every aspect of Canadian affairs."

Legal Precedent

MONTREAL, Sept. 13 — (CP).—Court officials said Quebec judicial history was made in Superior Court here yesterday when it was ruled that the Canadian Parliament had not legal right to legislate on costs to be charged to litigants in criminal court cases.

Mr. Justice O. S. Tyndale found that an article in the Criminal Code, fixing the costs to be paid in the criminal courts, was unconstitutional and ultra vires the Dominion of Canada. His Lordship then ruled that the tariff of costs fixed by the Quebec Legislature should apply.

The cases involved damages over destruction of some trees and the subsequent litigation involving court costs.

began its run for the release of bombs. Through heavy fire, the plane came in over its target and released its bombs from an altitude of only 50 feet.

"The drop completely straddled the sub, two of the bombs striking the U-boat's deck, the others landing close aboard on the port and starboard sides," the Navy reported.

"The U-boat was blasted out of the water. Then boiling water and intermingled brown stains were all that could be seen. Returning to the spot about a minute after the attack, however, the Navy fliers saw spreading oil, various brown discolorations and 15 to 20 survivors in the water."

A life raft was dropped in the midst of the German survivors and the plane hovered over the scene until relieved two hours later by another plane which in turn stood by until the seven survivors were picked up by a United States seaplane tender. The Navy did not explain what had happened to the other survivors seen in the water at the time the life raft was dropped.

Hearst Paper Raps Churchill Talk

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—(CP). — William Randolph Heart's New York Journal-American made a bitter attack yesterday against Prime Minister Churchill, declaring that "he adopts the manner of an indulgent but superior parent addressing a somewhat recalcitrant and irresponsible child" in his speech at Harvard University on Monday.

Referring to the Prime Minister's assertion that the price of a country's greatness is responsibility and his hope that Britain and the United States would continue their military co-operation after the war the Journal-American said:

"In the history of all wars, no more untimely and dangerous speech has ever been made on our soil than that delivered by Prime Minister Winston Churchill in his Harvard address.

"It is untimely because the present critical phase in the war both on the European and Pacific fronts is not the moment to flout in the faces of the world post-war proposals of a selfish, insolent and essentially Cockney character.

"It was a dangerous address because it may bring the charge against Mr. Churchill that he is conducting pro-British propaganda on our soil (the Journal-American used capital letters in spelling "on our soil"), which, indeed, he is doing, and very openly."

The editorial declared Mr. Churchill "unquestionably and frankly"' has the attitude of mind "that the English-speaking world is strictly and securely and unchangeably England's world."

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 13 — (CP). — Wheat futures continued to advance on Saturday in trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. At the close values were ¾c to 1¼c a bushel higher, with October at $1.12½.

New seasonal highs were established during the session in the October and December futures. The former touched $1.12⅞ and the latter $1.12¼.

Price upturns were attributed to good general buying credited to export houses. Some speculative buying was in evidence in the pit along with some profit-taking.

Demand for cash wheat was mostly confined to Nos. 1 and 3 Northern, but business was only of the odd-car character. Scarcity of offerings held transactions in cash coarse grains to the minimum.

Germans Claim Mussolini Released Again

LONDON, Sept. 13 (CP)—Mussolini emerged from involuntary obscurity today as the Germans announced they had rescued him from 49 days of captivity and it appeared likely the Nazis would try to set up the erstwhile Duce as the leader of a puppet Fascist regime in Northern Italy.

A communique broadcast from Berlin declared that Mussolini. under detention by Marshal Badoglio's government since he was ousted as Premier on July 25, had been freed in a daring raid by German parchutists, security service agents and armed members of the SS.

The broadcast gave no indication of where Mussolini had been found or where he now was.

Berne dispatch in a Chiasso dispatch reported without confirmation that Mussolini had been "liberated" by German parachutists from his detention place near Palermo, in Allied-held Sicily.)

However in London the Foreign Office indirectly denied this report by saying that at no time had Mussolini ever been in Anglo-American hands. The Foreign Office said it had no information whatever on the whereabouts of Mussolini.

A broadcast by the German-controlled Netherlands radio heard today by The Associated Press said that Vittorio Mussolini, eldest son of the former Duce, had arrived in Germany.

Unofficially the German claim apparently was accepted here, for the BBC, in a radio news bulletin to the Italian people, said that Mussolini had been released by the Germans and added that Premier Badoglio and King Victor Emmanuel "are safe at an undisclosed place on Italian soil."

There was no official confirmation of either statement, however, from any Allied source.

Takes Reins Again

Mussolini's whereabouts have been more or less of a mystery since his sudden fall, but it is believed in London that he has been held a prisoner in the Pontine Islands off the west coast of Italy.

There seemed little doubt, how-

WISE INVESTORS PREFER STOCKS TO CASH

It is beginning to dawn on many investors, that hoarded capital and unproductive bank accounts are pretty poor aids in meeting increased taxes and the high cost of living. Particularly now, when it is possible to buy many sound common stocks, at bargain prices, which possess substantial market appreciation possibilities.

Nevertheless, this is no time to just buy stocks blindly. Most investors are in possession of such meagre information on security values, that it is purely a matter of luck if they happen to make any profits at all. Not only is it important to know what to BUY but that which is more important is to know when to HOLD or SELL.

PREDICTING THE TREND

In March of this year we went on record that a Bull market of major proportions was in the making, and we further predict that this powerful Bull market should carry through to the year end. Right now American buying of Canadian securities is at a new peak and "good buys" are becoming increasingly scarce. This is one of the many reasons why we are continuously on the lookout for low-priced issues that have unusual profit-making possibilities.

EVEN NOW WE ARE INVESTIGATING THE MERITS OF SEVERAL LOW-PRICED STOCKS, WHICH, IF THEY MEASURE UP TO OUR EXPECTATIONS, SHOULD OFFER OUTSTANDING SPECULATIVE INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES.

These recommendations will be sent to you without cost by the "special service department" of Clifford Reilly Investment Counsellor owned and operated by Clifford Reilly and Company. We feel that with a record breaking stock market in prospect we can offer you an intelligent, honest and efficient investment service, but we expect no business unless and until we can conclusively prove that you need our Investment Counsel.

CLIFFORD REILLY INVESTMENT COUNSELLOR,

Please send me the names of the stocks mentioned in your advertisement and which you believe will score substantial gains in the coming months. I understand that I am under no direct obligation.

Institute Prepares For Country Fair

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 13. — (ENS).—Seymour East Women's Institute wound up two months of inactivity last week as they met for their September meeting and made plans for an energetic program during the early fall period.

After agreement on all details had been reached the making of final arrangements was left with the executive, which will bring in a special report and recommendations following a meeting within the next seven days.

The program of the afternoon included a vocal solo by Miss Marjorie Wallace; readings by Mrs. Carmen and Miss Elsie Rannie and a contest conducted by Mrs. William Craighead.

COBOURG

Rotary History Reviewed By Governor

COBOURG, Sept. 13 —(ENS)— Harmon E. Rice, governor of Rotary District No. 168, paid his official visit to Cobourg Rotary at its regular weekly luncheon here. The club turned out in full force to hear his address and included were Roy Jex and Alex Young, original president and secretary of Cobourg Rotary Club. The District Governor was introduced by Dr. W. Wade, past president of the Club and the vote of thanks was expressed by Dr. Fred Blackwell, secretary of club.

Mr. Rice told of visiting clubs in the northern part of Ontario and Quebec. Although their memberships were small in these sections, each club was playing its part in community welfare projects, he said.

The district governor declared that he invariably found Rotarians are among the highest type of men in their community. He commended the local club for its complete set-up, which he said was among the best for a club of that size. Mr. Rice told how Rotary came into being when an Illinois boy, who went to Chicago to open a law office, but found himself alone and friendless in a big city, and gradually formed a club of business and professional men who began to meet in rotation at various homes and offices. Later they sought ways of aiding their community. They elevated the standards of their own business practices and then went after the welfare of the neighborhood. Since they rotatoed from home to home they became known as "Rotarians," Mr. Rice related. Community service is one of the great branches of Rotary and with international service.

Post War Job.

When the war was over, Rotary would face one of its greatest problems, the speaker said.

"Unless we win the peace we will not have won the war. We must make sure that ideals of Rotary are exemplified at the peace table. If we do not do this we cannot be sure of a lasting peace. The world must be guided into permanent channels of peace and for this reason Rotary must have a definite post war program. Rotary Clubs have a duty to take an active part in the formation of a rehabilitation program to take care of the soldiers when they return from war," he declared.

Motorist Runs Away Following Accident

COBOURG, Sept. 13—(ENS)—Car driven by Stanley Watt of Hamilton Township was struck by a hit-and-run motorist on Saturday night near Cambourne. Mr. Watt was proceeding south towards Camborne when a northbound car sideswiped him and continued on its way. Fender, running board and wheel were badly damaged on the Watt car. The hit-and-run driver was seen to swing up a sideroad and police have information which they expect to lead to his arrest. The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable David Adair of Cobourg and Provincial Constable Douglas Wilson of Colborne.

Hit-and-Run Victim Remains Unconscious

COBOURG, Sept. 13—(ENS)—No improvement has been shown in the condition of 55-year-old Sid Aldridge of Grafton who was struck by a hit-and-run driver last Friday night near Grafton. He was found lying partly on the highway by David Weir, Toronto truck driver, who reported it to Provincial Constable Douglas Wilson of Colborne. He was taken to Cobourg General Hospital and was still unconcious yesterday.

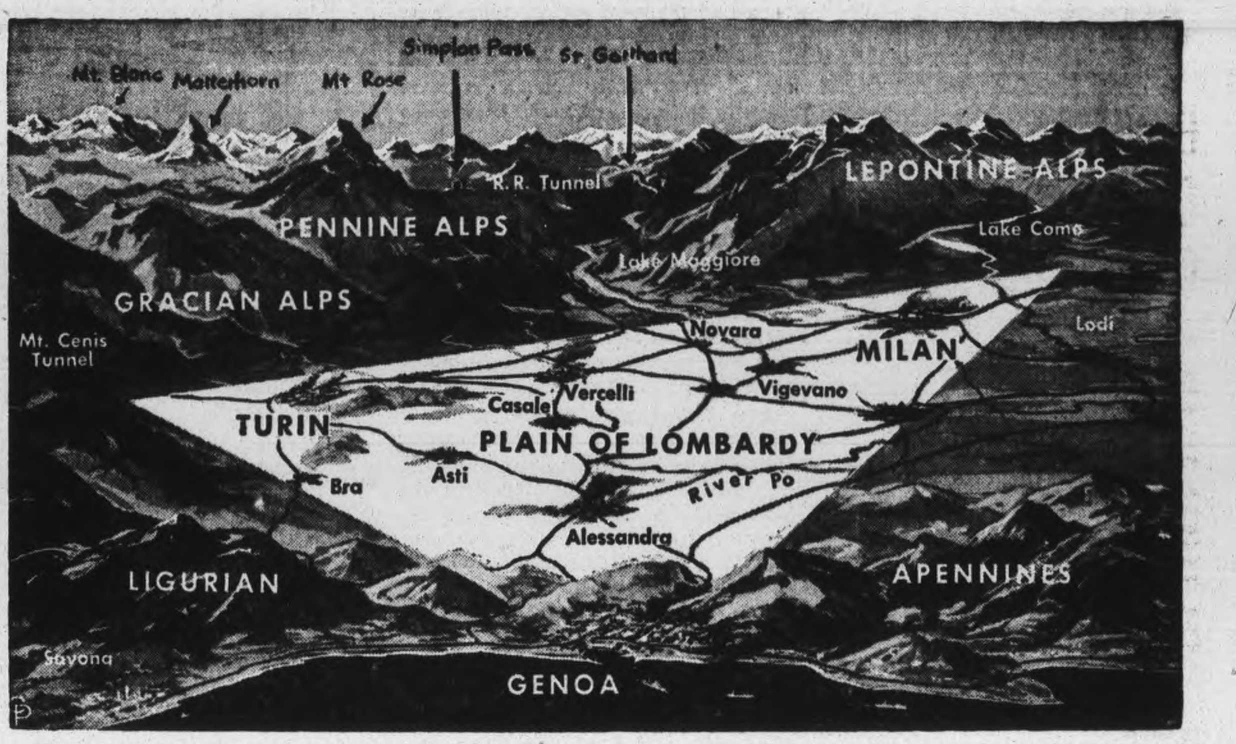
Strike Not Settled

MONTREAL, Sept. 13 — (CP).— Strike of longshoremen in Quebec and Ontario continued on Sunday while union officials announced that the National War Labor Board had fixed Wednesday to hear the case of more than 1,800 men who are asking wage increases. The longshoremen left their jobs last Friday in protest against what they said was failure of the Board to rule on their case.

Escaped

Stanley Nesbitt just missed the bus by a few minutes when it passed his home, and that is why he is alive today. The bus owned by Canada Coach Lines, crashed into a C.N.R. train near Aldershot, Ont., and 12 persons were killed and two injured.

Nazis Expected To Defend Industrial Po Valley



The cessation of hostilities between the Allies and the Italians brings attention to the vital industrial Po valley, where the still-fighting Germans have built defences. This drawing, by the English artist E. G. Lambert, shows the Po valley and its great industrial triangle which the German army may elect to defend because, in the hands of the Allies, it would provide bases for bomber operations.

Synod Claims 900,000 Miss Church

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—Some 900,000 persons who are registered in the census as Anglicans take no active part in the work of the church, and do not appear on parish rolls, it was revealed at Saturday's meeting of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, held at Trinity College.

The report of the committee on statistics, presented by Archbishop W. R. Adams of Kootenay to the third session of the eight-day conference, was greeted with expressions of concern by members. "The figures indicate that we are slipping," said R. H. Soward, Toronto lay delegate.

The recent Canadian census showed a total of 1,751,188 Anglicans in the Dominion, but parish rolls recorded only 835,753, leaving 915,753 "missing Anglicans," Archbishop Adams said. "However, in many parishes absentees on war service have not been included in the roll, so the difference is not as great as the figures show," he added. Ten years earlier, some 800,000 Anglicans were not listed on parish rolls.

A little less than half of all Anglicans in Canada are in Ontario, and the committee urged that "every Ontario congregation ought to be twice as large as it is." The report suggested that "an important element in the contribution our church should make to national postwar reconstructed life will be recovery of these indifferent or lapsed members of the family."

Archbishop Adams added that there were 110,000 fewer children under the age of 10 listed in 1941, as compared with 1931, and that this fact invited serious thought.

Marriages had nearly doubled in 1942, as compared with the five-year average for 1932-36, the report showed. Baptisms had increased by 3,000, but confirmations had declined by 2,000.

The committee emphasized Sunday school figures. With 300 fewer schools and nearly 6,000 fewer teachers, in 1942 there were 192,721 pupils enrolled, as against 245,483, the average for the five-year period.

Canon W. H. Davison, Montreal, asserted that back of the report lay the reason for many of the church's problems. The report was sent to the synod's executive committee for study and action.

Porter. Mrs. Smith has been acting superintendent of nurses since July.

Grocery Display Is Planned For Fair

The amount of groceries Mrs. Canada can buy today for the price of one bag of sugar and one bag of flour in 1920, is one exhibit at the Lindsay Fair, Sept. 15, 16, 17 and 18, which will attract the attention of thrifty housewives.

Set up by a local grocer this particular grocery display is part of the Price Board's Consumer Branch exhibit at the Fair. Mrs. T. J. Begley is chairman of the Lindsay Consumer Branch committee and Mrs. E. G. Dickerson is in charge of the booth. Miss Harriet Parsons, Ontario co-ordinator, will attend.

Demonstrations and clothing remodelling exhibits directed by Kate Aitken, Conservation Supervisor, will be featured by Consumer Branch on the Fair program. Mrs. Aitken is presenting the Re-Make Revue, a show bristling with practical suggestions on how to make-over the family's wardrobe for fall and winter.

Mrs. E. Irwin, Mrs. M. Petherick, and Mrs. John Dewey were named as the program committee for the October meeting which will be held at Mrs. J. A. M. Thompson's.

I'M FINDING WAYS TO MAKE COFFEE GO FURTHER

FIRST—I've learned to buy coffee that gives me more flavor ounce for ounce ... Chase & Sanborn Coffee. It's super-rich!
And I make sure the coffee container is air-tight—that the coffee-pot is scoured clean. Of course, I measure the coffee and water accurately for exact strength—and I make not one bit more than the amount I need. And I serve coffee as soon as I can after it's made.
But my best rule, I think, is that first one: Get Chase & Sanborn Coffee. And, remember, quality coffee goes further.

Looking After The Veteran

Alex. Walker, C.B.E., President of the Canadian Legion, in his address in Peterborough last week, advocated the establishment of a Department of Veterans' Affairs, which would deal exclusively with the welfare of the ex-servicemen.

We have often wondered in the past, why this department was shifted around among any of a half dozen different ministers. It has been under the Minister of Health for some years, but the well-being of the returned man is not something that can be looked after on a part-time or divided basis in the years ahead.

After the last war, different governments never seemed able to handle this problem successfully, and if it were a task then it will be much more a pressing problem after this war. We must have a co-ordination and a centralization of authority on all matters affecting the veteran.

This will be difficult for finance and agriculture and other government departments are sure to be affected by this problem of the ex-servicemen but the co-ordination of purpose and achievement must be in close harmony with the objectives in view.

Reserve Army Needs Men

Peterborough's two units of the Reserve Army with their intensive summer training completed for the year, and their annual camps over, are now preparing for their autumn and winter activities. They are again appealing for recruits, from the ranks of those who for one reason or another are unable to sign for active service. Part-time training of an interesting and constructive character, with parades on different evenings and at times on week-ends, is offered.

At the present time, with the United Nations making progress on all the fighting fronts, there is an inclination to relax at home, just when a renewed effort is most vitally needed. The Reserve Army fills a role that cannot be neglected. Besides furnishing recruits for active service, it acts as a basic home defence force capable of useful work in any case of emergency. It is a body of men that must be kept up to strength.

Through four years of war the 4th Battery and the Prince of Wales Rangers have faced difficult problems, and days of discouragement. While they have their active regiments in the field those at home have naturally had to play second fiddle to the active army.

However in recent months conditions have greatly improved and the Reserve Army today is equipped and is trained with the most up-to-the-minute war materials. Thus military experience along the most modern lines is gained by all who attend the drills. Canada's military leaders have stressed again and again the basic value of this citizen army. It works for the most part quietly and without much glory. But those who enrol have the satisfaction that comes from public service well done.

The parades of the Prince of Wales Rangers and the Battery these past few weeks have been really disappointing. Those who are already members of the units have an obligation to perform to His Majesty the King and those who are able to become members also have an obligation towards themselves and their country.

Many men today have military deferments, as their experience and their services are badly needed in industry, but the reason that they have been granted deferments should not keep them out of the Reserve Army. Ottawa needs to study this question for we feel that the day is rapidly approaching when our federal authorities will be forced to decide how they are going to get the extra men required to fight this war.

Stolen Ration Books

The police department declares that it is time that motorists awakened to the fact that the gasoline restrictions are creating a new crop of sneak thieves and that the motoring public by its carelessness is contributing to the development of this undesirable situation.

During recent weeks the theft of numerous gasoline ration books has been reported to the local police; there have been several such complaints last week.

The books were stolen because the owners were careless enough to leave them in their parked cars; they came back to find the books gone.

Unless the public co-operates, police point out, this kind of thing is going to increase. So long as ration books are left where they can be reached by dishonest persons there will be more and more thefts as more and more folk find themselves short of gasoline. The unfortunate part of this sneak thieving is that the culprits can always find a black market for the stolen coupons.

The careless motorist who makes it easy for dishonest individuals to steal ration books is not only putting himself and others to a lot of trouble in replacing the stolen books but is helping to defeat the primary object of the restrictions, which is of course to conserve gasoline for the fighting services.

Ruining Our Youth

Life today presents a problem to parents who have boys and girls of high school age. It's a problem that comes with every period of inflation where there is a scarcity of labour and youngsters find their way into jobs, that pay them far more than they would ever get in normal times.

During the summer holiday period the boys and girls flocked to industry, and many fathers found to their dismay, that their sons were able to earn a weekly wage within a few dollars of the amount the heads of the homes were being paid. One case in particular which illustrates the point concerns a boy of 15 who drew more than $22.00 a week, while his father, who considers he has a pretty fair job, receives $30.00 a week. In short, the father took many years in industry before he reached this rate of pay, and the boy, green to the work, steps in and gets big money at once. At least big money for a boy.

When school opened the boys were reluctant to return to their studies, and considerable persuasion needed in many cases to show the youngsters the proper sense of values. In quite a few families, the decision reached was that the boy would stay on the job, and consider his schooling over.

There is a grave danger in this latter step. Let us say that the war is over in two years. Then many will be dismissed from war jobs, and with them will go the youngsters. The boy will then find himself too big and to his way of thinking too old to return to school. He finds his former school-mates two years ahead of him, and he has neither a job, nor an education. Moreover he has become accustomed to a good wage, and will frown on any work paying him half his usual rate, even if it is available which is unlikely. He will balk too at taking an apprenticeship at 15 or 20 cents an hour, although that would in all probability be his salvation.

In some cases, children must leave school to supplement the family income, because of misfortune, illness or the loss of a parent, but in the majority of cases, the wise thing is to put the children back in school, pointing out at the same time the wisdom of such a step.

School officials whose job it is to enforce the school attendance act would be well advised to scan carefully any application from a pupil who wishes to leave school before he is 16 years of age, and should remember too, that some parents might even allow their selfishness and greed to override their good judgment in this period when wages are high and jobs are plentiful.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Vice-President Wallace's warning that it should be democracy first and not America first is a timely bit of advice that should be heeded in other countries besides the United States.

So far there has been no rejoicing in Tokio over the fact that the Italian fleet is now in the hands of the United Nations.

Apparently Mussolini has been rescued by his fellow gangsters. It is to be hoped they take good care of him until the last roundup.

If that isn't a rout the Nazis are staging on the southern end of the Eastern line it is the smallest advance recorded in the present war.

Apparently the German spy system is not nearly as efficient as it was reputed to be. The Italian armistice was negotiated in Lisbon and the Nazis didn't suspect a thing.

The growth of the Canadian navy to a personnel of 70,000, only a small percentage of whom had ever seen the sea, is one of the amazing features of the country's war effort.

Farming News and Views

By HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

I PICKED up a Toronto daily paper the other day and a two column heading met my eye which read, "Plow on the way out." It was enough to arouse one's curiosity at least to learn that the best and most useful of all cultivating implements were about to be banished from the farm. I read the story through, it was an interview given, or alleged to be given, by a Professor of Agriculture, but I got some comfort from it before the end as the Professor is quoted as saying: "Yes, the plow is on its way out, but farmers as a class are very conservative about changing their methods and I doubt if the abolition of the plow will be in our lifetime."

So it is going to be put off while we are alive so we need not be greatly alarmed. It reminds me of the old man, past four score years, who sat with his hand to his ear listening to a lecture at a great Scottish University, and when the lecturer remarked that in a million years this earth would pass away; the aged listener shook his white locks and queried "How many years did ye say?" "One million," replied the lecturer. With a sigh of relief the aged listener observed: "It's a'right, I was feared ye said a thousand."

Why is the plow to be condemned? From this Professor's interview, it appears that an Ohio farmer has condemned it. There are some two million people on Ohio farms but we are not told who did this. The reason is given, however, and is in quotation marks as follows: "This Ohio farmer claimed that crop roots should be fed and protected by decaying plants on the surface of the soil, a well known agricultural fact. Plowing buries this organic material beyond the reach of most roots and the buried vegetation forms a blotter that soaks up moisture from above and below, drawing it away from the surface where it is needed. Disc-harrowing is fine for the distribution of this organic matter into the soil surface, where it is immediately available to the roots of the plants. Never fear, if this trash is buried by a plow and gathers moisture the crop roots will find it. In the office of the Searle Grain Co. of Winnipeg you can see, behind glass partitions, wheat roots which have penetrated the soil for three and four feet in search of moisture, and how easy it would be for them to find it at the depth of a few inches. Trash buried with a plow and sealed by further cultivation will decay quickly, and at the next plowing be brought up to add humus to the top few inches of the soil and improve it.

Plowing is not practiced as much on the dry prairies as on some other land, but that is not new, it is a practice of twenty-five years. C. S. Noble, who has been one of the most successful wheat growers in a semi-arid district, made the first sod weeder, and later the blade cultivator, which he uses to destroy weeds, and it leaves the trash on top to prevent soil drifting. Before seeding, however, he says he likes to plow the trash under. Light tobacco land requires different treatment, but none of these vagaries in soil treatment justifies the broad statement that there is no doubt "the disappearance of the plow." Any farmer can tell you how useful a plow is in breaking alfalfa sod. In England they are taking the plow "all 'round the farm." Their average yield of grain easily excels that of Canada or the United States. The plow is the chief of land cultivators. It has been improved, and assisted by a number of useful tillage implements. A disc harrow is useful for a number of purposes, but not for plowing. Sometime ago we had a run on one way discs, and farmers used them only to find they were not substitutes for the plow. It is prophesying like this about the plow that frequently causes farmers to wonder about Professors of Agriculture. Any one would have a rather unhappy time trying to eke out a living on a farm without a plow. We are told that the plow causes soil erosion, not good plowing, but contour plowing frequently prevents erosion. Keep your hand to the plow.

A COMMITTEE has been appointed to prescribe a policy for farming in Ontario. From reading some of its discussions, I am reminded of a remark made by Hon. Arthur Sifton when he returned from the Peace Conference at Versailles. I asked him what it was like. His reply was "Pretty much like the old Brandon City Council everybody wanted a sidewalk built up his street. Mr. Sifton had been an early settler in Brandon, Manitoba.

A real agricultural policy for the development of farming in Ontario can only be devised by a Minister of Agriculture who clearly understands the situation, and who, with his advisers, will give the matter careful and unselfish study independent of plans for individual profit or vote-catching schemes. There is scope enough here for improvement and it is hoped that something may be developed for permanent improvement. It will have to be based on a long view of the business of farming, not a hit and miss plan of either bonuses, or the importation of a system of control from England, which would only be tolerated in that country during a life and death struggle such as they have had during the last few years.

NOW comes word from Northern Ireland that they have in that part of the Emerald Isle made larger increases in ploughed and cropped land than in any other part of Brittain. Their pig population has suffered some reduction but the numbers of cattle have increased. Flax crops have increased and the linen business is busily engaged in providing material for aircraft of the trainer type and equipment for parachutes and Wellington bombers. "More and better food for Northern Ireland" is the slogan of Sir Basil Brooke, the Premier of this part of Ireland still under British direction.

Winter oats seeded on September 17 of last year in East Lothian, not far from Edinburgh, in Scotland were cut on July 17th and yielded a bumper crop. Improvement of winter oats has been a serious agricultural effort in Scotland. The lateness of the harvesting of Spring sown oats has been one of the farming difficulties in Scotland, often running well into October. If winter oats improve in yield, it will be of advantage to get the seeding done in the Autumn and the harvest off early the following year. To get oats seeded as early as the middle of September, means that the preceding crop must be out of the way, of course. This crop was 'shot" by the end of May and proved in this case, at least, that early seeding was important. Winter barley, and even winter wheat, is sown quite late in England, where the later winter will give it a fair top even if seeded in November. These cropping experiments are valuable.

THE meat animals killed at inspected abbatoirs in Canada for 12 months ending on August 31 show an increase in cattle for this year over 1939, a reduction in calves, an increase in sheep and lambs and more than double the number of pigs. The reduction in calves must indicate that farmers and ranchers are either saving heifer calves for their breeding herds or they are growing calves to sell them as beef, or both.

In the year ending August 31, 1939, the number of cattle killed was 854,950 and in 1943 998,880, but over 1,010,000 were killed in 1942. It is likely, however, that many more cattle were killed outside of large abattoirs during the last year than before, and so were not inspected. This would be done in the hope of escaping the price ceiling. In 1939 there were 674,960 calves killed and during the last year 589,600. Sheep slaughtering increased from 793,7000 in "39" to 837,000 during the last year and pigs from 3,186,740 to 6,457,600. Pigs to bring top prices must go through abattoirs equipped to make Wiltshire sides. To keep up the supply of bacon to Britain, a real war effort, there will have to be large shipments of Western grain made to this province.

THE price of cheese at the Ontario factories in March 1939 was 11c per lb., the price in March 1943, including the Federal and Provincial subsidies was 23c. The price of creamery butter, in Toronto, in March 1939, was 21¾c per lb.; the price in march of this year, including a Federal subsidy of 8½c, was 43c per lb. The prices of grains at Fort William at the same respective times have been: Wheat No. 1 Northern 59½c in 1939 and 97c in 1943. Oats No. 2 C.W. in 1939, 28½c and 51c in 1943. Barley No. 3 C.W. in 1939, 35½c and 62½ in 1943.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS!"

Dual Personality of Mackenzie King

(Hon. H. H. Stevens Analyzes Strong and Weak Features of Canada's Prime Minister)

ALL public men have a dual personality, one that the public knows, which is the product of his admiring friends and his relentless enemies — to the former he is a hero, saint and patriot, and to the latter a rogue and a scoundrel. Both are invariably wrong. The other personality is as he is known to his personal associates. It is my privilege to know Mr. King both as a public figure and as a private citizen.

In his private life he is an exemplary citizen, free from those vices, small and large, which mar the character of so many men. He loved his home and revered his parents. He is a charming and considerate host, and courteous to those whom he meets. He is loyal to the church of his choice and a regular attendant.

To describe Mr. King as a public man is more difficult, especially by one who has consistently opposed him in politics. As a public and parliamentary speaker he is fluent, and at times, impassioned. He has the knack of inspiring his followers, and when reading a carefully prepared speech he can be quite eloquent. His chief fault is his prolixity and his use of endless quotations.

Mr. King is not a convincing speaker, although quite pleasing in his manner. He has not the elegance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, or the cold logic of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, nor the wisdom of Sir Robert Borden.

As a political leader he is more adroit than profound. He is a skilful discerner of the trend of public opinion, and quite dexterous in guiding his party into positions which frequently gain for them the credit for initiating policies which, in reality, were actually kidnapped from their opponents, and then only after it became clear that the policy had a strong public appeal.

Mr. King never moulds public opinion, nor will he give a lead in a crisis; he follows, and finally acts. An excellent illustration is the contrast between Sir Robert Borden as Prime Minister in 1914, and Mr. King in 1939. On Britain's declaration of war in August, 1914, Sir Robert Borden immediately declared that Canada would stand unreservedly beside Britain. He then called Parliament and asked that the stand of his Government be ratified. Had Parliament refused, the Government would have been out. The lead given by Sir Robert was most helpful in forming public opinion. It was a clear call to the people and courageously pointed the way.

In 1939, under precisely the same circumstances, Mr. King gave no hint of where he and his Government stood, he simply called Parliament, and 10 days passed before we knew where he stood. In the meantime the public had given voice to its determination to back Britain, and Mr. King then exercised his leadership.

Caution is commendable at times, but if democracy is to function its leaders must point the way and take the risks. If they err, the penalty is to be thrown out of office; but without courageous leadership democracy will drift into a condition of ineptitude and disunity.

Canada is suffering today from lack of leadership. Vacillating uncertainly has resulted in a tragic, yet unnecessary, increase of bitterness between French and English speaking Canadian. Failure of Mr. King to recognize Labor has precipitated a condition of distrust and dissatisfaction which is now difficult to control. In this instance Mr. King has not been a good judge of the trend of public opinion. It may be that his voluntary isolation in Ottawa has much to do with his failure to keep his finger on the public pulse.

As Prime Minister, Mr. King leaves the administration of the various departments to the Ministers concerned. This is a proper procedure, providing the head of the Government gives leadership in matters of policy and keeps himself informed, in a general way, of what is being done to carry out the policies adopted. He is a bit inclined to consider a mere declaration of policy a fait accompli, and seemingly fails to realize that it is only the commencement and that the translating of policy into realization is the chief task.

Mr. King is a kindly man. He wishes people to be happy and contented, but very often he takes it out in wishing. When delegations wait upon him, he is sympathetic. He frequently leaves the impression that he will act, but usually the matter will end there, unless or until an aroused public opinion forces the issue.

Above all, he has been an extremely lucky political leader. His unusual skill in sensing the trend of public opinion, and the fortuitous opportunities which fate has thrown in his pathway, have contributed in large measure to his success.

Indifferent Electors

Why don't our people vote? In scores of constituencies, Provincial or Federal, the number of electors who don't go to the polls is large, and grows larger year after year. There is the humble soul who thinks he is so unimportant an individual that he will never be missed. There is the prideful ass who considers himself superior to Politics and politicians. There is the silly person who won't vote unless he is on the winning side; he doesn't want "to lose his vote." There is the lazy, indifferent man or woman who says "If they want me they can send a cab for me." There is the self-centred person who wants to clean house, or mow the lawn, or go to a show and can't spare the time to walk to the polls.

Must we believe that public interest in government is a-dying? If so this country is on the skids for Avernus. For be well assured that every one of the baser folk, all the self-seekers, all the double-dyed partisans, large blocks of the ignorant, and of the new-comers from central Europe who don't understand our institutions, will vote at every opportunity. So it is more than probable that a majority is actually a narrow minority of the true opinion of the constituency. "While the people retain their virtue and their vigilance," said Lincoln, "no administration by any extreme of wickedness or folly can very seriously injure the Government in the short space of four years." But public virtue is more common than public vigilance; although the lack of vigilance makes the virtue questionable.—Toronto "Saturday Night."

Clock Stopping

If trans-Atlantic airplane speeds ever reach 720 miles an hour, the flying time between the United States and Great Britain would be about five hours. Allowing for five hours' difference between Eastern Standard and British time, this means that a passenger who left London at noon would still find it noon when he arrived in New York.—New York Times.

A Bible Message

When he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him. And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately this leprosy was cleansed....

And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him, and saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed. For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth, and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

When Jesus heard it, he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel... And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour. (Matt. 8: 1-3, 5-10, 13.)

Passing along a street in Rome just before his fall, Mussolini was receiving with dour expression the applause of a small but voluble company of spectators who had been handpicked to cheer him on his way.

"Is it not wonderful the way the people cheer you?" remarked one of the Duce's stooges.

"Yes," replied the Duce moodily.

"Do you not thrill at their loyalty and affection?"

"Yes, yes," agreed Mussolini, "but what about that little boy on the last corner?"

"The little boy?"

"Yes," moaned Il Duce, "what do you suppose he was laughing at?"

Piped To Prison

In a recent program of "Pipes and Drums" the narrator told an amusing story which attaches to the 9th Glasgow Battalion Home Guard Pipe Band. One evennig, as this unit of Post Office workers was about to disperse after practice, a small body of uniformed men was observed marching through the Glasgow streets. With that hearty helpfulness for which the city is renowned, one of the pipers approached the N.C.O. in charge and said: "I say, if you'll just halt your draft for a moment, I'll get a piper to play you to the station." "Well," replied the sergeant doubtfully, "It's awful good of you but I'm thinking it would be a wee bit irregular. Ye see, these chaps are no' a draft, they're under detention and they're no' gaun to the station, they're gaun to the clink!"—B.B.C. London Letter.

Rev. Canon Cody Ordained Half A Century

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—Tendering "respect and affection," Wycliffe College honored one of its graduates and former professors, Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University of Toronto, at dinner Saturday night at Hart House. This year marks the 50th anniversary of his ordination into the Anglican ministry, and among the 200 guests were archbishops, bishops and delegates to the 50th anniversary session of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada.

Among many personal experiences recalled by Dr. Cody, speaking after dinner, was his attendance at the first General Synod in 1893. Paying tribute to church leaders of the time, he said: "The event was of great signifance, for it was the first time in the history of the Canadian Church that all the diocese were brought together."

Speaking of the present he urged a greater application of God's holy word, recorded in the Bible, to the events of today. "I see even greater advance in the Church of the future, with increased consolidation, understanding and unity among its members," he asserted.

A tribute to Dr. Cody's career as professor at Wycliffe College, rector of St. Paul's Anglican Church and president of the university, was paid by Rt. Rev. W. T. Hallam, Bishop of Saskatoon, who studied under Dr. Cody at the Theological College. Presiding at dinner was Archbishop Derwyn T. Owen, Primate of All Canada. Guests included Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario, Bishop Y. Y. Tsu of Kunming, China, and Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Mess Room Chatter

WITH THE R. C. A. F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 13—(CP). — Anybody who has not undergone evasive action while sitting in the rear turret of a Wellington Bomber will not appreciate quite how Flt. Sgt. Dick Boyer felt on this trip over Germany. But if you've ever been in the last coach of the roller-coaster when it left the rails, went three times around the hot do- stand, hedge-hopped the ferris wheel and took a turn around the dodgem before returning to the tracks, you have a slight idea of how it seemed to Flt. Sgt. Boyer.

As a rear-gunner, this was his first "op" and he was not so very happy. He did not mind the flak. He could put up with the searchlights too. But why did the pilot toss his Wimpy all over the sky.

A few minutes later (so he says) he not only felt unhappy but he did not feel so good and he opened the escape hatch to get a breath of air, among other things. Before he knew it tracers were booming up at him and a JU88, 750 yards away was coming up fast, firing everything he had.

"I for got all about being unhappy and a trifle airsick," said Boyer, "and started firing. I got in three good burst. Sgt. [illegible] Coulson of Montreal, in the front turret was blasting away too and the JU dived down and disappeared."

The boys were credited with a probable.

Sgt. Air-Gunner H. W. Nixon of Toronto, just graduated from an R. A. F. O. T. U. had been trying to get in touch with his brother Tony of the Canadian Army for months. One morning he woke up to find Tony in the next bed at the air station. It turned out that Tony had got stranded while on leave and came to the station to spend the night.

Synod Of Church Of England Reports Missionaries Needed

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—Expansion in Indian and Oriental missionary work was the main topic under discussion at the Saturday session of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada. Bishops, clergy and lay delegates to the eight-day conference held a special meeting Saturday afternoon at Trinity College, and completed study of the Missionary Society's report with its adoption.

"The Church has settled down too comfortably with regard to our Indian work," declared Rev. H. A. Alderwood, secretary of the Indian and Eskimo Residential School Commission. "If we let down in our work others are ready to take it up," he warned.

Appealing for 200 additional missionary workers, he said that war demands had decreased the staffs, and brought ill health and collapse to some of the overworked members who remained.

Not Enough Schools

That the Church should take steps looking to the erection of an Indian residential school in the Hudson's Bay area was the plea of Bishop J. Lofthouse of Keewatin. "Though there are more Indians here than in the whole of Rupert's Land, there are only a few day schools," he said.

"In one mission, covering hundreds of miles, there are 1,050 members with one man in charge, and the nearest day school is 300 miles by plane. A school must be built as soon as we can prevail upon the Government to undertake it," he urged.

"New Indian schools rest with the Government," explained Dr. Alderwood. "We must try to convince it of our need. The Church as a whole does not recognize the immense educational opportunity in these residential schools. It is a great responsibility, and one for which we do not ask much of a cash contribution," he added.

Boys Build Own School

"The residential schools are completely fulfilling their purpose," declared F. E Anfield, principal of an Indian school at Alert Bay, B.C. The Indian boys build their own schools and hospitals, he said.

Co-ordination of Indian mission work was urged in the report on Indian missions, presented by Archdeacon F. S. Tackaberry, Edmonton. It recommended the establishment of a small permanent committee, the employment of a secretary, a training centre for workers, and the centralization of candidates for Holy Orders for this work in one college. The report was sent to the executive council.

"The Oriental problem is not limited to British Columbia, but now concerns the whole of Canada," said Rt. Rev. Sir Francis C. C. Heathcote, Bishop of New Westminster. "The Japanese are filtering from the coast to the interior of the Province, and to the Eastern Provinces," he said.

Seek Increase In Stipend For Ministers

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—Increase in minimum stipends of married Anglican clergymen serving in Western Canada and other appeals for grants to the Missionary Society of the Church in Canada, which came before the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada Friday, were all received for inclusion in a program of advance to be drawn up for the Synod by a special steering committee. Voting on all appeals will take place when the committee's report is considered.

The second day of the Synod's nine-day session at Trinity College was devoted to consideration of the M.S.C.C. Board of Management's report, presented by Canon L. A. Dixon, general secretary of the society. Several hours' debate was accorded the report's suggestion that minimum stipends of Western Canada clergy be increased from $1,000 to $1,100 yearly.

Rev. G. N. Luxton of Toronto moved an amendment that the minimum annual stipend be raised to $1,200. "If Western clergy receive that amount, they will be able to pay some of their debts and perhaps get a second pair of shoes for their wives and look their grocers in the face," he said.

His motion was seconded by Prof. F. D. Coggan of Wycliffe College, contending that there ought to be frank facing of the question of transportation costs. "We should blot out this disgrace from a church which in other respects is performing a glorious task," he asserted.

Archdeacon R. Little of Athabaska thought the M.S.C.C. should pay $25 a month transportation expenses to every married priest who is required to travel long distances in the performance of his duties in Western Canada.

Get Only $3 a Day

"Charwomen in Toronto are getting $4 and $4.50 a day, plus their lunch and carfare," declared Dean C. E. Riley of Toronto. "The present stipend of Western clergymen in the home mission field works out at $3 a day. Let us be brave and ensure that every man in the church who is worth his salt is paid more than a charwoman," he urged.

"Now is the time to take the next step," said Principal W. R. R. Armitage of Wycliffe College, a member of the Board of Management "If the General Synod says that minimum stipends at $1,200 yearly could be provided, the committee will be all in favor of the amendment."

"If the minima are raised, something practical has to be done about realizing the money," warned Canon G. R. Calvert, Rupert's Land. "We don't want to go back to the policy of previous Synods, and just make motions. We want action, but we must be sure that it will work out."

"The hearts of every one will thrill with the thought that our missionaries will be remembered as they have never been before," said Rt. Rev. R. J. Renison, newly appointed Bishop of Moosonee. "The danger is that the wave of the future will pass Ontario by. You can build as many great churches as you like in Ontario, but unless the Gospel is preached afar, eventually this favored Province will become sterile."

Picturing a small Western town, with a grain elevator its grandest feature, and a small church supported mainly by missionary funds from Toronto, he said: "In every one of those churches, there is a life work for a man."

Vote Steering Committee

An amendment to Mr. Luxton's amendment, moved by Archbishop Ralph Sherman of Rupert's Land, was carried by the Synod. He suggested the appointment of a steering committee which would list appeals for funds in a program of advance, to be debated by the Synod after all proposals had come in. "We don't ever want to promise a man money that we can't give him," he said. "We must face this in a business-like manner."

Other appeals to the M.S.C.C included one for increase of the annual grant to missionaries in the Mackenzie River deanery by $3,500, so that each man receive an annual stipend of not less than $1,500. For the Columbia Coast Mission, a grant of $2,000 for medical work in 1944 was asked; $20,000 for temporary buildings for the Indian and Eskimo Residential School; and an increase of $3,700 in the annual grant to the Boys High School at Palampur, India.

Horse Burns In Barn Fire

LINDSAY, Sept. 13—(ENS)—Fire completely destroyed a barn owned by Russell Morden, Kent street, here, Sunday. A horse trapped in its stall was burned to death in the flames despite the heroic efforts of its owner to save it. Morden entered the burning building three times but was blocked by a solid wall of fire in each attempt.

The fire of unknown origin had gained strong headway when first noticed by a neighbor. Firemen were forced to string over 1,000 feet of hose to reach the barn and to prevent the flames from spreading to nearby dwellings.

East City Cubs Lose 3-2 In Final Game

In what was considered the best all-round game of the 1943 season with the smallest score, St. Peter's stole the game, the championship and the show from the less fortunate Cubs Saturday night at Memorial Park diamond by a count of 3-2.

It was a beautifully played game, close and any splurge whatever would have meant victory for either team earlier in the fray.

This gives the Saints' aggregation under the guidance of Jack Condon possession for another year of the coveted J. E. Sullivan trophy.

As was predicted in an earlier column that the final series between the Cubs and St. Peter's would go the five games we saw history repeat itself for the third time. These teams, finalists in the past three years and going five games each year, battled hard giving and asking no quarter. Joe Garvey had his men out there fighting every inch of the way while Pilot Condon and his crew gave no ground.

Won First Game

The first game of the finals saw the Cubs fade under the attack of St. Peter's by a score of 8-2. Coming back terrifically Cubs wiped out their opponents in the second setto by the huge score of 23-7. Again in the third game they lambasted the Saints 15-11. Such a performance of the East City crew took practically all the wind out of the sails of last year's champs. St. Peter's were desperate and fighting doggedly managed to slip by with a 6-5 win in the fourth of the playoffs. Saturday's game is history now and the winners' ship sails on smoothly after a rough passage through troubled waters with the Sullivan Cup stowed safely away in their hold.

Triple By Prete

Ed Prete's triple in the last half of the eighth inning, the game going overtime, set him up in a scoring position for Jack Russell's single. Russell was second batter up and his bingle drove in the run that gave the Catholic Softball League colors to the victors.

As the game opened up tension was high. Cubs visiting St. Peter's had O'Toole score for one in the initial inning. The winners came right behind and scored by Conroy on Reynolds' hit. No count was noted in the second column while St. Peter's chalked one in the third. Nip and tuck all the way anything was liable to happen. Both teams went scoreless in the fourth and the Cubs evened matters in their section of the fifth. Sixth and seventh frames saw each squad again scoreless. Overtime was then called for as the league had settled on seven inning games for the playoffs.

Kennedy for the Cubs was first up in the eighth and flied out. Driscoll followed and grounded likewise. O'Toole got to first on a single but when Hayes flied out the Cubs' chances were gone. Prete for St. Peter's came up first in the last half of the eighth and tripled into left centre. Russell next singled down to second base with a slow high bounding ball to score the winning run and break up the ball game and league for another year.

Steady Pitching

Heffernan for the Cubs and Murphy for St. Peter's pitched superb ball each getting out of tight spots frequently, in some cases with the bases loaded.

Hitting on the whole was below par, the hurling being too much for most batters.

Fielding was outstanding on both teams and it was responsible for the very low game score. Orchids for the game and year should go to C. O'Donoghue and Frank McCormick, particular the latter for notable work in the garden. Frank is about the smoothest fielder in the league when it comes to picking spheres out of the ozone. In the first half of the seventh St. Peter's center fielder came in for C. O'Donoghue's long fly, tried to go back, slipped and in a last effort stuck up his left hand hoping for the best. He snagged the pill but not before a little juggle. This might have meant a homer and the game for the Cubs.

Lineups:

Cubs: O'Toole, c; Hayes, 2b; Garvey, ss; McCormick, cf; C. O'Donoghue, lf; Caccavella, 2b; Heffernan, p; Kennedy, rf; Driscoll, 1b.

St. Peter's: Herr, rf; Conroy, rf; Tompkins, 3b; Murphy, p; Reynolds, ss; Prete, cf; Russell, 2b; Condon, 1b; Perdue, c.

St. Peter's	101 000 01—3	5	1

Umpires: At the plate, Harry Fraser; on the bases: Nagel Phelan and Bill Miller.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The league season of the Girls' Softball loop may end tonight when Generals and Brintons meet at the Bowl at 6.30 o'clock in the second game of the intermediate finals. Generals can end the series and take the Knox Cup with a win. On the other hand a victory for Brintons will make a third game necessary on Wednesday night. Both outfits are confident of the outcome. Brintons who won the intermediate honors a year ago and have been playing good ball admit that they were a little off color the other night but hope to return to their winning ways for the second game. Generals figure they should take the series in two straight games. They will use Pat Wilson, left-handed pitcher against last year's champs while Brintons will either send Doris Walker back or use Beryl Lee on the mound. Both clubs expect to have their full lineups on and the game should be an interesting tussle all the way. It may be the last girls' game of the season—until the Westclox get into action in the provincial playdowns—and should draw a good crowd.

* * * * * *

The Industrial League finals have been switched from the Brinton Field where most of the games have been played this season to the East City Bowl. The finalists, Outboard Marines and Brintons will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the second and third games of the final round. Outboards won the opening game played at the Brinton Field and they can clean up the best-of-five series by taking the next two battles but the Carpetmakers will probably have a lot to say about that. Brintons who won in their semi-final round over Watercraft admit that they got a very bad game out of their systems against the Outboards the other night but they claim there is no danger of a repeat performance when the two teams clash for the second time at the Bowl Tuesday night. The Industrial League teams have been playing good ball all season and the remainder of the final series should be well worth seeing. Switching the games to the Ashburnham cushion will provide a chance for a lot of fans who have been unable to see the Industrial League perform, to get a glimpse of the finals and the games should draw quite a crowd. Both outfits have their supporters.

Acid Test For Comet

Gentleman Jack Clayborne has shown a lot of speed in his bouts here and local fans are of the opinion that he will probably have to move even faster tonight if he is to keep away from Earl McCready's famed flying scissors and other dangerous holds that the Moose applies with remarkable deftness. The two clash at Frank Tunney's weekly wrestling potpourri at the Brock Street Arena tonight and the bout is looked upon as likely to be one of the best arguments of the season. Clayborne who like the famous young man on the flying trapeze moves through the air with the greatest of ease is up against a powerful and skilful master of the mat game who will make Black Dynamite reveal new powers of wrestling if he is to have any hope of earning a verdict from the powerful and imperturbable McCready. It is a British Empire championship elimination and the winner will get a chance to show that he has no fear of Whipper Billy Watson's new commando unconscious hold or anything else that the present champion has to offer. There is a good supporting card for tonight's main battle. The semi-windup brawl brings the bad-tempered Dick Hogan against Irish Pat Flanagan and there are the ingredients for half an hour of near-murder. Hogan will not have a friend in the arena when he tackles the popular Flanagan. In fact everybody and his wife will be hoping that Flanagan when he launches his well-known mule-kick will make his target for tonight the map of the bad man from the coast. The preliminary bout is a repeat of the Joe Maich-Sergt. Ted Miller affair that was enjoyed by many fans when the two boys met here some weeks ago.

Peterborough-Whitaker cricketers wound up their playing season Saturday with a game in Picton against the R.A.F. eleven and were badly beaten by the strong Air Force players who replied to a meagre 68 Peterborough total with a score of 110 for the loss of only two wickets. Only a good stand by F. Smith and Frank Dyer, the former scoring 20 and Dyer contributing 24 enabled the Peterborough eleven to do anything at all with the bat. Flying Officer Lockwood was responsible for a 37 score for Picton and LAC Williams had a great inning, hammering out 42 not out. The Peterborough-Whitaker cricketers have had a difficult season, with trouble in arranging games and in fielding their full strength, and their victory record has been one of the leanest in club records. However they have had the satisfaction of keeping the game alive in the face of great obstacles and probably the friendships that have been formed, especially with such fine sportsmen as the R.A.F. players more than make up for the losses sustained during the year. The officers and players who have kept cricket going here in spite of the difficulties encountered deserve a vote of thanks. Incidentally they are finishing their season with a very fine gesture—by sponsoring the Picton R.A.F.-Mount Hope R.A.F. soccer game here next Saturday in aid of the British War Victims' Fund and assuming all the local expenses in connection with the affair.

They're Easy Now

There was a time not so long ago when the Boston Red Sox used to give the New York Yanks a lot of trouble but that period is apparently just history now. Yesterday the Yanks trimmed Joe Cronin's gang twice in a double-header, cleaning up the entire five-game series. The first game was a pitcher's battle between Ernie Bonham for the McCarthyites and Joe Dobson for Boston, won by the Yanks 1 to 0. Charlie Wensloff was the winning pitcher in the second game which the New Yorkers won 9 to 6 on the strength of 17 ringing hits. Saturday Spud Chandler who has had the greatest season in his career hung up his 19th win, shutting the Red Sox out. Chandler promises to be the first American League pitcher to hit the 20-mark and he will undoubtedly be one of the Yank's main hopes in the world series. Speaking of good pitching Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds delivered himself of a master-piece yesterday when he held the Pittsburg Pirates to one hit and beat them 1 to 0. He was pitted against Rip Sewell, founder of the second-storey ball and while the Reds could get hits off the veteran they failed to do much scoring so that Riddle had to come through with a whitewash to get his win. Another item of note yesterday was that Ace Adams, the king of relief hurlers started a game for the New York Giants and finished it too, beating Boston Braves 7 to 2 and allowing only three hits.

St, Peter's team won the Catholic Softball League for the second year in succession Saturday night when they defeated the East City Cubs 3 runs to 2 and took the final round by three games to two. It was a well-fought series and fittingly enough the final battle was about the best-played and most interesting struggle of the entire season. St. Peter's who had been out in front all year grabbed off the opener and appeared to be well away but the battling Cubs made a real stand by taking the second and third fixtures and the round looked to be anybody's at that stage. However when the Saints found themselves with their backs to the wall they rallied, won the fourth game to even up the series and then won in the final, although it was a close fit. Like other sporting organizations the league suffered this season from loss of players through enlistment but the gaps were filled with younger performers and the loop has had a very successful season, climaxed by one of the most exciting playoffs in league history. Congratulations are in order to St. Peter's upon their second title in two seasons and to the Cubs for the gallant fight they put up before being eliminated.

Fliers Defeat Whitakers In Picton Game

On Saturday the Peterborough-Whitaker team made the trip to Picton for their fourth match of the season against the R.A.F. and almost certainly their last match of the season. J. Wild made a welcome reappearance but B. Roberts and T. Williams were unable to make the trip and the club met with disastrous defeat, the final score being P.W. 68, R.A.F. 110 for two wickets.

The three previous matches had also resulted in R.A.F wins. On June 19 by 74 to 38, July 10 by 157 for 4 wickets to 58, and on Aug. 14 by 94 to 39.

The Peterborough team batted first and made a poor showing against a well-managed R.A.F. attack and for their total of 68 were entirely indebted to F. Smith 20, G. Dyer 24 and Mr. Extras who were responsible for 56 of the total.

Smith and Langhorne opened the innings but the latter at once received a severe blow on the face which required medical attention; he is suffering from a cracked cheek-bone and Grayer of the R.A.F. took his place.

Smith batted carefully and well throughout the inning and was last out. With 6 wickets down for a small total, 5 of them to Edwards, he was joined by F. Dyer and the only stand of the innings was made the latter quickly scoring 24, before being bowled by Wilson. The remaining wickets soon went and the total was 68.

The bowling honours were shared by the left hander LAC Edwards, who has been consistently successful against the local club, he took 5 wickets for 16 and Wilson, a newcomer had 4 for 12.

R.A.F. opened with Lockwood and McKay who took the score to 41 before the latter was bowled by Dyer. Williams then joined Lockwood and the match was won with only one wickets down, before the latter was bowled by Wild for 37. William and Lovatt then played out time when the total was 110 for 2 wickets. Dyer 1 for 42 and Wild 1 for 46 opened the bowling for the P. W.'s and though Adsom, Colbran and Sargent were available for relief no change was made until the score was 90 and the match lost.

But for the defeat it was a pleasant outing though the weather was cold for cricket. As always, the players were most hospitably entertained. A synopsis of results and averages will be available later.

Girl Coach Loses

SALINA, Pa., Sept. 13 — (AP).—Comely Pauline Rush, the girl football coach, lost her first game 47-0—but she's not asking anyone for a spare shoulder to weep on.

The Derry players — they weren't going to let any girl-coached team beat them — won about as expected. Bell, it should be explained, is a "B" class school in this western Pennsylvania hamlet, Derry an 'A' class school.

Woman Football Coach In Action

Directing warmup calisthenics for her players is Coach Pauline Rugh, first woman football coach. Her assignment as coach of the football team at Bell township High School at Salinas, Westmoreland county, has attracted wide interest. Coach Rugh brushed up on the game by attending practice sessions at Penn State College, where she graduated with a degree in physical education in 1942.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 — (AP).—West Coast golfers, including Lt. Marvin (Bud) Ward, the United States amateur champion, are high on the prospects of 14-year-old Buddy Moe of Spokane, who shot 72-69—141 in the Spokane city championship this summer.

Gil has his fill.

Gil Bouley, a 250-pound tackle at Boston College last year, pared his weight down to 218 while he was training to become an Army physical training instructor at Atlantic City, N.J.....Then Gil decided he'd like to be a flier in spite of the 200-pound limit, and the Cadet Selection Board gave him two weeks to get rid of the extra poundage.. ...So on midsummer afternoons, Bouley swathed himself in wool and galloped along the Boardwalk ....Most of the bathers on the beach paid little attention, but one stopped Gil and asked: "Who are you fighting?"......"The Cadet Board," replied Bouley, moving off at double time.

Qute, Unquote:

Don Kolloway, on a visit from Camp Grant, Ill., to his old White Sox buddies: "Know what we did the other day? Well, after a four-hour hike with full pack we went through an hour of calisthenics. And then did we get to go to our barracks to rest? We did not. We went to the mess hall to scrub for two hours....Wonder why I ever thought playing a double-header at second base was hard work?"

Riddle Pitches 1-Hitter Beating Pirates

By TED MEIER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

It isn't often a one-hitter is pitched in the major leagues after Labor Day, but Elmer Riddle of Cincinnati Reds accomplished the feat against Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. Pitted against the 20-game winner, Rip Sewell, in the first game of a doubleheader, Riddle retired the first 22 men to face him. Then, with one out in the eighth, Bob Elliott doubled for the Pirates' lone bingle.

Riddle went on to gain his 19th victory of the year with a 1-0 shut out.

Pittsburgh gained a split by taking the nightcap, 7-0 behind Xavier Rencigno's four-hit twirling, coupled with Jim Russell's three-run homer in the sixth.

Melton Has Shutout.

Ace Adams, the "work horse" of the majors, came nearest to Riddle's performance. Yesterday he started his first game and beat Boston Braves, 7-2 with a neat three-hitter. It was the 64th game Adams has appeared in this season.

Adams hurled the second game of a twin bill.

In the opener Southpaw Cliff Melton blanked the Braves, 3 to 0.

New York Yankees swept a five-game series from Boston Red Sox, 1-0 and 9-5. Ernie Bonham outpitched Job Dobson in the opener, yielding four hits to Dobson's six. Atley Donald's one-hit five-inning relief performance won the nightcap.

St. Louis Browns likewise got good pitching from Bob Muncrief and Denny Galehouse and swept a doubleheader from Chicago White Sox. 2-0 and 6-2. Muncrief yielded only four hits in winning the opener

Washington moved within two percentage points of the second place Cleveland Indians by beating Philadelphia Athletics twice, 4-3 and 9-5.

Bridges Loses

Tommy Bridges hurled a four-hitter for Detroit against Cleveland, but lost, 2-1, when Mike Rocco tripled and scored on Lou Boudreau's fly.

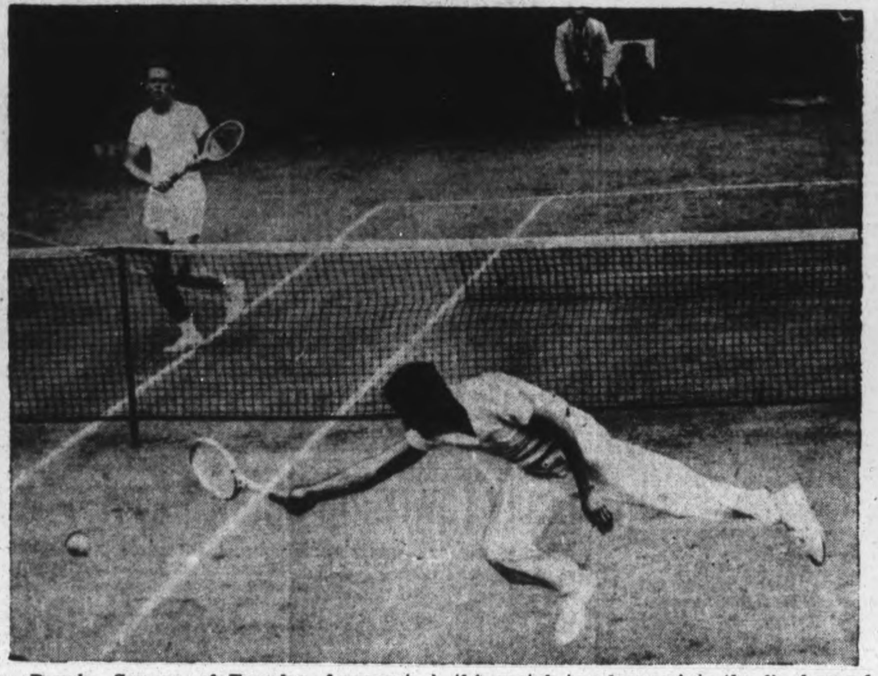
Brooklyn won its 18th game in 21 starts by beating the Phillies 8-4, through a six-run uprising in the seventh.

A scheduled doubleheader between St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs was postponed.

In Saturday's National League games, and Giants had to go 13 innings to defeat the Braves 4-3, St. Louis moved closer to the pennant with a 3-1 victory over the Cubs, Brooklyn walloped the Phillies 7-2 and Pittsburgh got 14 hits and an 11-1 victory over Cincinnati.

In the American League, Washington defeated Philadelphia 9-1, Cleveland won 7-2 over Detroit, St. Louis beat Chicago 4-1 and New York shut out the Red Sox 4-0.

Pancho Segura Is Defeated In Semi-Finals



Pancho Segura, of Ecuador, forecourt, makes vain attempt at getting his racquet on to a sharply angled return made by Coast Guardsman Jack Kramer, of Los Angeles. Kramer, though ill, managed to win this match to advance into the final round of the national men's singles tennis championship at Forest Hills, New York. U.S. Navy Lieut. Joe Hunt won the championship.

World Series To Open Oct. 5

CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP) — The 1943 World's Series, opening in New York's Yankee Stadium on Tuesday, Oct. 5, will be a one-trip affair.

The first three games will be played in New York and the remaining games in St. Louis, regardless of the number necessary to decide the series.

These plans were completed Saturday as the Yankees and Cardinals moved towards the championships in the American and National Leagues. The Cardinals need to win only seven more games to clinch the National League flag, while the Yanks must bag 13 more, based on figures before Sunday's games were concluded.

If the series should go to seven games, it was decided, there will be a day of rest between games six and seven in order to sell tickets for the seventh. The tickets customarily are sold in blocks covering three games each. It was also decided to allow two days of travel after the first three games. Thus the fourth game will be in St. Louis, Oct. 10.

N.H.L. Governors Would Operate Again

By EDDIE LEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

TORONTO, Sept. 13 — (CP). — Leaders of the National Hockey League, jittery over obstacles to wartime operation, gingerly rested their case to-day with the ultimate tribunal—the Federal Government.

The league wants to operate and hopes to do so, Manager Lester Patrick of New York Rangers told The Canadian Press yesterday, but it all depends on Ottawa.

The statement, made at the end of the league's semi-annual meeting, was the first official word to penetrate the barrier of silence cloaking the three-day deliberations since the meeting started in a Toronto hotel (Royal York).

The only other important announcement, also made by Patrick, was that the league has endorsed a proposal to establish a hockey Hall of Fame at Kingston, Ont.

There was no mention of Halifax, whose City Council touched off a lively, nation-wide argument last spring by suggesting the port city for recognition as hockey's birthplace.

Two Rule Changes.

In a handwritten statement, Patrick said the league also:

1. Appointed a special committee to obtain definite instructions from Ottawa regarding exit permits for players eligible to cross the international boundary lines.

2. Reached a new working agreement with the International Ice Hockey Association, of which the C.A.H.A. is a part.

3. Adopted two rule changes previously agreed upon by amateur bodies—one permitting the defending team to pass to centre ice, marked by a new red line, from defence without drawing an off-side penalty, and the other changing face-off rules so centre players will face their opponent's goal instead of the side of the rink.

4. Tentatively agreed upon a new affiliation agreement between the N.H.L. and the A.H.L., the latter represented at the meeting by Lyle White of Minneapolis.

5. Decided to "try to arrange" two all-star games for war charity during the 1943-44 season, one to be played in Toronto or Montreal and one in the United States. The proposal was that National League all-stars would meet an all-star Service team.

6. Arranged to tender contracts as referees for the coming season to Frank (King) Clancy of Ottawa, Bill Chadwick of New York, Norman Lamport and Bert Hedges of Toronto, and Mel Harwood of Baltimore.

Afterwards Patrick said delegates from each N.H.L. club drafted a 'tentative schedule" which would be released when drawn in final form.

TORONTO, Sept. 13 (CP)—Ah rumor! Jim Coleman of the Toronto Globe and Mail says there are persistent rumors Burleigh Grimes will be back at the helm of Brooklyn Dodgers next baseball season. Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette says he was told recently that Burleigh is a cinch to replace Frankie Frisch at Pittsburg...A week ago today, 31,000 Vancouver sports fans turned out to see Labor Day attractions. The hoss races drew 18,000, and a track and field meet 7,000, baseball play-offs 3,500, box lacrosse 1,500 and cricket 1,000.

Puck Platter:

The Vancouver Province announces Bus Brayshaw, amateur hockey player of wide experience, may this season be one of New York Rangers' forwards. And in the same paragraph the Province says: "There is only one difficulty. Just as the Rangers moved in on Brayshaw, so did the draft."...and Dave Dryburgh of the Regina Leader-Post quotes a Regina fan: "Why, every juvenile who can skate is heading for the N.Y. Ranger school and the 17-year-olds will be gobbled up like hot cakes by the pros.

Athletes at War:

Garnett Betts, Winnipeg and Fort William hockey star who saw brief service in the American Association, is reported missing in action overseas. Vince (Winnipeg Tribune) Leah writes of Betts: "He was one of the poorest skaters that ever reached junior competition. He would stumble and stagger all over the premises but strangely enough nobody could tag him. He scores goals by the dozens."...Pat Berry, Lethbridge, Alta., heavy-weight boxer, is unlikely to box again. Berry has been invalided home from overseas army service with injuries to his left hand and wrist, the result of a bomb explosion in London...Joan McArthur of the Canadian Women's Basketball champs, Vancouver Hedlunds, has joined the R.C.A.F.

Incidentally:

Vancouver soccer players, readying for the winter season, were staggered to find an almost complete absence of soccer balls on the market. Officials are gathering all available used balls for patching... Sgt. Jack Buell of the R.C.A.F., former Ottawa Rough Riders football player, is stationed at Yorkton, Sask., and anxious to line up with Regina Roughriders in the Western Inter-provincial Union...Lou Mogul, coaching the Winnipeg United Services line, claims the mechanically perfect player will beat the fiery, fighting type of gridder every time out.

Montreal Team Downs Toronto

By The Associated Press.

Montreal waited until the final day of the International League season to clinch its place in the Governor's Cup play-offs, downing the championship Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 in a 10-inning first game of Sunday's twin bill.

That decision made the Royals the foes of the Leafs in Tuesday night's opener at Toronto in the first game of a four-of-seven semi-final round series. Newark and Syracuse tangle in the other bracket.

The two winners will meet in another set of games to determine the league representative in the little world series with the American Association play-off winner. The association schedule ends next Sunday but its play-offs are three-of-five and it is expected that the series will get under way on or about October 1.

After winning the first and decisive battle, the Royals put a makeshift team on the field and lost, 6-1. Meanwhile, Rochester dropped its lone game to Buffalo, 4-3. It was the third straight loss for the Wings.

In other Sunday games, Baltimore and Newark divided, the Orioles annexing the first and the Bears coming back for the second, 7-1. Syracuse edged out Jersey City 5-4.

Sunday's games closed the 59th season of the Shaughnessy circuit with Toronto on top with 95 victories and 57 losses for a .625 average, compared with the .601 figure of Montreal a year ago.

In Saturday's games, Toronto won a pair of Marathon contests from Rochester, 6-5 in the first game after 11 innings and 3-2 in the second which went 14 innings. Newark got a close one from Baltimore, 2-1, Montreal defeated Buffalo 6-1, and Syracuse shut out Jersey City 7-0.

CAMPBELLFORD

Billing Change To Lower Electric Rates

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 13 — (ENS)—Campbellford Utilities may soon change their billing method with the result in a general lowering of rates for consumers of electric power here. This was announced at Commission here on Thursday evethe regular meeting of the Utilities ning when the matter of rates came in for considerable discussion.

According to Chairman J. O. Benor the present method of assessing on a basis of floor space is obsolete and less equitable than it was a few years ago when a large home naturally consumed more power than a small one. Now there are any number of small places with a large connected load which get advantage of the cheaper rates ahead of the large home small consumer. No definite action was taken and the matter was left with Manager Denyes being instructed to further investigate the matter further.

Another subject which came up for discussion was that of improved street lighting. Though it had been originally planned to leave lighting improvements over for the duration members made a tour of Sebastopol street and decided changes were needed.

It is planned to put the same type of units on this street as are already in service on Booth and Centre streets. The manager had already investigated the matter and found that although the fixtures were available there might be difficulty in obtaining the steel brackets. Cost of the project was estimated at about $1,000 and the new units will provide a better distribution of light with a lowered power consumption and maintenance cost.

For several weeks the commission has been holding its meetings on Thursday instead of Wednesday the regular meeting day. This is because the holiday takes several members out of town and in future meetings will be on Thursday.

Institute Promises To Fill 12 Ditty Bags

MARMORA, Sept. 13 —(ENS) — The September meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held this week at the home of Mrs. Ethel Gray, with a fair attendance.

Mrs. E. Belanger was at the piano for the opening. The roll call was "Handy Hints for the Home." In the business period it was mentioned that the sum of $53.70 had been raised from the auction sale held in July. The president, Mrs. L. Green, extended thanks to all who had contributed to its success. Mention was also made of the recent sewing class held in the White Hall under direction of Miss Collins of the Institute department. A letter was read from Dr. Hammond in which he mentioned the date suitable for his promised illustrated address to which the public will be invited.

A letter was received from the Salvation Army with regard to the sending of ditty bags as last year. The members will endeavor to fill twelve this year as against five a year ago. Plans were made for the serving of a lunch at the Agricultural Society's dance to be held in the exhibition building on September 15. It was decided to hold a dance in the Town Hall on the last Friday of each month to raise further funds.

The report of the sick committee was given, after which the secretary was instructed to get patches for the making of quilts this coming winter. Piano solos played by Mrs. E. Belanger and Mrs. L. R. Rundle brought the meeting to a close.

Salerno-Naples

attacked at Calatto, Velletri Valletta, in the Naples area, and at Castelnuovo, northeast of Battipaglia.

Capture Brindisi.

Headquarters announced yesterday a British column had slashed 43 miles across the Italian heel from Taranto and taken the strategic Adriatic port of Brindisi, while on the toe swift-driving British and Canadian 8th Army elements had swept through the Calabrian Peninsula bottleneck to Catanzaro on the east and La Mazia on the west.

Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's 5th Army of British and United States troops was said to have smashed further inland. Officers said the Naples-Salareno bridgehead was now "firmly established."

The Germans are moving up large forces of tanks, artillery and mechanized infantry against Gen. Clark's forces, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared the Allies face a "bitter battle" to drive them out of Italy. He added, however, that the battle is progressing about as expected.

Relman Morin, Associated Press War correspondent with U.S. assault forces, reported in a dispatch last night that the Allies had rolled back the Germans Saturday along the whole front "south and west of the Gulf of Salerno" and nearly doubled their beachhead in depth within 24 hours.

For the first time, dispatches last night gave an idea of the extent of the Allied landings last Thursday morning on the west coast of Italy, officially described at the time only as in the Naples area. Action along about 30 miles of the coastline was reported.

Morin said the main highway between the southern part of the Gulf of Salerno and the Selle River was under full American control, but that from the Selle to captured Salerno, 18 miles to the northeast, German 88 mm. guns prohibited use of the road. Salerno itself, he wrote, "is solidly in British hands."

German air opposition rose to a new pitch Saturday, with the Nazi high command apparently rushing part of its home forces to the battle scene.

Down 16 Hun Planes

About 120 enemy fighters were thrown into combat over the Salerno battleground, but the Allied forces remained superior, shooting down nine of the enemy. Seven others were destroyed elsewhere for a total of 16 for the day. Seven Allied planes were listed as missing.

The British-Canadian 8th Army in Calabria was impeded only by enemy demolitions and mines. The British were fanning out to the north and northwest from Taranto, which itself fell with no opposition, and were reported pursuing elements of the German first parachute division and a German armored force.

In this swirling fighting no words as to the exact whereabouts of the Canadian forces — presumed to be elements from the 1st Division—has been forthcoming since they stormed ashore in Calabria Sept. 3. They were reported later to have marched into Reggio Calabria almost without opposition, but since then there has been no word as to where they are operating.

Latest news of their activity, several days ago, had them placed only as moving through difficult mountain country and driving along the east and south coasts.

Speculation as to whether or not Canadian troops also took part in the 5th Army landings around Naples has not been answered as yet, either.

Adriatic Springboard.

The fall of Brindisi, ancient eastern seaport of some 20,000 population, opened up wide new positions of Allied action. It gave Gen. Eisenhower's forces their first foothold along the Adriatic and a springboard whence the Balkans could be invaded.

(Radio France at Algiers, in a broadcast yesterday, declared Allied troops already were in Bari, 55 miles up the coast from Brindisi.)

The British plunge across the heel from Taranto also presumably brought 10 or more important Italian airfields within Allied control, including the oft-bombed field at Gottaglie, nine miles east of the naval base.

From these and other fields enfolded within the rapidly-expanding territory under control of the 8th Army on the toe, Allied airmen are within easier striking distance of the Germans to the north.

Bomb Rhodes Again.

An air communique yesterday reported heavy air attacks Saturday on German concentrations and communications at Corleto, 40 miles from the Gulf of Taranto; at Potenza, 23 miles farther to the north-west and at Auletta, 36 miles south-east of Salerno.

Allied aircraft returned again yesterday to the Italian Island of Rhodes, in the Dodecanese group off Turkey, a Middle East air communique said. American four-engined bombers attacked airdromes at Maritza and Calato, both hit on the previous day by other bombers. Runways were reported damaged, and at least six grounded aircraft set afire.

The South African Air Force set an enemy cargo vessel afire at Gavdos Island south of Crete on Saturday, Cairo said.

German and Italian broadcasts intercepted here all indicated that Italian opposition to Nazi occupying forces had tapered off to almost nothing. Nevertheless, passive resistance appeared to be widespread. A German broadcast admitted Italian workmen were refusing to repair bomb-damaged railways. Nazi rail workers were reported en route from Germany itself.

A dispatch last night said that the Italian air force was unable to escape to Sicily or other Allied-held territory because airfields in Italy long have been controlled by the Germans.

Germans Claim

ever, that the Germans intended to use the former Duce as a symbol around which to try to rally some sort of Italian resistance to the Allied armies.

Bearing out this belief, the German-controlled Paris radio declared:—

"Mussolini is now free to take Italy in hand again and lead her along the road from which Badoglio tried to make her swerve... Italy has again found her leader."

Dispatches from Stockholm quoted Berlin advices as saying that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, commander of German forces in northern Italy, was taking urgent steps to strengthen his defences from the Riviera to the Adriatic following a swift inspection tour.

Indicative of the strain placed upon German manpower by the Italian surrender, the Nazi press announced that men 50 to 60 years old had been ordered to report for military enlistment in Germany the latter part of September.

German Bombs Split Italian Ship

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 13 (AP) — Soon after escaping from German-dominated ports in Northern Italy Italian warships fought a half-hour battle with German bombers which attacked them off the Island of Corsica and sank one battleship.

An eyewitness account of the fight was brought here by an R.A.F. pilot who saw it Wing Cmdr. H. Law-Wright of South Ashdown, Cheshire.

He said the battleship sank after being split open by bombs from the planes of Italy's erstwhile allies.

The bombers attacked in the Strait of Bonifacio soon after a flotilla of warships escaped from Nazi-dominated ports in Northern Italy.

The battleship victim was accompanied at the time by several other Italian warships, including cruisers and destroyers, which made Malta safely.

The Nazis attacked while the warships were far beyond the range of protection from Allied fighter planes. Law-Wright was piloting an R.A.F. Marauder on reconnaissance and was keeping the flotilla in sight as it steamed southward to an Allied port.

"The first sign of attack we saw was when the ships opened fire," he said. "For a moment we thought they were firing at us, and we took violent evasive action. Then we saw flak burst far above us, obviously aimed at a high-flying attack."

The Marauder flew out of range so the Italian naval gunners could have a free hand.

Then, Law-Wright continued, "we saw an enormous explosion on one of the battleships. Creamy white smoke went up about 3,000 or 4,000 feet."

Anderson presided and after extending greetings urged members to give their continued cooperation to the work of the society.

The visiting report disclosed a total of 35 calls made by members during the summer and a review of group work showed general activity during the summer months. Group 2 revealed proceeds of their July meeting were $12.05 and Group 3 for both July and August indicated proceeds of $19.30 and $22.20 respectively.

Plans for having the church basement cleaned were discussed and Mrs. J. C. Anderson was named convener for this work. Mrs. T. Patrick announced a group meeting would be held at Mrs. F. G. DeCarrol's on September 22 and Mrs. Hutcheon announced a Group 2 meeting at Mrs. McCulloch's on September 15. war, that is evident. That could be noticed even from the brief conversation I had with the men aboard the Cruiser Eugenio Di Savoia from a small naval launch.

To shouts from the press boat bobbing alongside the big warship whether they were glad to be out of the war, one seaman replied "yes." A lot of the others nodded affirmatively when the interpreter asked if the Germans were nasty people. One drew his hand across his throat.

CARRIER PIGEON FOUND.

A carrier pigeon bearing band CU 41-8979 was found dead this morning by Hurrell Dodds on George street near the machine shop of Rollie Wilson. The pigeon appeared to have been killed by a hawk. Mr. Dodds left the band in the Examiner.

ILLEGAL CONSUMPTION

Albert Raclote, formerly of Timmins but now employed here pleaded guilty in police court this morning to consuming liquor in a place other than a residence and was fined $10 and $2.50 costs. Bert Stabler, similarly charged, entered a plea of not guilty and got an adjournment for a week.

SNEAK THIEVES BUSY

An epidemic of petty thieving has been going on here for some time and householders are warned to be careful about where they leave their purses and about keeping their back doors closed. The latest victim was C. A. J. Duranceau, 280 Simcoe street. While members of the family sat on their front verandah Sunday, a sneak thief entered the back door and stole $3.90.

PASSES TEST.

Edward Prete, of Rubidge street, recently passed the Royal Society Life Saving test and was awarded the Royal Medallion. Coached by Gordon Minty, swimming instructor at the Y.M.C.A., his examination was conducted by Miss Caroline Littlefield.

WINDOW IS SHATTERED

The home of Michael Minicola, 436 Driscoll Terrace, was under fire last night. He reported to the police that some one drove up to his place in an automobile, got out, fired a rock and shattering one of the windows in the house and then drove off.

ADJOURNMENT NECESSARY

Because the accused was ill a charge against John Drummond of having operated a taxi beyond the fifteen-mile-limit imposed by the wartime regulations had to be adjourned for a week when it was called in police court this morning. Drummond was represented by T. J. Carley, K.C., who told the court his client was unable to attend. W. F. Huycke, K.C., was present to prosecute the case.

Used Stamps Are Sent To Britain

To the majority of people used postage stamps are naturally considered to be of no use or value but Bob Everett of the Empress Hotel staff has found a use for them. He has been tireless in selling War Stamps and Certificates by his "Stamp Out Hitler" clubs and has now found a further outlet for his activities by collecting used Canadian stamps to send overseas to evacuated children in England who are stamp collectors and this hobby helps to pass away the long winter evenings.

Having made contact with a lady in England interested in this work he has already sent some 2000 stamps and has received letters of grateful thanks direct from children mostly located in South Wales.

A 12-year-old girl writing to him direct, thanks him for the stamps as she is interested in collecting. She is "evacuated" from London in South Wales, has no mother, her father and brother are both in the Army. She has been back home once. She winds up with a PS: "Pray to God to let the war end."

A boy of 15 writing to "Dear Overseas Friend" thanking him for sending stamps to the evacuated boys from London and adds "stamps are very hard to get in this remote country town and we rely so much on this hobby for amusement during the long winter evenings." He has been evacuated for three years.

Yet another from a 11-year-old boy "Thank you so much for the stamps you sent me."

The demand is limitless; business firms and individuals can help these children in their lonely hours away from their homes, without any cost in money, by preserving their used Canadian stamps of every denomination, which are quite worthless to them, and getting in touch with Mr. Everett at the Y.M.C.A. who will collect and transmit them to a responsible person in England for distribution.

Every donor may be assured that he or she is doing a real service in so helping these unfortunate children.

These stamps are also distributed if available to soldiers stationed in remote commands, training camps and to anti-air craft and searchlight units which are in isolated locations.

Bartley Reid Killed By Car

A message from the provincial police at Pickering arrived this morning at the city police station asking that the wife of Bartley Reid should be notified that her husband had been killed by a hit-and-run driver near Pickering early today.

Mrs. Reid lives at 408 Cambridge street. Her husband has been boarding on Euclid avenue and was employed at the Canadian General Electric Company. She told police that she did not know how the dead man happened to be in the vicinity of Pickering. He was sixty years of age and had lived in Peterborough for some time.

Particulars of the accident have not been received. All that is known is that the driver of the car which struck down Reid did not stop after the accident and that Toronto and district police have been searching for him since this morning.

Fungus Growth Hitting Apples

PORT HOPE, Sept. 13.—(CP).—Morley Webster, orchard supervisor of the fruit branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, told officers of the Northumberland and Durham Apple Growers' Association at a meeting here that humid weather in recent weeks has increased fungus growth on apples. He expressed the view that one-third of the apples in many orchards in this area would not be of top grade.

The Association officers discussed the labor situation and R. C. Banbury, agricultural representative for Northumberland, said it was hoped to save the crop through the assistance of women workers.

Destroys 4th Plane

LONDON, Sept. 13—(CP Cable)—Flying Officer Harry Dowding of Sarnia, Ont., pilot of a Canadian Spitfire wing, ran his score to four enemy planes destroyed Saturday when he close in 200 feet from a German fighter and sent the enemy craft down in flames with one short burst.

Cold Weather To Reduce Tomato Supply

Take Herb Doig's advice, as of Saturday, that is if it is not too late, recommending housewives to buy at once their tomatoes for pickling, and multiply it by a cold fact from the canning industry to the effect that this abnormal onset of frost is general across the province, and the result should be no further delay in getting tomatoes into winter jars as soon as possible.

Some tomato patches in the Peterborough area have been nipped over the week-end, but estimates of damage are presumed to be light in the absence of any woeful reports from growers. Canada Packers were uneasy this morning as everybody around the place had looked out at "white frost" on roofs, suggesting a season advance toward the expected approaches of October. A few truck loads of tomatoes arrived from local gardens with some reassurance that they had been only lightly touched, and hopes turned to the growers in the Port Hope area that they were still beyond the frost zone.

E. S. Ford of the canning department told the Examiner that only one-quarter of the expected pack has been completed, and that information from Toronto this morning traced the nocturnal cold dips all across the southern section of the province from Windsor to the Ottawa valley.

"This is the earliest frost in the fifteen years I remember," Mr. Ford said, "and any serious and general damage to the tomato crop now would be disastrous to the pack. We can't tell this morning just what the effects have been, but we will know when other growers come in from the outlying district."

"31" At Bancroft

Thermometers at Bancroft dropped to 31 degrees early this morning. Farmers around the city say they have found ice on the water troughs in their poultry yards for the last three or four mornings.

Vine crops are frost bitten, pumpkins, cucumbers, melons and so on, and the delicate flowers in the city, such as nasturtiums, were nipped on the outer leaves.

Radiators in local offices this morning had bowed to the chill weather, and fires were lighted for the first time since last spring.

V. E. Crebar, gardener at the south end of Armour Road, near Downer's Corners, reported today the frost had blackened one of his fields of tomatoes with an estimated loss of about four thousand baskets.

"The lot near the house was touched only in a few spots, but the other one is done," he said. "I had picked about eight or nine hundred baskets off it. It was planted a little late any way. I thought the market might want an extra lot of tomatoes, but these cold nights finished that five acres. There might be some of the tomatoes underneath that escaped, but from experience there is not much use trying to salvage any. Cucumbers caught it, too, last night."

LEBANON, Pa., Sept. 13—(AP).—Celebrating his 60th birthday anniversary, Railroad Brakeman William Deitz received a notice from his draft board to report for induction. He won't be donning a uniform right away though. A second letter asked him to return the notice. It was meant for a nephew of the same name.

Bill Hamilton In R.C.A.F. Awarded D.F.C.

PO. William Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, Homewood avenue, who is serving overseas, got one of the biggest birthday presents any boy could have last Friday, when he was notified that he had won the Distinguished Flying Cross. So far as it is known only two other Peterborough men hold this award of merit, Wing Cmdr. Arthur Waddell and Wing Cmdr. Wallace Barton, the latter having been reported missing a few weeks ago.

PO. WILLIAM HAMILTON

His parents received a cable on Sunday notifying them of his decoration but details of the action involved have not yet been released to them. He is 21.

PO. Hamilton graduated from high school and spent a year in Special Commercial before he enlisted in the R.C.A.F. as a pilot at 19. He had some thought of training as a mechanical engineer, but his enlistment postponed that course of study.

One of two brothers to be in the forces, "Bill" landed overseas in November 1942 following his graduation as a pilot. His brother, Lieut. Robert Hamilton, who attended his graduation followed him to England within about six weeks and he has been taking part in the Sicilian campaign.

PO. Hamilton has been piloting a Stirling bomber, and while he is a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, he is attached to the R.A.F., and has only one other Canadian in his crew, a Toronto boy. His parents said that he has given little information about the action he has seen because of the strict censorship which exists in the R.A.F. Since his arrival overseas he has been stationed in England only and his sole interest is "flying."

Vital Ground Jobs Open To Older Men

Men who are too old to take to the air but still anxious to help bring the enemy to his knees, can now do so.

The R. C. A. F. has urgent need of Draftsmen, Electricians, Diesel Fitters, Pumpmen, Telephone Men (toll, cable, construction, etc), Stationary Engineers, Service Police, Firemen, Firefighters, Tailors, Shoe-Makers, and Laboratory Assistants. Trained men up to the age of 50 are eligible for most of these trades.

Men up to the age of 35 years, are also urgently needed to train as Wireless Mechanics, Aircraft Carpenters and Metal workers.

Complete information relative to requirements and rates of pay may be had, without obligation, at the R. C. A. F. Mobile Recruiting Unit which will visit here Tuesday and Wednesday, the 14th and 15th, at the Y. M. C. A.

Belmont Lake Cottagers Help War Funds

In the vicinity of Havelock, the Belmont Lake Cottagers have for some years been banded together in the summertime under a name which identifies them with that district, they having come from many scattered points to spend their holidays among the beauties of nature which abound in that region.

While they have left the cares of their homes behind them, to revel in the freedom which this offers, they have not been unmindful of the needs of others in less fortunate circumstances, and at a meeting of the ladies belonging to this group every Tuesday afternoon, they have charged themselves 25 cents a time, which has all gone to help in various charitable objects to assist the cause of the country in the prosecution of the war.

In this manner, during the past season they collected over $40.00, from which the Peterborough and District has benefitted to the extent of $15.35, which is recorded in their name today, through Mrs. W. A. Prest of Morrow Avenue, who is one of the active members of the group. It should be mentioned that quite a number connected with this same group come from Toronto and its environs, so a fund in that place benefitted in a substantial way.

About this same time last year, the fund had the support of this same group in almost identical manner to give a helping hand to those in the British Isles who had suffered through air raid attacks, giving ample demonstration that even in the midst of holidays they could think of the welfare of others.

Baillieboro Children Help.

Last Monday, Baillieboro had a field day, and this was made an opportunity by a group of public school children to raise money for the fund through the medium of a fish pond, in which they had some assistance from the Canadian Department Stores, who gave them a 50 per cent reduction in the cost of the articles they needed for the occasion.

This group was composed of Betty Joan Howson, Barbara Campbell, Margaret Dawson and Eileen Gainer who charged five and ten cents to their customers, which has netted the fund the nice sum of $6.16, for an activity of this type. This was the final wind-up of their holiday season, a splendid thing for the girls to start the trek back to school having the record of this accomplishment to their credit for the good of others.

One personal donation is listed today from Chas. Herkimer of Buckhorn, who has on other occasions previously demonstrated his feeling in like manner towards those who need help in the front line in Britain.

Don't forget that next Saturday, all have an opportunity to pay a tribute to the boys of the Royal Air Force, by attending the game of soccer between a team from the R.A.F. station at Picton, and a similar group from the R.A.F. station at Mount Hope. These boys are coming here expressly for the purpose of giving a helping hand to the fund, which should be a further reason for a bumper attendance.

Sponsored by the Peterborough Whitaker Cricket Club, this game will take place at the Riverside Park, commencing at 2 p.m., and tickets may be procured from interested workers in most of the industrial plants, or from members of the cricket club, or at the Examiner Office.

C.I.O. Request Reports

MONTREAL, Sept. 13—(CP)—The annual policy conference of the United Steelworkers of American (C.I.O.) in a resolution adopted here Sunday asked the government to "immediately make available to the public" the two reports of the National War Labor Board inquiry "into labor conditions and that "immediate steps be taken to ensure full labor representation on the National War Labor Board without delay."

C.P.R. Freight Derailed

NORTH BAY, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Canadian Pacific railway officials here said Saturday that 17 cars of an eastbound freight were derailed at Dalton, West of Chapleau, Ont., early Saturday. The engine remained on the tracks and no one was injured.

Three Suspects Charged In Bank Robbery

TORONTO, Sept. 13—Acting on information originally secured by Detective Sgts. Hector Barber and Maxwell Richardson and Detective Lister Sullivan, three men were arrested at the point of drawn guns and charged with the machine-gun robbery of the Royce Ave. branch of the Bank of Montreal two weeks ago, when $12,540 were stolen.

The men held and charged are William Lake, alias Dell Harris, 25, of Toronto; Hector Le Blanc, 25, of Montreal, and Stanley Scrafield, 22, of Long Branch. Lake and Scrafield were arrested late Friday night while visiting a friend at Bartonville, a suburb of Hamilton. Le Blanc was arrested Saturday in a house on Bartlett Ave., Toronto.

Le Blanc was arrested by Detective Sgt. John McArthur, who on Saturday was putting in his last day of duty on the city force after 30 years' service. In his room the officer found a Sten gun, a loaded revolver, and $2,600 tucked away in an old suit case.

In the house at Bartonville police found a club bag containing $3,000 and a loaded revolver. In a hotel room at Hamilton, rented by Lake, police found $2,037 and a loaded revolver. In the hotel garage they found a motor car which police said had been purchased by Lake for $900.

When arrested Lake and LeBlanc were wearing air force uniforms and Lake had a D.F.M. ribbon on his tunic. Police said the uniforms were bought in Montreal and that there were wings on both. Police said Lake was in the air force a year ago, but was discharged.

Lake was arrested for auto theft last July, but jumped bail. Detective Sergeant Maxwell Richardson found Lake had left his old home at Port Credit and had gone to Montreal with a man named Le Blanc. Detective Sergeant Barber and Detective Sullivan were looking for the same men in connection with the robbery of the People's Watch Company, Dundas St. W., when jewelry and bonds valued at $4,500 were stolen.

Richardson, Barber and Sullivan visited Hamilton last week and found that two men wearing air force uniforms answered the description of two of the men wanted. Friday night the two men were taken into custody by Hamilton detectives.

Detective Sergeant John Nimmo and Detective Edmund Tong, who had also been working on the case, brought Lake and Le Blanc back to Toronto.

Police said all three men arrested had been working at war plants. Lake and Le Blanc are charged with the jewelry robbery and Scrafield, William Bennet, Lake Shore Rd., Lakeview, and Harry Franklin, 24, are charged with receiving the jewelry. Lake Le Blanc, Scrafield and Bennet are also charged with the armed robbery of a taxicab in Montreal last month. The car used in the Bank of Montreal robbery, police say, was recovered last week at London, Ont.

Lake, Le Blanc and Scrafield appeared in police court before Magistrate Browne Saturday and were remanded without bail until Sept. 17. They are also charged with shooting with intent to maim R. Purton, manager of the bank.

Discharged Soldier Fined On Liquor Count

"This boy has been in the army where there were no age restrictions as to buying liquor. He's out now but thought he still had the right to buy beer," was the explanation given by Inspector James F. Reid to the court this morning after Patrick Hobbins, 18, had pleaded guilty to illegally purchasing liquor, while a minor.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., fined the accused $10 and $2.50 costs.

There was a second charge against Hobbins of assault but it was enlarged until tomorrow when Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., reported that he and Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who was appearing for Hobbins had agreed upon a postponement of the case for one day.

R.C.A.F. Planes Crash

Next-of-kin have been notified, and the pilot's name will be issued shortly.

LINDSAY

Cafes To Work Full Time For Fair Guests

LINDSAY, Sept. 13—(ENS)—Rumors that restaurants would be served in some capacity out of the closed part time during the Lindsay Central Exhibition were definitely spiked in a statement made by Manager-Secretary B. L. McLean today.

"Visitors to Lindsay can be assured that they will receive proper accommodation," he stated. "Arrangements have been completed for cafes to have extra supplies that will allow them to cater to the full demands of the public. In addition to this, one building at the fair grounds has been given over to a women's organization to provide meals on the grounds. Last year 6,000 meals were served but it is believed that this year's attendance will break all records arrangements have been made accordingly.

Provide Homes

"To provide sleeping accommodation for visitors from out of town we have organized a register at the Fair Board office," Mr. McLean said. "And have a list of nearly 100 private homes to provide quarters for close to 1,000 people. In past years many visitors came just for the day but it is believed now in view of travelling difficulties that exhibitors and others having a major interest in activities at the exhibition will need special accommodation.

"We have always received wonderful response from Peterborough," Mr. McLean added, "and this year arrangements have been made with CHEX to broadcast during the three days. We are regarding Friday as "Peterborough Day" and special bus facilities will be arranged between that city and Lindsay."

The Lindsay Fair will be officially opened on Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. by Premier George Drew. Premier Drew will be guest of the Lindsay service clubs and the Fair Board directors at a special luncheon in his honor.

Sorry No Japanese

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Sept. 13. — (AP)—Lt.-Col. James Roosevelt was surprised, too, when he landed with American and Canadian forces on Kiska and discovered the Japanese had sneaked away.

"Of course I was glad that it was not necessary to sacrifice any lives." the President's eldest son told newsmen here, "but when we landed we were in a mood to give them what as coming to them."

Citizens Shiver Keep Eyes On City Supply

That nip in the atmosphere this September morn should accentuate household interest in the moving fact that hardwood bought by Welfare Officer Metheral is rolling into the city's yard.

The fuel committee of the council authorized him to buy up to 5,000 cords, to be used as an emergency pile. The council's intention was broadly to stock enough solid wood of the hard varieties to supply winter needs of families who could not get it elsewhere.

But, the unusually early incidence of chill weather has disclosed that many homes are without fuel, according to reports from dealers and the welfare office.

Two Suggestions.

Two suggestions come to the shivering surface—one, that the fuel committee should reconsider its policy in both aspects of supply and demand; on the one hand the extension of its purchase limit beyond 5,000 cords and the other relating to distribution, letting the wood be sold and delivered now, when its need is already keenly felt, especially if there is prospect of more that could be bought through Mr. Metheral's efforts.

Incidentally it is perhaps hardly fair to mention the city's purchasing against the restriction of price on the local dealers. The municipal plan was to build up a wood supply within reasonable price terms, but these limits would exceed the price the dealers could pay and keep under the ceiling and also make any profit at all.

Suggestion to the council is that some survey should be made to determine whether the need of fuel wood is substantially more than the council's expectation. At any rate the first objective seems to be inadequate for anything like community comfort according to the enquiries which already have been heard. Sale of cord lots and further orders to producers seem to be warranted by the quick surge of enquiries with the sudden vanishing of summer.

Wardens Earn Bond

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 13 — (AP) — Sure, said Mrs. Florence Rosnick to her air raid warden, she wanted to buy a War Bond but all she had was a collection of pennies. It took 20 other wardens to count out the 3.750 pennies for her $50.00 bond.

Milk For Britain

Joe Jebson, "Egg Buster," contributed $1.20 to the Milk for Britain Fund. Joe is quite an artist at throwing eggs around, but apparently the egg trick failed on Satuday night with the result that he had to contribute $1.20 to the Milk for Britain Fund. There has also been received $5.00 from the Tillicum Class of the Keene United Church. This class has made several donations to the fund.

Huggins-Miller Nuptials Saturday at St. Paul's

A charming wedding took place Saturday at 2.00 in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church with Rev. Dr. J. D. Smart officiating when Helen Elizabeth Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Miller, became the bride of Russel George Huggins son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Huggins. The church was decorated for the ceremony with smoky rose gladioli and music was provided by Martin B. Chenhall A.R.C.O. at the organ, assisted throughout by George Gatfield, violinist, and Tom Smith, cellist, members of the Gatfield trio. During the signing of the register they played "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in floor-length embossed satin fashioned with a full-length front panel and a full skirt gathered at sides and back to the torso length bodice and falling to the floor in a long train. Tiny buttons fastened the torso bodice from the high sweet-heart neckline to the waist and long fitted sleeves completed the dress. The finger-tip veil of French veiling fell from a head-dress of the same material as the dress, and she carried a white Bible on top of which lay a white orchid tied with mauve velvet ribbon.

Mrs. Mel. McKee was matron of honor and Miss Norah Ann Murphy of Oshawa, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. They were frocked in gowns of turquoise silk jersey, similar to the bride's except that they had very deep sweet-heart necklines. They wore old-fashioned broad-brimmed garden hats of mission rose velvet and carried bouquets of smoky rose gladioli arranged in a basket effect and hanging close to the floor from long ribbon streamers.

Mr. Norman B. Allen was best man and the ushers were Flying Officer John McMillan of Dunnville and Mr. Thomas McMillan.

A wedding reception was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. where the guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore an aqua blue redingote dress with a hat of black hatter's silk trimmed with black feathers, black accessories, and a corsage of rapture roses.

For her wedding trip, the bride chose a gray tailored suit with navy accessories, gray squirrel furs and a matching topcoat. They will live in Peterborough.

DOROTHY DIX

WIVES WANT FIFTY-FIFTY HUSBANDS BUT BALK AT SHARING WORRY.

Men Get Skimmed Milk and Like It; Wives Select Husbands' Clothes.

Women are always talking about the fifty-fifty husband as the object of their desires in matrimony, but you never hear them say anything about the fifty-fifty wife, probably because there is no such person. Women do not wish to share equally with their husbands in the work and worry as well as the pleasures and perquisites of marriage. Their notion of the ideal one is that in which the wife gets all the cream, while the husband has to subsist on skimmed milk, and like it.

You can see this illustrated in a thousand ways. In their attitude towards each other, to begin with. The wife wants to be the adored instead of the adorer. She wants her husband to continually ply her with flatteries and tell had how beautiful and wonderful she is. She wants him to beat the cymbals and ballyhoo what a marvellous cook and manager his wife is if she makes edible biscuit and keeps reasonably near the limit of her budget.

But almost as rare as hen's teeth are women who continue to be lovers after marriage. They don't feel called upon to tell her husbands that every day in every way they grow dearer to them, and that in their eyes these husbands still look like romantic heroes, no matter if they have lost their hair and acquired a paunch. Nor do they bother to let their husbands see that they consider them world-beaters, and that the only reason they are not President is because they didn't go in for politics. Yet heart-hunger isn't exclusively female complaint. Men have it, too, and just as many husbands as wives would appreciate a pat on the head now and then and a few thank-yous.

When a girl marries one of the pleasures she looks forward to is the fun she will have in making her husband over, according to her own pattern of what a husband should be. Before they have gotten back from the bridal tour she has begun altering all his tastes and habits, and the wife arrogates to herself the right to pick out his church for him, decide his politics, select his neckties and clothes, and drag him to philharmonic concerts when he wants to go to prize fights.

But Reno is the answer, if you should be foolish enough to ask what would happen if a husband tried to change his wife from what she is to what he would like her to be. Any judge would grant a wife a decree absolute who could prove that her husband picked out her hats and made her wear dresses when her taste ran to slacks.

Few wives ever go fifty-fifty with their husbands about the home. The general idea is that the husband's part is to suport it, while the wife's prorata consists in monopolizing it. It is the wife who decides the location and whether the house shall be early Georgian or modern cigar box. She picks out the decorations and the furniture, what colors he likes, and whether without even asking the poor simp he wants to be comfortable or artistic. She spreads herself all over the place and he is lucky if he gets even so much as a hook in a closet for his very own. As for having a place in which to keep his cherished collection of butterflies, pipes or whatnot, that's to laugh. There wouldn't be room enough for what the wife calls "his junk" even if it were as big as the Pentagon.

It is the wife who decided who shall come to the house. It is her family who camp perpetually in the guest room, while the husband's are infrequent visitors. It is the wife's friends who get the warm welcome, and the husband's who are served cold shoulder And no matter how much of the gourmet a man may have been before marriage, after the wedding he eats what his wife sets beore him, asks no questions, makes no comment—or else—

You might think that children are a sort of partnership affair in which a husband and wife would share equally, but such is not the case. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred they are mother's exclusive possession, and when father ventures to express an opinion about their upbringing he is told where he gets off in no uncertain terms. The only right the average father has in his children is the privilege to pay their bills.

All of which shows that while a fifty-fifty marriage would be an ideal relationship between a husband and wife, it will never be acceptable to women. They would want to change the ratio to, say, 95 per cent for wives and 5 per cent for husbands.

Her Mary Queen of Scots head-dress was accented with tiny white blossoms which held the floor-length illusion veil. Her only ornament was a triple strand of miniature pearls. Miss Kae Walsh, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid in a gown of pink mist and a coronet headdress of pink illusion net. She carried pink briarcliffe roses. Mr. Edward O'Brien was best man and the ushers were C.S.M. Jack Duignan and Mr. Joseph Ludlow, of Toronto.

Roast Beef and Yorkshire Pudding

In wartime, before we serve this old favourite, let's be sure we know how to cook it economically

There's nothing like roast beef! But when even a 4 lb. roast—like the one we picture—takes 4 coupons, we certainly want to make the most of it! And that's where modern cooking methods are so important.

Save ¾ lb. on a 4 lb. roast

Yes, by low temperature cooking, with no searing, we can save nearly 20% of the precious meat! The safe rule to follow is to keep your oven at 325° for all roasting. Allow about 28 minutes a pound for small bone-in roasts of beef, 35 for lamb, 35 to 40 for pork and veal. If you like meat very well done, increase the time ; ; . for rare beef decrease it. For larger roasts (above 5 lbs.), allow five minutes less per pound.

Extend your Roast Beef with Martha Logan's Yorkshire Pudding

In Yorkshire the rule used to be "pudding before meat," to dull the family appetites before the precious meat was served.

Here is an old Yorkshire recipe for "pudding":—

1 cup flour — 1 cup milk
2 eggs — drippings from roast
salt to taste

Sift flour with pinch of salt. Beat the eggs well and add milk. Blend egg and milk mixture with flour and beat vigorously. Cook in hot drippings from roast (a separate pan may be used) for half an hour. Cut into squares and serve.

The cooking time-table in Martha Logan's "Meat Complete" is invaluable for economical wartime cooking. Send 10¢ for this famous handbook of meat cookery to Dept. OK35, Swift Canadian Co. Limited, Toronto.

Lakeshore Team Combines Win At Lacrosse

MIMICO, Sept. 13—Lakeshores, Ontario Lacrosse Association doormats, won their way to the final round for the senior championship when they trimmed St. Catharines Athletics, 12-1, Saturday night at Drummond Park, Mimico, before a crowd of about 1,200.

Bill Mackie scored for St. Kitts in the second minute of the first period, and after that it was all Lakeshores, even though the Athletics never gave up trying.

Two penalties to Morton and Cheevers in the first period for hitting Lee plus the fine work of Piper Bain and Joe Murphy were the big factors in St. Kitts' elimination. The work of the Lakeshore veterans incidentally plus the efforts of their imports proved their first-game win was no fluke.

Tommy Love scored five goals for the winners, while Murphy had five assists. Jordan, Bain, and Steggall starred for them, while the work of Teather, Whitley, Cheevers and C. Madsen was good for St. Kitts.

St. Catharines — Whittaker, C. Madsen, F. Madsen, T. Madsen, Mackie, Morton, Teather, Whitley, Wright, Hope, Cheevers, Myer, Worthy, Wilson, Coupland.

Lakeshores—Hartley, J. Murphy, Vipond, G. Gair, Lee, Love, Stewart, Bain, Steggall, McDonald, Curran, Jordan, Smith, N. Gair.

Officials — M. Murphy, Mimico, and Marty Cahill, St. Catharines.

BRAMPTON, Sept. 13—Mimico-Brampton Combines eliminated the Brampton Army Bullets from the battle for the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior championship with a 20-12 victory Saturday night here.

Trailing 4-1 at the end of the first quarter, the Army rallied in the second to make the half-time score 7-6 in their favor. George and Wilf Thompson sparked Combines in the third, who showed their heels to the Army and ran up the score to an advantageous 16-9 height. The fine work of Bill Brunskill and Scoop Hayes in the final quarter nullified the desperate attempts of the Bullets to pull the game out of the fire.

Mimico-Brampton — Large, G. Thompson, Arthurs, Gimblett, W. Mullis, W. Thompson, Brunskill, Rock, Masters, Hayes, Bryan, Graham, Smith, Isaacs, Harrison.

Brampton Army — Mortimore, Cassidy, Haney, Ingam, McMahon, B. White, T. White, J. Creighton, Teasdale, Dixon, Thorpe, Burrill, Campbell, McLean, Red Creighton.

Officials—Mooney Gibson, Brampton, and Max Peart, Port Colborne.

To Answer Questions

"If accepted in the R.C.A.F., do I have to enlist immediately?" Bring this and other questions you may have in mind to Section Officer M. P. Thompson, who will be here at the Y.W.C.A. tomorrow up to 10 o'clock p.m. for the express purpose of answering questions of those interested in learning more about the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. You are under no obligation whatsoever to meet and quiz this well-known interviewing officer.

Need For Airwomen Is Acute

Claiming that woman-power is as essential as man-power to win this war, Section Officer M. P. Thompson, who will visit here soon with the R.C.A.F. Mobile Recruiting Unit, recently stated in an interview "that the hundreds upon hundreds of airmen, who are waiting to remuster to aircrew for a chance to fight in the sky, will be forced to remain grounded here in Canada unless enlistments in the Women's Division of the Royal Canadian Air Force show a substantial increase in the next few months."

"None of the schools," she went on to say, "of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, which has been largely responsible for our supremacy over Europe, must be allowed to close owing to the lack of airmen. This can never happen if Canadian women will volunteer to take over the ground duties of the men who are waiting to remuster to Aircrew." She added, "thousands of women between the ages of 18 and 45 are now doing jobs quite useful to the war effort, but at R.C.A.F. stations across the Dominion there are much more important jobs awaiting them."

Special Allowances

According to Section Officer Thompson, it has just been announced that wives of R.C.A.F. men enlisting in the Women's Division will continue to receive dependent's allowance from their husbands; while airwomen' dependents (parents or other close relatives) may now receive dependent's allowance at the same rate as that paid to dependents of airmen.

It was learned that increases in pay have also been announced. In group "A" for example, Aircraftswomen class II now get $1.80 a day; Aircraftswomen class I, $1.85; Leading Aircraftswomen, $1.95; Corporal, $2.10; Sergeant, $2.50; Flight Sergeant, $2.75. Officers receive 80% of the pay of an R.C.A.F. officer of equal rank. Airwomen, it is also understood, do not pay income tax.

Jobs Thrilling

Action, interest and definite post-war value go with the many vital jobs now waiting to be filled by patriotic Canadian women. Contrary to popular belief, previous experience is not essential to enlist. The R.C.A.F. schools women for as many as forty trades, including wireless operators, photography, hospital assistants, dental assistants, equipment assistants, laboratory assistants, operating-room clerks, teleprinter operators, telephone operators, dispensers.

Enlistment Now Possible Here

Formerly, it was necessary for those desirous of joining the R.C.A.F. to journey to Toronto for completing enlistment. Now, enlistments can be made here by the R.C.A.F. Mobile Unit which will be headquartered at the Y.M.C.A., September 14 and 15. Travelling warrants to Manning Depots are furnished to all those enlisting in this district.

For Tuesday, September 14.

Generally adverse conditions may dominate the affairs of this day, both personal and business. It would be well to work along lines of least resistanse, by attending only to routine or imperative matters until the storm clouds pass away and a more encouraging atmosphere prevails. Elders, superiors, and others may be found antagonistic or unco-operative, there may be tricky and underhand situations to cope with, and stubborn obstacles or impediments combine to make it a day to seek diversion or cultivate philosophic attitudes.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a year in which it may be difficult to gain much stability or headway in affairs, because of impediments, obstacles, delays and disappointments, difficult to manipulate into constructive channels. As well there may be treachery, intrigue and peculiar circumstances, with elders and superiors opposing cherished plans. Domestic and affectional life as well as the health may have their problems and perplexities. With fortitude and a philosophic state of mind determine to make the best of passing frustrations and attend to routine or urgent demands.

A child born on this day may be stubborn, difficult, lacking in energy and ambition, and disposed to do things in the easiest way, thus antagonizing elders or superiors. Its health should be taken into account.

To accommodate prospective candidates unable to visit Recruiting Centres, the R. C. A. F. sends Mobile Recruiting Units on periodic visits to outlying communites.

Members of the R. C. A. F. (W. D.) who are selected as Chefs take their courses at the R. C. A. F. School of Cookery, Guelph, Ontario, on completion of basic training at Rockcliffe.

Sixteen Teams To Enter Five-Pin Loop

Representatives for eleven teams were on hand at the Men's City Five Pin Bowling League meeting held at Duffus Alleys on Friday night and announced their intentions of competing in the bowling schedule which will commence around October 7th. It was decided that the league will be limited to sixteen teams and entries will close on September 30th.

The league rules of last year were discussed at length and were finally adopted for the forthcoming season while a shuffle in the slate of officers for 1943 and 1944 was made necessary when Bill Martin resigned as secretary-treasurer. H. G. Freeman was elected president, W. A. Stanbury vice-president and H. J Fitzgerald secretary-treasurer while the captain of each team will be a member of the executive board. Fred Scates will be asked again to look after the publicity department of the league.

The teams ready for action now and who will stand pat with the same line-ups as last year are the Cleanrites with Doug. Abraham, Bill Harris, Holly Mowry, Bud Goodson, Ray Clifford and Frank Wood, Sunocos have acquired Bill Stanbury to team up with Roy Lewis, Walter Crary, Dick Martyn and Harold Davis. Jack Wade of the Outlaws will have himself, Maurice Caccavella, Toots Collins, Ken Whatley and Buck Guerin while the Big Five will depend again on Fred Scates, Frank Maloney, Maurice Holt, Norman Giles and Tommy Martin.

Two new outfits obtained from the C.G.E. where scores of top-notchers hail from are the Machine Shop of Bert Bailey, Charlie Thomas, Jack Stewart, Ollie Taylor, Walter Ridley and Jack Menzies, while the other team will consist of Jack Patte, Bill Howes, George Niles, Fred Willison, Dick Pearson and Tom McPhate. Willison will captain the latter squad which is unnamed as yet. All eyes are on Fred Martin awaiting the release of one of his last year's champion Jays. Fred may or may not apply the axe but a mighty good man will be on the loose if Jay's make up their minds to work with only five bowlers.

Les Moore of the Westclox is definitely in with a team but his players names are not available at present. The same goes for Freeman's and the Old Timers while Bob Everett of the Empress is all set with the exception of one man. As it is now Bob has some hot stuff with Eddie Johnston' Alf Mattucci, Roy Suddards and Frank McCormick.

To date nothing has been heard from last year's Canada Packers, K. of C., Commandos, Swartz, or Magic Carpets, who should be able to furnish real strong competition.

Chess Epidemic Sweeps Britain

By FOSTER BARCLAY,
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (CP) —Chess, a game many people belittle and class as fit only for old fogys and those with nothing better to do, has gained unbounded popularity in Britain since war started.

There is no special reason. The game has just "caught on" and is in the midst of an epidemic such as existed during the Victoria era. Thousands of servicemen and civilians who once disdained the ancient pastime have become quite familiar with knights, bishops, rooks and pawns and argue for hours over the merits of opening and methods of attack.

This wartime boom has astounded and pleased even the most ardent chess lover and amateurs who take the game more seriously than any professional. In fact, the game is so popular the enthusiasts seized discussion about post-war educational plans as an occasion to suggest that the Government "find a place for chess in the curriculum." The British Chess Federation shelved the proposal.

The Times also took a dim view. After all, it is a game, the paper remarked.

Education and Entertainment.

"The surest way of changing this and making chess detested by young people would be to transform it from a game into a class-room subject," it continued. "Prattle about its valuable mental training is, to be frank, absurb. High chess ability seems to be some special kink in the brain."

That statement has been proved true on many occasions. Often a first-class prize winner is particularly stupid in every other way. Many brilliant persons, scientists, mathematicians, scholars and authors, spend hours poring over a board, but always remain among the world's worst performers.

Then there is that class who forever will find chess a boring game and compulsory lessons for youngsters of this type would be torture, not an education. Imagine them bringing home report cards with the notation: "Brown is backward like his pawns.... Wheatley shows no initiative .... Eccles' attack has no organization."

Choice of openings, too, would likely be influenced by current events. Tartakower's attack would probably become popular when it was realized that the chess master is a lieutenant in the Fighting French Army. And who would want the Berlin Defence to succeed?

It might also be recorded that back in 1905 James Mason wrote in his book, Art of Chess; "The Sicilian defence has been fairly tried and found wanting." If later chess commentators dispute his judgment, at least it will be confirmed by military historians.

Enlistment of flying duties in the R. C. A. F. is made in one general category—Aircrew. Selection for specific duties is made at Manning Depots based on the particular qualifications of the recruit.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: The N.H.L. is waiting for the green light from Ottawa but it looks like action on the professional front again this season....The hockey will not be so hot but it is a safe bet the admission schedule will not reflect the change....Doings over the week-end in the International League have tossed Montreal into the playoffs with the Toronto Leafs....It looked like Rochester before that....Elmer Riddle is almost a sure bet for the 20-game class. His win over Pittsburg yesterday was the Red ace's 19th triumph of the season....Dzuria who played hockey for Trenton Fliers against the Petes last winter is a member of the Trenton R.C.A.F. ball club....So too is the veteran "Matty" Matthews, former Oshawa outfielder....First game of the world series will be played at New York on October 5 and the starting pitchers look like Spud Chandler for the Yanks and Mort Cooper for the Cards....Incidentally the first three games are scheduled for New York and the series will be finished in St. Louis....Red Dutton will continue to head the N.H.L. until after the war and that decision will meet with general approvement.... Stratford girls have eliminated the Guelph Coronettes from the second round of the provincial playdowns while St. Catharines Merry Macs knocked the Toronto Victory Aircraft girls out of the running with a double win in Toronto after losing at home.

At Battle Front

CAIRNS, Queensland, Australia, Sept. 13 (CP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has arrived in this north Australia seacoat town, and now is a few hours by air from the fighting front in New Guinea. Although this settlement never has been bombed, Japanese have passed over on their way to attack Townsville, 175 miles to the south.

Women enlisting in the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) who are selected for Equipment Assistants or Accounting Clerks take their courses at Trenton, Ontario, on completion of their basic training at Rockcliffe.

Rough Battle Likely In Semi-Final

To-night's the big night for the grapple fans at the Brock Arena where Earl McCready and Gentleman Jack Clayborne head a top-notch wrestling program. Besides the main bout, which should be a classic of the best of wrestling, there are two other matches which can stand on their own feet in the matter of action. The semi-final bout brings in Rough-house Dick Hogan (whose real name is Dick Bishop) against Irish Pat Flanagan. And that should be something. Hogan is a rugged gent when he's wrestling. In fact he seems to aspire to be known as the Roughhouse King. He's strong too and can put in some terrific licks when he sees an opportunity. But in Flanagan, the ex-Coast Guarder, is up against a superior clever wrestler who knows his stuff with a Capital S.

The third match on to-night's program is a return between the Brantford Buzzer, Joe Maich and Flt. Sergeant Ted Miller of the R.C.A.F. Station at Trenton. Maich and Miller are fast-moving, clean-cut grapplers who give action every moment they are on a mat. Miller is an instructor in Commando and Jiu-Jitsu technique and is liable to come up with some new ones for Jumping Joe this time.

The McCready-Clayborne match is an elimination bout, with the winner pointing to a championship match with Whipper Watson's Empire title.

Colorful Hooked Rug Lends Charm to a Room

Simple and Inexpensive to Make

A hooked rug gives your home such a warm, intimate air! And you can hook this charming design easily.

Use any material you have on hand (though woollen is best) and as for colors—the more the merrier! Lovely together are rose, green, black, beige, orchid.

How to begin? On a large piece of burlap draw the shape of the rug, 23 by 37 inches. Then draw a 1-inch border and rule off 15 boxes, each 7 inches square. The floral and geometric designs you draw from patterns.

Now, after sewing carpet binding round your rug and tacking to a wood frame, you can hook.

With one hand, hold a strip of fabric (cut ½ inch wide) under the rug. With the other hand thrust the hook through the burlap and pull up the strip, leaving a loop ¼ inch high on top of the burlap. Carefully following your color scheme, hook the same way until the rug is finished.

Our 32-page booklet gives exact instructions and patterns for making this beautiful hooked rug. Also tells how to make other lovely hooked styles, as well as woven, braided, knitted, tufted and crocheted rugs.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service for your copy of HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN RUGS. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of Booklet.

No Lending Rations

OTTAWA, Sept. 13 — (CP) — The Prices Board regulation which forbids the lending or borrowing of rationed goods—even on a small scale—is designed to check the development of a "black market" in ordinary foodstuffs which were obtained legally in the first place. Authorities yesterday expressed agreement that the regulation applies even to the minor borrowings of cups of sugar and pinches of tea between neighbours.

More Butter On Hand

OTTAWA, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Enlarged butter production compared with 1942 and greater stocks on hand were reported officially yesterday, but they were associated with a warning by the Prices Board that even under rationing butter consumption is higher than it used to be. Plans are being made to provide "some" Canadian butter to the United Kingdom. A total of 75,457,577 pounds of creamery butter was on hand on September 1, compared with 48,746,594 pounds on the same date last year.

Evaders Punished

TORONTO, Sept. 13 —(CP) — Jail terms or fines were given yesterday to six of 10 men arrested Thursday on charges of violating National Selective Service regulations. Meanwhile police and Selective Service officials continued a search of Toronto poolrooms, bowling alleys and beer parlors for suspected draft dodgers and persons violating Selective Service rules.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

SQUEEZE AFTER SQUEEZE

"PROGRESSIVE Squeeze" is the name used by veteran students of bridge to describe the only kind of squeeze play which produces two tricks by squeezing. All others build up only one. It consists of leading a card of a suit on which the squeezed opponent cannot follow suit, but must select a discard from one of the three other suits. Whichever he discards will build a winner for the squeezer in its suit. Thereupon that winner is led, squeezing the same opponent again, this time between the two remaining suits.

North certainly bid them high, wide and handsome, because of super-confidence in his partner as much as in his reading of the high cards shown by South's bids. He put the weight on South, who came through, however, aided by West's action in bidding, doubling and leading the club K. He saw 11 tricks in sight and decided to play West for all outstanding high cards by trying a progressive or repeated squeeze.

Order of tricks brought the club A, diamond A, K, Q and J, heart A and K, diamond 7 and finally the diamond 6. When that was led, the dummy, having discarded one club, now threw another and retained four spades. South kept his spade 7, heart 10 and club J-10. Poor West, trying to hold three spades, had to discard either his heart Q or club Q. He chose the heart, whereupon the heart 10 squeezed him between his three spades and the club. He finally tossed the latter, so that the declarer really now had four trick winners left to use on the last three tricks.

No matter what West did, however, he was licked. If he had thrown his club Q then, two clubs and two spades would have finished the hand for South.

LAKEFIELD

Increase Noted In Upper School

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 13—(ENS)—Principal J. F. Harvey at the High School Board session Thursday, stated prospects for the Upper School which is expected to open about September 21 are for larger classes than in 1942.

Lower school attendance was slightly down at 47 on opening day but more are expected to report shortly. Grade IX on opening day had 17 village and 8 county pupils and Grade 10 had 12 village and 10 county pupils.

The customary library grant of $50 was passed. While that for the school field day was left in abeyance until it is definitely decided whether the field day will he held but thought with the late opening it might not be advisable.

J. W. Hamilton of Toronto was introdueed to the trustees as the new science master.

Fuel Settled.

Extra storm windows were ordered for several of the rooms not already provided. With the coal shortage serious in the country and prospects for curtailment in many public buildings, both High and Public Schools in the village will be heated as usual this year. Chairman J. W. Ridpath reporting coal and wood enough for both schools already stored.

Accounts Passed.

Attending were J. W. Ridpath, Frank L. Erskine, E. W. Bailey and secretary, Miss Grace Yonge.

Here's Another Incensed "Cat" To Claw The Axis

This tough-looking warcraft is the U.S. Navy's newest fighter, the Grumman "Hellcat," which is already in action against the enemy. The "Hellcat" is rated far superior to its illustrious forbear, the "Wildcat," which has made an enviable reputation in overwhelming the best fighters and bombers the Japs, Germans and Italians could put into the air. In the 400-mile-per-hour class, the "Hellcat," though a land-based warcraft, is adaptable to the flight decks of U.S. and British aircraft carriers.

MILLBROOK

Carmel Church To Celebrate Long History

MILLBROOK, Sept. 13 (ENS) — Historical research in connection with Carmel United Church has brought to light the fact that it was undoubtedly the first church in South Cavan, and later with Fallis Line and Zion, made up what used to be known as the South Cavan circuit.

The original building, probably now more than a century old, was first located about one mile west of the Carmel intersection, but in 1870, seventy-three years ago, was moved to its present site on the corner where concession two of Cavan township crosses the gravel road by which many prefer to travel south through Perrytown and Canton to Port Hope.

Among the ministers who served as pastors on the Cavan South Methodist charge were Rev. Wilmot Clarke, Rev. S. C. Moore, Rev. C. E. Cragg, now of Toronto, Rev. H. W. Foley, Rev. H. Latimer, Rev. Alex Edmison, Rev. G. C. R. McQuade, Rev. D. R. Clare. Several of these are now superannuated, and a number are no longer living.

No Church

When the South Cavan circuit was merged with the Millbrook charge, preaching services were suspended for some time, and a Sunday School carried on, only a few names of superintendents being available, William Lunn, Fred Hard and the present holder of this office, George Patterson, having given faithful and efficient service. Within recent years regular services have been resumed, and on Sunday, September 12, the church observed its anniversary with Rev. F. W. Craik of Saint James United Church, Peterborough as the guest preacher.

During the pastorate of the Rev. W. W. Jones, now of Osgoode Station, near Ottawa, Carmel church was thoroughly renovated, and upon reopening observed its 60th anniversary on its present site, no one knowing for how many years it was located and used for public worship when in stood on the west line near the present public school of S.S. No. 19.

The pastor, Rev. A. L% Sisco had charge of the anniversary on Sunday, and the special music was provided by members of St. Andrew's choir of Millbrook, under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Johnston.

Recall Old Times

There are still members of the Epworth League of Christian Endeavor of former years in connection with the Methodist Church at Millbrook, albeit now widely scattered, who can recall the young people from that society going to the Carmel appointment to help in providing the program for the social gatherings, the sleigh drive and the fine supper served by the Carmel folk at the close, being strong incentives toward granting the assistance, in music and recitations, requested. As neither dishes nor kitchen, considered as necessary equipment in the modern church, were features of those days, the service of the refreshments was a real task.

Russians Land At Novorossisk

LONDON, Sept. 13 — (CP) The German high command in a broadcast communique today said the Red Army had made a large-scale landing attempt in the Novorossisk area where the Germans still hold a small bridgehead in the Caucasus and that fighting still was going on as German forces attempted to wipe out the landing parties.

The announcement admitted the loss of Mariupol, port on the northern shore of the Sea of Azov which the Russians announced last night had fallen to their swiftly advancing southern army.

Intimating the Russians may be preparing still another offensive—on the northern front in the Leningrad sector—another broadcast said that shock troop and reconnaissance activity was on the increase there.

Fresh Russian deployments, particularly on the front east of Leningrad, "leaves the conclusion that the Soviets planned a new attack in this area," the broadcast said.

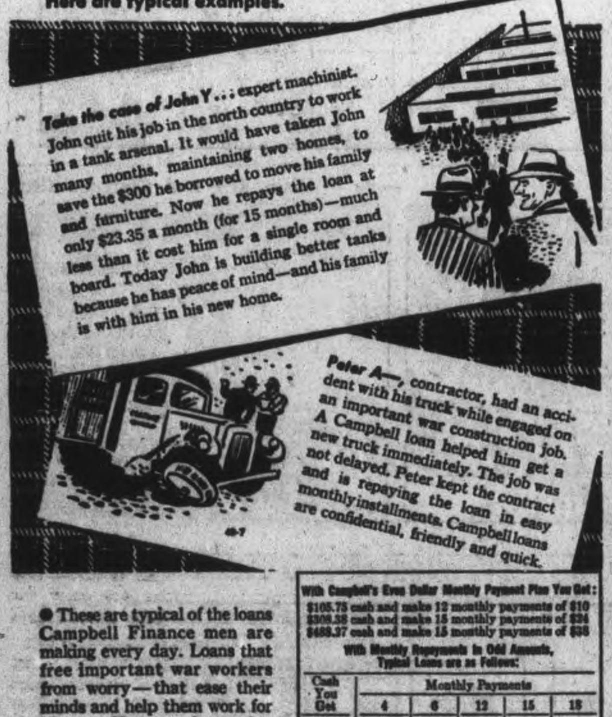
IS LENDING MONEY A WAR INDUSTRY?

While Campbell loans are not as important as ships or planes, in many instances they have helped the men who build the weapons of war. Here are typical examples.



Take the case of John Y... expert machinist. John quit his job in the north country to work in a tank arsenal. It would have taken John many months, maintaining two homes, to save the $300 he borrowed to move his family and furniture. Now he repays the loan at only $23.35 a month (for 15 months)—much less than it cost him for a single room and board. Today John is building better tanks because he has peace of mind—and his family is with him in his new home.

Peter A—, contractor, had an accident with his truck while engaged on an important war construction job. A Campbell loan helped him get a new truck immediately. The job was not delayed. Peter kept the contract and is repaying the loan in easy monthly installments. Campbell loans are confidential, friendly and quick.

● These are typical of the loans Campbell Finance men are making every day. Loans that free important war workers from worry—that ease their minds and help them work for Victory. Here are but a few amounts and terms from which they choose, with a car, furniture or the signatures of two friends as the basis: →

With Campbell's Even Dollar Monthly Payment Plan You Get:
$105.75 cash and make 12 monthly payments of $10

RUSSIANS CAPTURE BRYANSK CITY

120 Nazi Fighter-Bombers Oppose Allied Craft Strafing Hun Supply Routes

30 Enemy Vehicles Destroyed By Bombs As They Moved North Away From Advancing Eighth Army

By NOLAND NORGAARD, Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 14—(AP).—The area of Pompei was subjected to devastation last night and yesterday by R.A.F., R.C.A.F. and American aircraft.

R.A.F. and Canadian Wellington bombers strewed bombs along a five-mile stretch of highway near Pompei last night, battering roads along which the Germans are supplying their troops in the Salerno area, 20 airline miles from Naples.

In daylight American two-engined bombers heavily raided railway and road junctions.

The Pompei area was only one of many districts in the vicinity of Naples under heavy bombardment as the northwest African air force continued relentlessly its effort to cut off avenues of reinforcement and supply of the German tank divisions locked in furious battle with the Anglo-American 5th Army at Salerno.

British and American fighters patrolling the skies above the Salerno beachheads shot down 10 of approximately 120 enemy aircraft, mostly Messerschmitt and Focke-Wulf fighter-bombers and Dornier medium bombers, that were encountered.

A third field of major activity of Allied planes was continuous day and night pounding of roads and motor convoys in a 100-mile area between the Salerno battlefields and the toe of Italy where the Anglo-Canadian 8th Army was moving northward.

Dive-bombers knocked out at least 30 enemy vehicles, damaged at least 15 more and blocked the roads at several points, notably north of Liveto, where 10 500-pound bombs were concentrated to wipe out the roadway.

Three-fold Problem

Three-fold related difficulties appear to be causing the stiff resistance the Anglo-American 5th Army is meeting in the Salerno area, where it is generally acknowledged the Allies are having a tougher fight than they ever had in North Africa or Sicily.

The three factors are:

The long distances planes must fly to protect the beachheads.

The difficulty of building up a heavy attacking force because of German ability to concentrate against a small area.

Consequent in ability so far to push the Germans back far enough to get the beaches out of Nazi artillery range.

Have 500 Planes

It is known that the R.A.F. concentrated 500 Spitfires, Lightnings and Mustangs over the Salerno beaches Friday and that these pilots saw only 120 enemy planes. As late as Sunday, the R.A.F. was able to fly 500 sorties over the area, but the nearest airfield now in Allied hands is some 150 miles away, as against the 40 or 50 miles the Germans must fly to get to the bat-area.

It is generally expected it will take some time to get suitable fields in shape near the bridgehead. Meantime, Allied fighters can provide air cover only by using long-range gasoline tanks. The R.A.F. considers an airfield 80 miles from the target ideal for fighter cover.

Some military strategists consider the present phase one of the most difficult stages of any tough amphibious operation, because, although the beachheads are established, it is difficult to build up a sufficient attacking force when strong enemy opposition is able to concentrate on a few small, vital points.

Officials Warn Too Many Sows Being Marketed

OTTAWA, Sept. 14. —(CP). — Need for drastic action to prevent threatened reduction in Ontario hog production next year was stressed to-day by Ontario Agricultural Department officials attending an Inter-Provincial agricultural conference here.

"The immediate problem is to retard the liquidation of sows and to encourage the replacement of some that have been liquidated," said a review of the swine situation in Ontario presented by the Ontario delegates, W. R. Reek, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and W. P. Watson, of the Livestock Branch.

The review said that since there is little prospect of lower grain prices, increased production costs must be provided for through increased hog prices. Price for top-grade hogs, it suggested, should be 'in the neighborhood" of 15 cents a pound live weight.

"It is our opinion that the price just quoted must be established if Ontario hog production is to be maintained anywhere near the levels that hav existed from 1940 to 1943 inclusive."

Can Produce 2 Million.

If the proposed adjustment in price were made, said the review, "Ontario can be expected to market 2,000,000 hogs in 1944.

"This marks the lowest number that has been marketed in any year since 1939. However, as stated pre-

Italian Forces Bow To Fascists

Bp FRANK BRUTTO
Associated Press Staff Writer

ON THE SWISS - ITALIAN FRONTIER, Sept. 14.—(AP).—Fascist militiamen, donning their old uniforms, re-appeared to-day on the Swiss-Italian border where they assumed their former duties as the terror of a miniature civil war was said to have broken out in some northern Italian cities.

The newspaper Corriere Del Ticino of Lugano reported that in "a terrible moment of Italian history," bloody encounters between Fascists and Anti-Fascists, especially in Milan, Turin and Bologna, are usually decided in favor of the Fascists by the intervention of the German army.

Old sporadic resistance, the newspaper added, was apparently offered by the Italian troops to the Germans as they occupied northern Italy, city by city, restoring the Fascists to power. In a frontier dispatch, the newspaper said that all Italian resistance to the Germans appeared on the point of collapse.

Haliburton Boy Graduates As Paratrooper

By GREN ALLEN,
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

SHILO CAMP, Man., Sept. 14 — (CP) — Canadian-trained paratroopers to-day are itching for a crack at the enemy.

Lieut. Robert Firlotte, 26, of Campbelltown, N. B., who already has been overseas in this war, appeared to express the feeling of the other young men who received thiir paratroop wings and diplomas here yesterday, when he said:

"I didn't see action the first time, but I'm looking forward to it on the next trip."

At the graduating ceremony of the first class at Canadian Paratroopers Training School, Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of the General Staff, declared Canadian Paratroops will spearhead many future Allied Military campaigns.

Ready For Anything.

Gen. Stuart, recently returned from Allied Operations in Sicily said that airborne troops were used there on a bigger scale than at any time in the present war.

"You are jack-of-all trade fighters," he told the class. "And you will be in the forefront of many Allied military operations."

'Despite the fact the recent Sicily campaign was the first time Allied Paratroopers were used extensively in the present war, there was not any objective given them that was not attained. You, I hope will follow their great example."

Gen. Stuart, with Lt.-Col. G. S. Currie, Deputy Defence Minister, presented the wings and diplomas, respectively, to the 10 officers and 23 other ranks.

The young men had just completed a strenuous four-weeks course in the art of parachuting. In addition to their thorough ground training they each had made five jumps from the air.

Prior to the wings parade students of the school gave a demonstration .This included everything from the initial physical conditioning stage to the actual jumping stage.

Ontario graduates included:

Lt. J. R. Shaw, Walkerton; Cpl. A. Kates, Toronto; L. Cpl. G. F. Bayley, Windsor, Ptes. P. H. Bacon, Hamilton; S. E. Barjarow, Haliburton; J. E. Bobby, Owen Sound; E. F. Cole, Tilsonburg; W. Coulter, Orangeville; T. A. Dodd, Kirkland Lake; D. D. Faubert, Chatham; J. W. Hughes, Sudbury; R. H. Hunter, St. Catharines; W. P. Kimpel, Preston; M. T. Knight, North Orillia.

Savage Nazi Counter Drive Pushes 5th Army Back In Bitter Fight At Salerno

Allied Armies Less Than 100 Miles Apart Huns Have One Big Advantage With Airfields Just 50 Miles From Front

By WES GALLAGHER—Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 14—(AP).—Fresh and heavy Allied reinforcements are being thrown into the fierce battle for the 24-mile Salerno bridgehead in Italy to stem savage Nazi counter-attacks that pushed the 5th Army back at some points, it was announced today.

British and Canadian forces, surging up from southern Italy now stand 100 miles from making a junction to take some of the dangerous pressure off the invasion spearhead there.

The Mediterranean is alive with ships and planes speeding in reinforcements under direct supervision of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It was thought in New York that the movement of ships back from Salerno after bringing in the reserves might have been the basis of a Nazi report of evacuation of troops in the bridgehead.

The bloody Salerno fighting was equal to the desperate battles at Gallipoli in the First Great War.

(German broadcasts asserted the Allies are probably withdrawing to sea as many troops as possible "which means that they have abandoned the enterprise altogether." There was no Allied comment on this report.

German Claim

(The Nazis contended British troops were "decisively beaten," and Americans were "in flight" after suffering 8,000 to 10,000 casualties.

(U.S. troops were thrown out of occupied positions in the Eboli area, southeast of Salerno itself, after being repulsed with heavy losses in attacks on German lines southeast of Eboli, another German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said. The Germans counter-attacked along a wide front, it added.)

Allied headquarters announced that the 8th Army had captured Cosenza in an advance up the toe, and seized Bari 65 miles above Brindisi on the Adriatic coast.

The 8th Army was pushing up past Cosenza and was only about 100 miles south of the lower hinge of the Fifth Army bridgehead. Eboli is 15 miles southeast of Salerno itself.

Allied tanks, infantry and planes supported by naval guns sought to widen the Salerno area bridgehead, only several miles deep at the maximum advance.

Allies Hold Air

The points where the Nazis regained ground were not identified by headquraters.

Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring threw two armored divisions and the reconstituted Hermann Goering division against Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's 5th Army, and overhead increasing numbers of Nazi planes were engaged by hundreds of Allied bombers and fighters.

(There was not the slightest Allied indication of any withdrawal from Salerno as reported by the Germans, who said the withdrawal was continuing this morning, after beginning Monday afternoon. Trans-Ocean, a German propaganda agency, said it was being made "in complete disorder.")

The Hermann Goering division was one of those the Canadian 1st Division faced during the Sicilian campaign. Much of it was believed to have escaped from Sicily and it presumably has been re-equipped since its flight across the Messina Straits.

The Allied communique gave no details of the situation at Salerno, saying merely:—

Counter-Attacking

"Heavy fighting continues on the 5th Army front. The Germans are counter-attacking desperately and at certain points have regained some of the ground taken by us."

The 8th Army advanced approximately 10 miles up the west coast of Italy to reach Cosenza, 90 miles from Reggio di Calabria and at about the centre of the arch of the Italian foot. From there the British and Canadians were 130 air miles from the 5th Army in the Salerno sector.

On the heel of the boot other 8th Army forces were expanding their holdings out of Taranto and Brindisi.

One column was at Bari, 65 miles north of Brindisi on the Adriatic, and another, cutting diagonally across the heel from Taranto, was at Gioja, about midway between the naval base and Bari.

The British and American troops composing Clark's army who were landed on the coastal plain south of Salerno were fighting their way desperately toward the mountains from which the Germans were pouring down a murderous fire on the invasion beaches.

Fighting Heavy.

The Nazis were launching counter-attack after counter-attack seeking to dislodge the Allied infantry and tank units.

"The fighting is extremely heavy and it certainly is the bitterest fighting encountered by an Allied landing force in this war," the military officer said.

The reconstituted Hermann Goering division, the same one which gave the British, Canadians and

Could Heat Fire Hall

MADISON, Ind., Sept. 14—(AP).—The current complication in Fire Chief John Eckert's life is how to dispose of 50 barrels of gasoline without selling it, dumping it or giving it away. An Ohio River gasoline barge, here for repairs, must be rid of its load before a welding torch can be applied. The local ration board says the gas can't be given away, United States Government regulations forbid dumping it in the river, and no ration stamps cover sale in such a situation.

Food Shortage Facing Canada Today

HAMILTON, Sept. 14.—(CP). — Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, to-day told a luncheon of Wentworth County Council that Canadians are "definitely faced with a shortage of food products in a country which has unlimited possibilities for production."

"Responsibility does not rest with the farmers," he said. "Necessities of war have placed great responsibility and a heavy burden on them."

In spite of shortages of farm labor, caused by demands of the armed forces and war industries for manpower, and in spite of unsatisfactory price levels, the farmers of Ontario have done a "magnificent job" in production of essential foodstuffs.

The dairy industry had made a remarkable contribution to this increase. From 1939 to 1942, Ontario production of cheese increased by some 36,500,000 pounds, 40.6 per cent., he said.

In the same period production of milk for processing increased 23.2 per cent. and fluid milk sold in the province increased about 30 per cent.

In three years the number of cattle in the province was increased by about 150,000 head and swine by 315,000 head. In view of the handicaps under which farmers worked it was a "remarkable achievement."

Need More Feed.

"This was made possible by increased production of farm crops required for feeding of livestock," he said.

From 1939 to 1942 mixed grain crops, grown for feed, increased by 42.3 per cent. Corn was increased by 69.3 per cent. and hay, clover and alfalfa by 22 per cent.

"A special effort was made to extend production of flax and from 1939 to 1942, flax production in Ontario was increased by 352 per cent., from 58,000 to 252,000 bushels."

He said that in planning for the postwar period there is a large place for agricultural industry. "The time is ripe, now, to prepare constructive plans for the expansion of agriculture as a major contribution to after the war reconstruction."

Farmers must be organized to meet "great opportunities and great problems" that will face them after the war, he said. Demands for farm products and seed grain and breeding livestock from devastated countries "will be enormous," and will provide greater markets than ever before for our products."

Latest Great Red Victory Breaches Nazi Line Threatens Smolensk Area

Vital German Bastion Lost In 1941 Gives Red Base For Operations Toward Kiev And Lower Dnieper Basin

By E. C. DANIEL—Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 14—(AP). — Russian troops captured the fortress city of Bryansk last night, breaching the Germans' main defence line east of the Dnieper River by seizure of that pivot of central and southern German battlelines and centre of a railway spiderweb serving both fronts.

Evacuation of the keystone city, held by the Germans since October, 1941, was acknowledged today by the German radio soon after Moscow reported that the onpouring Red Army was closing in on the city on the west bank of the Desna River.

Disruption of the rail network vital for German winter transport heightened belief in London that the backward-scurrying Nazis would not be able to halt their retreat before reaching the west bank of the Dnieper.

The speed of their withdrawal toward Kiev and Dnieperopetrovsk on the lower reaches of the river, where only three inadequate bridges and ferry crossings are available, raised hopes that large forces of Nazis might be trapped on the east bank of the Dnieper or even be overtaken while attempting to cross it.

Retreat Orderly.

The German broadcast by DNB asserted Bryansk (normal population 87,000) had been evacuated in good order, and the troops had not been encircled or injured to "a considerable degree."

Again Berlin preceded Moscow in announcing the victory for Russian arms.

Bryansk lies some 80 miles west of Orel.

Its capture removes a bulge in the German line towards Moscow, and throws open the front from Smolensk southward to infiltration and flanking attacks by the Russians that may accelerate retirement of the whole enemy line.

From Bryansk, railroads radiate out to several key bastions in the next Nazi line of defence. One runs northwest to Smolensk, main supply base and headquarters of the whole central front, another reaches southwest to Gomel, rail junction where two lines cross the Sozh river, tributary of the Dnieper.

Railroads Valuable

Still another line pushes deep into the Ukraine to Kiev, overlooking the broad waters of the lower Dnieper.

Use of these railroads and their branches can be turned to reinforcing and supplying the advancing Red Army all up and down the Dnieper Plains.

Bryansk also eventually will give the Soviets an alternative route to the main Moscow-Kharkov line behind their own front.

D.N.B. said that the Russians were "following only very cautiously," and that yesterday "it seems they appeared ignorant about the facts of the situation, because up to the evening they had only occupied the suburban railway stations on the eastern bank of the Desna."

"In the area north and northeast of Bryansk itself," the broadcast added, the Russians "stopped in front of strong German covering forces."

Berlin also reported heavy street fighting at Novorossisk in the Kuban.

The Germans attempted to make the Soviet victory sound hollow by emphasizing the physical emptiness of the city.

Eighty Italian Warships Have Given Up

By NOLAND NORGAARD

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 14 —(AP)—The Allied Naval Command announced today a total of 19 Italian submarines have now reached Allied ports in safety or are due to arrive shortly, and that 27 destroyers of the Italian fleet have been accounted for.

An official naval statement gave the following recapitulation of the situation regarding the late arrivals with the notation that "the Italian fleet is scrupulously honoring the engagement entered into by the Italian government."

"1. Apart from four Italian battleships and six cruisers whose names were given two days ago as having arrived at Malta, the battleship Giulio Cesare and the seaplane carrier Giuseppe Miraglia have now reached the island. It was quite unknown officially that the Giulio Cesare was fit for sea and it still is unknown here if she can be considered fully efficient as a fighting unit. She was refitted at Trieste and made the voyage to Malta via Taranto.

British Land On Spitsbergen

LONDON, Sept. 14 —(CP)—New British forces have landed on the Norwegian island of Spitsbergen, above the Arctic Circle, following the German hit and run raid of Sept 8, according to a DNB German news agency, report broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press.

The German report, which indicated the British troops have control of the island, said five Royal Navy destroyers reached Barentsburg at dawn yesterday and brought guns ashore.

The Germans said their naval attack wrecked harbor installations and the weather station but did not mention the fate of the handful of Norwegians who garrisoned the barren outpost.

The first Allied Spitsbergen attack was carried out by a brigade from the Canadian 1st Division under Brig. (now Maj.-Gen.) A. E. Potts of Saskatoon in August, 1941, after the Germans had set up a meteorological station there. The Canadian soldiers destroyed coal mining equipment, oil and coal reservoirs and took off some 1,000 Norwegians.

Hull Says Eliminate World Gangsters

Claims One War Aim To Obtain Iron-Clad Peace For World

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Herr Hitler, Signor Mussolini, General Tojo—Meet Mr. Cordell Hull.

The United States' Secretary of State has ideas which are intimately associated with your common welfare. He states that one war aim is to achieve an iron-clad peace for the world. Backed by nations ready to use force to maintain it. He says "if there is anything on which all right-thinking people are agreed, it is that the monstrous spectre of a world war shall not again show its head."

Now you three war-lords, as instigators of the present global blood-bath, should be deeply interested in Mr. Hull's declaration. He didn't say so specifically, but his thesis certainly seems to contemplate putting all of you out of circulation, because there can be no possible assurance of peace so long as you remain at large.

You'll remember, Fuehrer, how the Allies in the last war shouted themselves hoarse over hanging your predecessor in crime, the Kaiser. Then everybody got cold feet. The Kaiser lived long and well.

There's a far different atmosphere this time, though, because we know it's no good beating armies if we don't eliminate the instigators of the aggression. The Axis armies are merely tools which are used by the war-lords, who reproduce their kind, generation after generation.

Tear Out Roots.

To ensure peace we Allies must get at the roots of the evil. In the case of Germany, Herr Hitler, we must eliminate from society in one way or another not only your wicked self but all your captains—like Goering, Himmler and Goebbels.

But we shall have to dig much deeper than that, because the real and perpetual mainspring of German aggression is Prussian militarism. We must eliminated the Prussian war lords as well — and they won't be hard to name.

There's a very similar situation in Japan, General Tojo. There militarism rules and the other military are guilty of multiple aggression and untold atrocities. We're going to get you, Tojo, and your co-murderers.

As for Italy, Signor Soft Underbelly, we want you and a few other cowardly gangsters like your son-in-law Count Ciano.

A most satisfactory solution of the problem (if any) growing out of your elimination from society would be to hold Allied court martials as fast as you criminals are rounded up.

Old Labor Party Stands

National Group May Force Close Fight

AUCKLAND, N. Z., Sept. 14 — New Zealand's Labor Government, first elected in 1935 and re-elected in 1938, is expected to retain office in th Dominion's General Election September 25 but a close fight may develop with the National Party.

The parliamentary standing at dissolution was : Labor, 49; National Party, 23; Independents, 5; vacant, 3—Total 80.

A record number of 291 candidates has been nominted for the 1943 Election with the various parties represented as follows:

Labor, 77 Independent Labor, 6; National, 77; Independent National, 3; Democratic Soldier Labor, 54; People's Movement, 25; Real Democracy Movement, 17; Independents, 33.

Despite the plethera of candidates and parties the contest is expected to be a fight between Prime Minister Peter's labor party and the National Group, with the Democratic Labor Party a possible vote-splitting factor.

The emergence of the Democratic Soldier Party under the radical John A. Lee who was expelled from the Labor Party some years ago, may split the Labor vote sufficiently to allow some National gains.

Labor Urges Bank Control

Congress Wants Government Ownership

MONTREAL, sept. 14—(CP). — The Canadian Congress of Labor is expected to deal with additional resolutions to-day, second day of its fourth general convention.

The Congress started its business session yesterday, passing a resolution urging the Government to "take over the entire banking system and operate it in the interests of the people." The resolution claimed that the present system "does not operate in the best interests of the people, inasmuch as it leaves their economic and social life to a large extent at the mercy of a small clique of financial interests."

In other resolutions passed during the day, the Congress urged control of "all transport" by the Board of Transport Commissioners and full ownership and operation by the Government of all radio broadcasting in Canada as a public utility.

Delegates totalling 455 pledged their support "to all the leaders of the United Nations, to their armed forces and to the workers in factories in their heroic struggle on behalf of unity and democratic rights of man,...."

HATRED OF ITALIANS FOR GERMANS FLARES INTO OPEN WARFARE

Italians Fight Huns In Rome Join Guerillas

LONDON, Sept. 14 (CP)— Bitter street fighting in Rome was reported by the Algiers radio today even as German propagandists were proclaiming the rebirth of Fascism under Benito Mussolini's personal command with a prediction he would cancel Italy's capitulation, reorganize the Italian army and pronounce the end of the rule of the House of Savoy.

"Bitter opposition to the presence of the German forces in Italy is spreading all over the country," radio Algiers reported, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press. "In the Balkans, too, German troops have been challenged everywhere by Italian soldiers.

"Fierce fighting has occurred in Belgrade. Two thousand Italian soldiers are in the mountains of Montenegro where they are fighting against the Germans. The Balkans are seething with unrest and fighting."

The Opposite.

Trying to distill new magic from the name of the man who once set thousands of Italians rocking to cries of "Duce," Nazi propagandists declared that news of Mussolini's liberation in a Hitler-engineered coup had caused "great jubilation" in Northern Italy.

Swiss dispatches from the Italian frontier indicated that Fascist uprisings and parades had taken place in some parts of Northern Italy now occupied by German forces.

Former Fascist officials again control Milan, Turin, Genoa, Novara, Cremona and were reported to be taking fierce reprisals for any Anti-Fascist activities which had occurred since Mussolini was dismssed by King Victor Emmanuel.

German radio broadcasts concurred in the report that Mussolini had been "liberated' by the Nazis, but they were in striking variance as to his present whereabouts. He was most commonly reported to be in Cremona with Roberto Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist Party, and Marshel Edwin Rommel.

A Daily Mail editorial called for a rigorous inquiry by Allied military leaders into the circumstances of Mussolini's escape and said that the fact he is no longer a prisoner "is a first-class example of Italian futility."

Home and School Association News

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

The first Fall meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association was held on Monday evening in the kindergarten room with Mrs. A. Nelson the president in the chair. Mrs. Nelson opened the meeting with a welcome and a patriotism pledge.

The speaker for the evening was Capt. D. DeMille, protestant padre at the Training Centre. Capt. DeMille took as his subject "Citizenship." The speaker declared that vital as the war is there are other things to-day that are important and which must not be lost sight of. It is quite possible to lose the war through the internal conditions of our country. People to-day are far more ready to think of peace and conditions after the war than they were in the last war. He maintained that a country rises no higher than the level of her citizenship and a slovenly lazy, ignorant people make that type of country. In making a good citizen there are three great influences in the community, the home, the school and the church.

There are a number of things that constitute a good citizen and these were outlined as first a person who can live with other people and let them live although he differs with them; secondly a person who has high ideals of right and wrong for his community; thirdly is a person who can work for the common good and be obedient to the laws.

Intelligence is also required in good citizenship and in this connection the citizens must be firmly obedient to his conscience and his God and to think with an open and not closed mind.

Captain DeMille said that no sharp line must be drawn between the church, home and the school and each must help the other. In the home, the habits are formed and the foundation of life given; the school builds upon this foundation and duty of the church was explained as supplementting the work of both and linking all to higher power. To these three the community has given the task of moulding the citizens and this task is never ompleted beause there are ward played a duet "The Pixie always new citizens coming on.

The speaker was thanked by Mrs. H. Tremaine. The roll call for mothers went to Mrs. Pilon's room and conveners of the various committees reported. Mary McBride delighted the audience with a piano solo "The Swallow" and then Mary McBride and Mildred Hay-always nw itizens oming on. King."

Nicholls Hospital Auxiliary Hears Reports On Year's Work

Members of the Nicholls Hospital Auxiliary who attended the annual meeting, held Monday afternoon in the Sunday School at St. Andrew's Church, were shown an interesting motion picture, "White Battalions Serving Mankind" in which the working of a great hospital, and the services it offers the community, were shown. A simple story it told of two children, one wealthy and the other poor, who were both confined to the hospital, and received the same care, and were nursed back to health. The picture was designed to show the great help to a hospital that generous donations can be.

Mrs. J. K. Hughes, president, was in the chair for the meeting, and numerous reports were heard, including one from Mrs. C. Boate, recording secretary, on the year's work. Mrs. Boate reported that the auxiliary had held nine regular monthly meetings with an average attendance of twenty members, and one executive meeting. Only two general meetings were held, due to pressure or war work.

The membership for this year is 2,113, which is less than last year but includes between two and three hundred new members. The total includes 80 members in Lakefield and there are now 84 Life Members. Members from Hastings, Lily Lake, Lakefield, Bridgenorth and Millbrook donated preserves for one of the prizes at the annual Penny Sale.

Make 2,000 Visits

All the committees have carried out their work efficiently and well and over 2,000 visits have been made at the hospital, where Mrs. R. Ross, convener of the visiting committee, is always a popular visitor with both nurses and patients. Special treats were provided on Hallowe'en, Valentine's Day, and Easter and Christmas cheer, in the way of small gifts, stockings and baskets, were given at Christmas time. Radios were borrowed from local stores for the pleasure of all the patients. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser generously entertained over 40 nurses at their beautiful home at Burleigh Falls.

The Thursday Club, with Mrs. W. W. Hill as convener, made and gave to the hospital two complete layettes a month; 931 articles were made under the supervision of the sewing committee with Mrs. J. Detcher as convener; and 100 articles were completed by the Lakefield ladies. The contact committee, formed this year to help in emergencies at the hospital, assisted with the preserving of fruit. Members of the Auxiliary helped to decorate the Collegiate Auditorium for the graduation and presented the 12 graduates with clinical thermometers. The buying committee purchased a second-hand piano for the Argyle street nurses' residence, curtains, rods and fittings for two eight-bed wards and the prizes offered at the Penny Sale.

A very successful Penny Sale was held last May, from which $1,509.22 was realized. Included in this amount was a donation of $25 from the Nicholls Hospital Board, $7 from the Nurses' Alumni, and $6 from the ladies who appeared on the Quiz program at the Regent Theatre.

Kitchen Equipment

The auxiliary provided equipment for the new Diet Kitchen and the extension of the Nursery, including a refrigerator for the infant formulas. All this was made possible through the Penny Sale, membership fees being used for the purchase of needed articles for the hospital.

Reports were also heard from Mr. Gordon Hall, treasurer; Miss E. Morrow, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hill, Thursday Club; Mrs. G. K. Fraser, social; Mrs. Breckenridge, buying committee; Mrs. F. Merrett, W.P.T.B.; Mrs. A. Roseborough, contact committee. Mr. John Hornal thanked the auxiliary for its continued assistance and support and reported briefly on work at the hospital. Miss E. Young, supervisor of nurses' also gave a brief report, and expressed her appreciation for the members who had come to the hospital and contacted about 300 nurses who were registered with selective service, thus preventing a nursing crisis at the hospital. She also reported on the recent innovation at the hospital, the eight-hour day, and said that so far is seemed to be proving satisfactory.

The nominating committee gave a report showing the members who are continuing on the Board for another year, those who have been appointed this year. The following are continuing one year: Mrs. W. Belleghem, Mrs. W. R. L. Blackwell, Mrs. E. Breckenridge, Mrs. G. A. Borland, Mrs. V. M. Eastwood, Mrs. E. R. Frost, Mrs. W C. Hughes, Mrs. J. K. Hughes, Mrs. R. Laing, Mrs. I. T. Lillico, Mrs. E. V. Morphet, Miss E. Morrow, Mrs. A. Rosborough, Mrs. R. Ross, Mrs. J. Wharry.

The following have been elected for two years: Mrs. R. Bamsey, Mrs. W. C. Boate, Mrs. G. S. Cameron, Mrs. D. W. Clark, Mrs. J. Detcher, Mrs. E. Dinner, Mrs. L. G Dobbin, Mrs. H. M. Dulmage, Mrs. S. J. Graham, Mrs. W. G. Hall, Mrs. A. G. Howson, Mrs. J. Low, Mrs. I. McRae, Mrs. F. Merrett. The following are also on: Mrs. W. H. Hill, representing the Thursday Club; Mrs. G. K. Fraser and Mrs. G. Spence, representing Lakefield and vicinity; Mrs. A. B. Mann, representing Bridgenorth; Mrs. W. C. Steinkrauss, Lily Lake auxiliary.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. J. K. Hughes, the president, was presented with sterling silver-inlaid crystal vase in appreciation of her services as president of the auxiliary.

Masked Marvel Killed In Car Stabbing

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14 (AP)— Actor David Gaspar Bacon, masked marvel of the movies, died last night, victim of a stabbing as weird and mysterious as any of the situations portrayed in the innumerable film thrillers in which he had starred.

The scion of a Boston political family, who told his studio he attended school with Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and that he often had been a guest at the White House and Hyde Park, died in a bean field in suburban Venice, sobbing to a passerby: "Please help me."

Clad in blue denim shorts and returning from a swim, Bacon lost control of his small, English-built automobile. It bounced over the curb and stopped. He climbed out and collapsed. He died of a stab wound in the back, gasping his plea to a passerby.

Witnesses said Bacon's car wavered along Washington Boulevard before leaping the curb. One woman said she saw a black-haired man in the vehicle beside the driver, while a service station attendant half a mile west of the bean field, said a man and a women, besides the driver, were in the car when it passed his place.

Bacon's wife, Greta Keller, Austrian singer, who is expecting a child, was under a physician's care after hearing of her husband's death. Neighbors said he left the couple's Hollywood home about 2 p.m. yesterday, saying he was going swimming at the beach.

Bacon's father was formerly Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts. He was 29 years old.

Japs Fleeing Toward Port Of Lae

One Jungle Trail Remains As Escape Outlet

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 14—(AP)—Fleeing Japanese, giving up Salamaua, fought a rear guard action against swift moving Australians today on ridges northwest of that New Guinea air and shipping base as they strove to keep open a single jungle trail of retreat toward doomed Lae. But the Salamaua Japanese, who abandoned valuable war equipment in their flight Sunday from the town they had held since January, 1942, can only succeed in postponing their fate briefly. Australian and American forces are clamping a vise on Lae, 18 miles above Salamaua.

In announcing to-day the capture of Salamaua, whose airdrome and harbor are only 150 miles southwest across Dampier Strait from Japanese-held New Britain, the Allied Headquarters' communique described the enemy as remnants of "distintegrating troops."

Bombing Too Heavy.

The Japanese at Salamaua simply ran out of bomb-ruined town and let the Australians have it.

Salamaua, whose harbor in peacetime was sufficiently deep to allow steamships to ancher within 600 yards of shore, is the first place of pre-war commercial importance to be retaken by South Pacific Allied Forces.

Headquarters announced that heavy bombers struck Sunday night for the first time since August 18 at the enemy's oil and supply centre of Makassar, on Dutch Celebes. Making a roundtrip flight of more than 2,000 statute miles, the big bombers hit military barracks, petroleum storage and wharf facilities with 27 tons of explosives and incendiaries. One bomber failed to return.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14 — (CP). — Wheat prices moved to ⅞ to 1⅛ cents higher yesterday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange on buying chiefly credited to exporters, shippers and commission houses. Export trade was estimated at 1,500,000 bushels with the united Kingdom taking 600,000 bushels of highgrade Manitobas.

There was little activity in the coarse grain trade. Lack of offerings restricted business, with only odd cars of oats and barley changing hands for all-rail shipment to Eastern feeders. Coarse grains trading was dull.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, September 15.

THERE MAY be a sudden reversal of affairs on this day, with the energies and faculties keyed to very decisive accomplishment, spurred by brilliant ideas and highly constructive enterprise, which may assure the substantial support of those in influential positions, both in finance and prestige. It should be a time for inaugurating new projects of major importance with might and main. It may be a time to strike while the iron is hot, with aggressive attack even though objectives are novel, revolutionary or spectacular. It is likely results will be decisive and make place for ingeunity in the public eye. Be circumspect, however, in affiliations, and wary with writings.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for the sudden precipitation of important events, with surprising openings for putting over, with vim and enthusiasm, projects of major significance, especially in connection with community, group or public interests. Those in high places may be ready with capital and friendly aid to promote new, ingenious or out-of-the-ordinary inventions, business projects or other timely programs or propostions. Seek cooperation with confidence and aggressive initiative, but be cautious in signing all writings. It would be desirable to be discret in all purely private or social affiliations.

A child born on this day may be inventive, original, ingenious and have some exceptional ideas or talents to attract public recognition and the solid support of those in high places.

Kurile Raid Payoff From Kiska

Heavy Bombers Batter Island's Port

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(CP). —The new attack of United States army bombers on Japan's Kurile Islands seemed to-day to be the first payoff from the American and Canadian conquest of the Aleutians.

The Navy's announcement of the Army's feat never mentioned the home base of the bombers which smacked the big Japanese port of Paramushiro for the fourth time in this war. It would be astonishing, however, if these bombers had not taken off from either Attu or Kiska in the Aleutian chain, newly retrieved from Japanese invaders.

Paramushiro is the key to Tokyo from the north — a bomber flight from the Bering Sea. It is on a direct line within bomber range of the Attu-Kiska fringe of the Aleutians.

The announcement last night said heavy and medium bombers battered enemy shipping and ground installations at Paramushiro and after a 50-minute running battle shot down 10 enemy fighters and perhaps got three more. Four United States planes were known to have been lost due to enemy action "and six others failed to return."

The Navy said a transport was fired and left sinking, another was damaged, and hits were scored on three cargo vessels, one of which blew up. Numerous small craft were strafed.

COBOURG

Judge Dismisses Coupon Charge Against Tourist

COBOURG, Sept. 14— (ENS).—Paul M. Robinson, of Pittsburg, appeared in court on Monday on a charge of having loose gas ration coupons in his possession.

Magistrate R. B. Baxter found that the evidence was not strong enough to sustain the charge, and dismissed the case.

The charge was laid by Cpl. Karl Lockwood of the R.C.M.P., Cobourg, and read as follows: "That Paul Morton Robinson at the town of Cobourg on September 4, did hinder and obstruct the Oil Controller, by having loose gasoline ration book coupons other than valid attached coupons."

Robinson was arrested on September 4 at the ferry dock when he was about to send his automobile over on the car ferry to the United States, at the completion of his vacation. The customs officer noticed two loose pages of commercial gasoline coupons in his book when Robinson surrendered his tourist gas ration book. R.C.M.P. then laid the charge against him.

The accused told the court that he had last got gasoline at a service station in Havelock and from then on had not used his ration book. He pointed out that had he unlawfully obtained the extra coupons he would not have been foolish enough to turn them in with his ration book to the customs authorities.

Judge Declares Guelph Trains Criminals

TORONTO, Sept. 14—Chief Justice Robertson of the Ontario Court of Appeal yesterday described the Guelph Reformatory as a training ground for criminals.

Dealing with an appeal by a 14-year-old boy who had been sent to the reformatory for one year definite and nine months indeterminate on a charge of attempted arson, the Chief Justice commented:

"I am still of the opinion that Guelph Reformatory is the wrong place to send a boy."

C. R. Magone, K.C., acting for the Crown, pointed out that under an Order-in-Council Guelph Reformatory had been designated as a training school for boys. "We have six there," he said.

"You are training them to be criminals there," the Chief Justice replied.

Mr. Magone explained that the boy had been an inmate of the boys' school at Bowmanville.

"He has been incorrigible for years and is still incorrigible," Mr. Magone said, adding that the boy had been placed with a home, but that his conduct was still bad.

Chief Justice Robertson pointed out that the court had no information about the home with which the boy was placed.

"I see that his first trouble was when he was nine. He has been in this home for some time."

The case will be allowed to stand until further information was furnished the court.

English Workers Fined When Late For Work

By FOSTER BARCLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 14.— (CP).—If there are an persons in Britain who can still call themselves civilians—peace-time brand—then they must be either the aged, infirm or very young. At that they would have to stretch a point.

There are few persons nowadays whose lives are not regulated and tabulated, who do not have to bow to some form of compulsion.

Everybody has a set hour to awaken each morning because if they are late for work they can be prosecuted. Civilians are directed into various factories and if they are lucky enough to be working by choice then you cannot take another job without notifying government officials .

The size and constitution of meals are carefully regulated. Farmers are told what to grow and how to grow it. Fishermen are only permitted to catch certain type of fish. Clothes conform to an established pattern and nobody can buy more than a set of garments each year. Nobody can call the nights their own

Many Extra Jobs.

The Home Guard, Fire Guard, Civil Defence, the National Fire Service, Women's Voluntary Service, Red Cross and sundry other similar organizations have prior call. Members have to dress in some sort of a uniform, salute somebody and show due respect to senior ranks.

If you miss Home Guard parades, you are liable to imprisonment and if you can't get to a Fire Guard demonstration officials want a note explaining the reasons. And they've got to be good. If you go on strike for better pay you're liable to jail or a fine, or both. So it goes all the way down the line.

Nobody seemed shocked when it was suggested a year ago that the people be clothed in battle dress. The idea was talked down, but nevertheless the people seem to be developing battle dress minds.

GORE'S LANDING

Luck Ebbs Guide Lands 2 Lunge

GORE'S LANDING, Sept. 14. — (ENS).—Fishing has been very good the past week, with many catches reported.

John McKenzie, a local guide, brought up 7 lunge to the side of the boat recently, landing onl ytwo of them. On Saturday, trolling at the mouth of the Otonabee river, Lyle Wallace caught a 13½ pound muskie and on Sunday, at the same spot, he lost another large one, bringing it up to the side of the boat before it got off the hook.

American fishermen have been having excellent luck in bringing in fish every day. One man from Syracuse, Mr. Hughes, said that using soft shelled crabs, which are caught in the Niagara river, has educated the taste of Rice Lake bass for this type of bait and they are difficult to catch without the crabs. These American fishermen ship in the soft-shelled crab bait in sufficient quantities to last them for their vacation.

QUANTITY OF MONEY

and volume of credit are matters of high national monetary policy.

Canada's Chartered Banks exist to perform two main services:

1. They receive the savings and other funds of the public, who thus build up bank balances in the form of savings and current accounts.

2. They advance money to communities, enterprises and persons to serve their legitimate needs.

Along with these main functions the banks, through more than 3,000 branches and sub-agencies, render a large number of other important services related to local and national needs —services which have greatly increased as a result of the war.

But the quantity of money in existence in the country at any given time, and the volume of credit, are matters of high national monetary policy. The nation's own central bank, the Bank of Canada, determines them. The Bank of Canada makes extensive use of the Chartered Banks' facilities in giving effect to these policies.

The Chartered Banks' responsibility, clearly established and regulated by the Bank Act, is in the realm of commercial banking—that is, to receive deposits and to serve the needs of trade and industry.

No Time To Let Up

When the city council went into the business of purchasing wood to meet the fuel demands in this city in the coming winter, the committee was authorized to buy up to 5,000 cords. This, it is understood, has been purchased, but, be- lieve that now is not the time stop for a real serious fuel situation is going to be faced during the next few months.

In normal times from 25,000 to 30,000 cords of wood are required in Peterborough, however, with a scarcity of coal and with hundreds of householders without a bit of fuel in their bins, and many more with only a very limited amount, it hardly seems possible that sufficient amount of fuel will be on hand for the coming winter. At present the city has purchased the 5,000 cords and fuel dealers either have on hand or know where they can get another 12,000 cords. This still leaves a large amount of wood to be secured.

An immediate survey should be made by the fuel dealers and council to determine just what extra wood is going to be required and if the city can purchase a part of the required amount it should do so immediately.

Many have asked why the city could go out and purchase 5,000 cords and the local dealers could not. The dealers have to work under a price ceiling while on the other hand the city's plan was to build up a wood supply, within reasonable price terms, but these limits exceeded the price the dealers could pay and keep under the ceiling.

New War Predictions

Like every other conflict in recorded history, this war has not lacked for prophets. Ever since 1938 men and women have appeared who have been eager to predict the course of the fighting, the date of new outbreaks, disasters for both sides and everything else which could possibly happen. The latest of these prophets is a Maltese monk who gained a reputation by predicting the end of the last Great War accurately; he also prophesied the abdication of Edward VIII. and, more recently, the end of the North African campaign.

For the future, this prophet promises us that: the Russians will retake Smolensk this winter; the Red Army will re-enter Poland this year; an unexplained happy event will take place in Teheran this year; Bulgaria will declare war on Turkey in the spring; Crete and Sardinia will be occupied by the Allies in the autumn; the King of Italy will die this year.

People who are interested in prophecies may wish to check the accuracy of these predictions. We wonder if King Victor Emmanuel knows of the prophecy concerning his fate; the least credulous of men may be excused for annoyance and some discomfort over such a matter.

The most generally interesting of the Maltese monk's predictions which we copy from the Egyptian paper, Al Ethneino, is that the war will end on October 13 of this year. Personally we are betting against the likelihood of this, but watch the date anyway.

Reginald McKenna

The death last week of the Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna removes one of the few remaining members of the early days of the Asquith Government. Mr. McKenna has been for many years acknowledged as one of the leaders of the Liberal party in Great Britain. He was elected in 1895 when he was thirty-two years old as Liberal member for North Monmouthshire, and ten years later he became financial secretary to the treasury in the Campbell-Bannerman Government. Two years later he was made President of the Board of Education; and when Herbert Henry Asquith succeeded to the Premiership on the death of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in 1908, Reginald McKenna became First Lord of the Admiralty. In 1911 he took charge of the Home Office, and in this connection had charge of the passing of the Welsh Disestablishment Bill which had been before the country for more than a quarter of a century.

Reginald McKenna had made a name for himself as a successful administrator, with far more than ordinary ability, in connection with financial matters. Therefore, it was no surprise when, on the formation of a coalition ministry in 1915, he was made Chancellor of the Exchequer. He was immediately confronted with the task of finding money to finance the world war which was then going on. He raised £600,000,000 by a 4½ per cent. war loan, and later raised the income tax to 40 per cent. with a severe super-tax and the doubling of duties on sugar, tea, tobacco, coffee and other household necessities. Mr. McKenna introduced war savings certificates which brought him in £40,000,000 in the first year, and he followed this with 5 per cent. exchequer bonds and 6 per cent. exchequer bonds. Excess profits tax went up to 60 per cent., and new taxes were imposed on amusements, railway tickets, matches and other things.

Reginald McKenna went out of office with Asquith in December, 1916. Three years later he was made chairman of the London City and Midland Bank, which is now known as the Midland Bank and in one of the three or four big British banking concerns. Mr. McKenna was for many years a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway and also filled many other important business and financial positions. His ability was unimpaired almost up until the last. He lived a long and useful life, and his passing will leave a serious gap in the financial life of the city of London.

The Brenner Pass

Much has been heard recently of the Brenner Pass, especially in the past week with the knocking Italy out of the war. The name is derived from Brenner, a mountain in the Tyrolese Alps which rises to a height of 6,777 feet. The road from Germany to Italy traversing this mountain reaches an elevation of 4,658 feet, and yet is one of the lowest roads practicable for carriages over the main chain of the Alps. A railway through this mighty gorge was opened in 1867.

Germany must move her troops and equipment through this pass if she wishes to continue her war in Italy and keep the bases of United Nations' bombers as far away as possible from her homeland. The pass has been heavily bombed and there has been much fighting between Germans and Italians for the southern entrance, but Germany with her large forces in Italy no doubt is in control. However it is a bottleneck of strategic importance, and no doubt the Allies which seek to close it. Canadians who have travelled by train over the Rocky Mountains will easily realize just what great damage bombing of this railway will do, and what a blow it will be to the German activities in Italy.

Christ And The Comic Strip

Little by little the comic strips are deserting their original purpose, which was to amuse, and are attempting to instruct; we are not sure that the change is for the better. Some years ago the Gumps deserted the ordinary matter of the funnies—being hit on the head with spittoons, and so forth—and depicted, at great length, the piteous death of a girl called Mary Gold, if we remember the name correctly. At the time we did not think that the dignity of death was enhanced by this treatment.

But last week, in a popular strip called "Boots and Her Buddies", Christ's words on the cross, as given in St. Luke's Gospel, are quoted (inaccurately) as a rebuke to a small girl who hates the Japanese. No lack of reverence is intended, but we do not think that a page devoted to Donald Duck and L'il Abner is quite the place for such citations. Nor does the grotesque style of drawing appropriate to a comic strip form the right frame for this sort of teaching.

Newspapers cannot censor comic strips; they either buy them or leave them alone. We think that the artists who draw the comics would be wise, and would show good taste, if they did not attempt to mingle ethical instruction with the shenanigans appropriate to their art.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Nazis are boasting of the rescue of Mussolini as an important victory. They are welcome to the balcony braggart; we'll settle for the Italian fleet.

The Japanese general staff will not fail to have noticed that all they gained at Pearl Harbour has been wiped out by the surrender of the Italian fleet.

Politicians will be scanning the news from Prince Edward Island to see how the C.C.F. movement has succeeded in its invasion of the island province.

With the United Nations holding the Italian toe and the German boot planted over the north of Italy, Hitler's former ally is in a bad way. Well, they asked for it.

Editorial Advertising

From
KINGSTON WHIG-STANDARD

IN the past few months there has been noticeable, in this and other newspapers and some magazines, a new departure in advertising. The advertisers themselves are not new; they are firms which have long known the value of advertising and have used its various media to keep their name and their product before the public, and in every instance they are firms which have heavily emphasized that portion through the daily press. The odd thing about their advertising today is that these firms have little or nothing to sell—little or nothing, that is, not already in such overwhelming demand that the necessity to urge its sale no longer exists. These advertisements, then, could only be evaluated as intended to retain the goodwill of the people, if they were judged by material considerations alone. And with every consideration for the importance attaching to such a purpose, these advertisements cannot be explained solely on that ground.

In essence, they are editorials. They have been written and printed on behalf of such businesses as the Bell Telephone Company, Ford Motors, the Aluminum Company of Canada, Northern Electric, International Nickel and many other firms. They impart, in an editorial manner, the opinions of these firms on the questions of today, on the hopes for the future. They discuss the problems of the present, the possible problems which may arise in the days to come, and always they affirm, giving their reasons, their belief in the system under which we live, the system we now engage in war to perpetuate as long as free peoples desire it. Divorced as they are from any need to promote the product of the advertiser, these editorials in advertising space are a most convincing evidence of the realization in industry generally of its obligation and influence in Canadian life.

Editorial advertising is proof in itself of the responsibility now felt by industry to the people supporting it. This medium has devoted space to discussions of product shortage, and in that space reasons for these shortages are frankly given. Facts have been made known to the reading public which in another day or under another way of life would never be released. In short, as far as certain aspects of wartime business are concerned, the general public has been taken into the full confidence of the great industrialists. There can be only one valid main reason for this.

Briefly stated, that reason is found in the fact that the great industrialists of our day are eminently capable of applying straight thinking to those essential issues of national concern which affect equally manufacturer and consumer, insofar as these latter can be roughly classified under two heads. The time is long past when industry regarded itself as a force apart, a separate entity in a national economy. Today it is, and knows itself to be, dependent upon the prosperity and goodwill of the nation as a whole. It has given more than one indication of full realization of this fact, but the most recent instance is perhaps the most effective. In a medium open to all it has presented its own problems and those of the nation in general; it has discussed them with an openness and sincerity which in themselves carry a conviction not known before in advertising. This welding of two newspaper styles, the editorial and the advertising, fulfils a need peculiar to the times, but we do not look to its discard when times change. Its influence will very likely be found sufficiently powerful in the post-war period to well warrant its retention during a time when industry must provide much of the leadership to re-establish the economy of the nation on a peacetime basis.

Letter To The Editor

FLOUR FOR BRITAIN

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—This reader was very pleased to learn by that item from Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—that "Canada has started a determined effort to provide the United Kingdom with about 1,000,000 tons of flour—an order twice as large as that announced yesterday as having been granted to Australia, Trade Minister MacKinnon said today."

In this constructive development, calling for an aggregate of 15,000,000 barrels of Canadian and Australian flour, I would like to draw public attention to the following paragraph from an editorial in the Examiner some nineteen months ago, as recorded in my clipping-book: "Agricultural production is just as much a part of our war effort as the production of munitions. There are many food products which can be kept indefinitely. One thing about storing food is that it never goes out of style. We will need food ourselves, but far beyond our needs will be the needs of the starving people of Europe. . . ." (February 8th, 1942).

Writing in this same "food" connection, I see the following points brought forward by a New York commentator (J. G. Donley) in the columns of your contemporary, Toronto Daily Star, the other day: "Needy populations in Europe were fed by the victors after World War I, but there was some lag between armistice day and the functioning of relief. This time the organization and the supplies are ready to move in right behind the victorious armies. Thus we begin to see what is meant by those who long have said, 'food is a weapon.' Such relief gains tremendously in its effectiveness by being prompt—for 'wait' is a weary word indeed for the hungry and the sick."

It may interest the average busy urban reader to know that today's stockpile of "in store" flour in the Dominion is around 1,780,000 barrels—so those mill-wheels should be running on a three-shift schedule for many months to come?

You were miles ahead of schedule, Mr. Editor, and under your leadership those 10,000,000 barrels of Canadian flour would be processed NOW, making space for 45,000,000 bushels of the 1943 wheat crop!

A Matter of Taste

The distillers want to start making whisky again. Some of their opponents argue that our grain supply is needed for more important purposes, particularly for feed.

These opponents remind us of Zeke in the old story—

Two loafers in front of a Kentucky courthouse noticed an acquaintance passing by. One lounger, shifting his quid, philosophized to the other as follows:

"Thar goes that wuthless Zeke Brown. Two loaves of bread under his arm, and not a drap o' whisky in his house!"—New York World-Telegram.

MOSQUITO BOMBERS

Leaving for Active Service

Written at Sea by Ordinary Telegraphist J. E. CRAIG, 544 Water Street
A member of the R.C.N.V.R.

YOU get a funny feeling, standing by the rail of a ship, watching your country, your native land fade out of sight on the horizon.

You'd probably never thought about it much. I know I never had. But when it's YOU standing there and watching that thin grey line that is Canada, your home, grow thinner and thinner and then slip away altogether you think of it. You think of a lot of things.

Oh, I know what you are thinking. You're saying to yourself "Aw baloney." You figure a person would be too scared and too sea-sick to think. Well, you're scarced alright—you imagine there is a U-boat under every wave. And you're sick too. But not too scared nor too sick to think.

When you're out there saying good-bye to your homeland, Canada isn't a bunch of jagged lines on a map in a book anymore. Canada is very, very much home.

Then all of a sudden you realize what it's all about. You had never gone very much for this "This is my own, my native land" stuff. You didn't join up because of any surging patriotism in your heart. Most likely you don't know why you did join up. But in that few moments when your homeland fades into nothingness you begin to realize and the thoughts come flooding in.

You remember the other fellows that have gone on ahead of you—the guys you grew up with, the guys you played basketball with, the guys you schemed school with when you were kids, the guys you shot pool with and laughed and talked and played with. You think especially of the ones who won't be coming back. Sammy the kid who played guard with you the first year you made the "Varsity" at Collegiate; Johnnie the boy up the street whose papers you used to help deliver.

You think of a thousand things, the corner grocery-store, the ball games on hot Saturday afternoons, the carnival in the park over by the river on warm June evenings, the stores crowded with familiar happy faces—the nights just before Christmas, the shows on Friday nights, the dances at the pavilion, the band concerts in the park, the girls you have known, the fellows at work.

And then, probably for the first time, you realize why you are here.

Suddenly it isn't propaganda anymore, all that stuff about freedom and democracy and home. It's all very real and just as suddenly it's all very, very plain to you.

You're here to protect that fading blue-grey line away off on the horizon. You're here so that happy people will still fill the stores just before Christmas and the ball games will go on on Saturday afternoons and the people back home will still be the happy, smiling swell people you know, after the last U-boat is sunk and the last storm trooper is dead.

You're here to protect home and all the fine, decent things home means. It's not propagands anymore. Nobody told you. You just know.

Federal Vote In the Fall

(From MONTREAL GAZETTE)

LEOPOLD RICHER, Ottawa correspondent of Le Devoir, reports a "singularly grave rumor" at the capital that Prime Minister King plans to pass an Order-in-Council to send conscript troops overseas, call Parliament thereupon for a vote of confidence, and then go to the people in a general election. How well founded this story is, we have no way of knowing. But even as sepculation, it is interesting.

Mr. King has shatter-proof pretext for all these acts. The Quebec Conference, obviously the planning-ground for great doings in the war, lends impressive colour to the need for men to reinforce our overseas army. The Government has already the power to send conscripts for that purpose, but Mr. King promised 15 months ago that if the need arose to take such action, he would immediately summon Parliament and ask for a vote of confidence before despatching the conscript troops. Ostensibly, the Ontario debacle and the four by-election routs would have nothing to do with a decision thus to call Parliament into special session.

Having called Parliament and asked for his vote of confidence, Mr. King could be sure of a subsequent excuse for a snap election. Of the 175 members of parliament who habitually vote Liberal, 55 hail from the Province of Quebec. On a conscription vote of confidence, Mr. King could depend on the support of the English-speaking Quebec members, Messrs. Abbott, Claxton, Black and Whitman, and presumably on the four French-Canadian Ministers, General LaFleche and Messrs. St. Laurent, Fournier and Bertrand. The other 47, led by ex-Minister P. J. A. Cardin, would almost certainly vote non-confidence. This alone—the defection of the province on whose support he has most relied — would be enough to send Mr. King to the people.

The C.C.F. would vote non-confidence as a matter of course. Progressive Conservatives, however, would face the sort of dilemma in which Mr. King loves to see his foes. A vote of confidence would approve the Government they oppose; a vote of non-confidence would be represented as "voting against conscription."

This trap no longer has the strength it had when Mr. King devised it, a year ago last June. Nobody can now pretend that conscription is the only reason for non-confidence in the Mackenzie King Government. Progressive Conservatives are likely to regard more seriously the thought that voting non-confidence might actually cause the election, with its attendant risks of political stalemate. Against this, however, they can set the probability that Quebec's desertion would bring an election anyway.

It should be emphasized again that the foregoing is pure speculation. Mr. Richer is right in saying this rumour is now in circulation, but we have no notion—and do not believe he has—whether or not the rumour has any foundation in fact. All that can be said is that, in the words of the Italian proverb, "if it be not true, it is well contrived."

Emptying the Normandie

Actually, the salvage men took out of the ship (Normandie) 5,000 tons of superstructure, 6,000 tons of debris and 10,000 cubic yards of mud. They removed 8,000 pounds of broken glass. They handled 4,500 separate patches, plugs and wedges. They moved, inside of the ship, and finally took out of her, 100,000 tons of water.—Republic Magazine.

Stay at Home

The wreck of the Congressional Limited at Philadelphia with heavy loss of life is a tragic shadow at home with which to match the casualty lists of war. Coming close upon the wreck of the Lackawanna Limited at Wayland, N.Y., on Aug. 30 it bids us take every precaution possible to safeguard the enormous travel which war makes necessary. It is likewise a stark warning to all to ease the railroad situation wherever possible by staying at home except under the most imperative demands.—New York Times.

A Timely Resolution

"Whereas, conservation is a vital factor in the effort for victory, therefore, be it resolved that we, the members of the Whitby Women's Institute, will, on social occasions where refreshments are served, refrain from serving tea, or coffee as beverages, and those foods which call for generous uses of sugar, substituting other types of beverages and foods for the duration."—Consumers' News.

A Bible Message

Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye that are escaped of the nations: they have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven image, and pray unto a god that cannot save. Tell ye, and bring them near; yea, let them take counsel together: who hath declared this from ancient time? who hath told it from that time? have not I the Lord? and there is no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; there is none beside me....

I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear. (Isa. 45: 20, 21, 23.)

To whom will ye liken me, and make me equal, and compare me, that we may be like?

They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: they fall down, yea, they worship. They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove: yea, one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

Remember this, and shew yourselves men: bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors. Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else. (Isa. 46: 5-9.)

Her employer looked puzzled. "Really, Jane?" she said. "He must have been very quiet. I didn't even hear him come in."

"He hasn't, ma'am," exclaimed Jane. "The police station have just phoned."

Giving Back The Bacon

For 800 years a custom has been carried out at the comely village of Little Dunmow, Essex, England, of awarding a flitch of bacon—a whole cured side—to any man and wife who can produce evidence that for one year and a day they never had the slightest "spat" and had no cause to regret the step they had taken.

The "trial" is held in the parish hall, and usually attracts a large native and out-of-town audience, who extract a good deal of fun from the proceedings, which are conducted by a local jury composed of equal numbers of bachelors and maidens, assisted in arriving at their findings by an examiner and a judge. Neighbours are called as witnesses, and there is a good deal of hilarity over some of the questions propounded to the candidates.

The proceedings were held this year as usual, and two couples were deemed to be worthy winners of the bacon. But for the first time since the 12th Century, there was no bacon to offer on account of the rationing restrictions which are more strict than during the last war. However, two "gammons," or smoked hams, were borrowed from a local merchant, and handed over to the winners, who were obliged to hand them back immediately.

Instead of bringing home the bacon they had to hand it back. But after the war they will [illegible] their flitches.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Mrs. William Leahy, Clifton Street, and Mrs. James Shaughnessy, mother of the groom, were joint hostesses at a miscellaneous shower held in Mrs. Shaughnessy' honor at the former's home.

Clysdale—Miller

The wedding took place in Keene United church with Rev. George Murray officiating of Margaret Audrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Miller of Keene to Walter George Clysdale, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Clysdale. Miss Margaret Bryce played the wedding music and sang, "When Song Is Sweet" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin, and her veil, which hung from a wreath of orange blossoms and lily-of-the-valley. She carried a bouquet of bettertime roses. The bride's two sisters, Willene and Vera Miller were bridesmaids, gowned alike in turquoise blue sheer with matching Dutch caps and bouquets of Briarcliffe roses. Little Margaret Robertson was flower-girl, in floor-length pink taffeta trimmed with velvet bows, with a big velvet bow in her hair and a nosegay of mixed flowers.

Mr. Fred Clysdale was his brother's best man and the ushers were Donald Nickel and Warren Smith.

At a reception at the bride's home, her mother received in an air-force blue wool suit with matching hat. She was assisted by the groom's mother who wore green satin-face crepe with brown accessories. Both wore corsages of Premier Supreme roses.

For the wedding trip, the bride donned a brown tailored suit with matching accessories.

DOROTHY DIX

WIDOW WITH FIVE CHILDREN IS WORRIED ABOUT FUTURE.

They Should Support Mother If She Did a Good Job; But She Must Protect Herself.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: What has a mother a right to expect of her children? I was left a widow with five children, and I struggled hard and valiantly to rear and educate them. I succeeded beautifully and when I look at the product of my labor and self-sacrifice I am pleased. They are all big, healthy persons earning their own living.

Now I am 54 and still working every day. I have my beautiful suburban home, but that is all. The depression and children took everything else. I am wondering if I became sick and unable to work what would become of me? What could I expect of my children? Should I go to the city hospital? Or sell my home and take the money for myself?

What is a woman who has given the best years of her life to the rearing of her children, and who has done a good job, to do when she reaches my stage of life?

WORRIED.

ANSWER: If she has really done a good job rearing her children she does not need to be worried about what will become of her, because her sons and her daughters will consider it a privilege to take care of their mother. If you have brought up your children to honor and admire you, look up to you, be unselfish towards you, and to feel their responsibility, you have taken out the best old-age insurance that is possible. Your children will always cherish you and share their last crumb with you.

But if you have been one of the doormat mothers who have let their children walk over them and kick them around; if you have been nothing but a slave to your youngsters and made them selfish brats, who think you are only good to wait upon and serve them, then, indeed, you had better begin looking out for a place in an old ladies' home.

But I must pay this tribute to modern youth, which is so often disrespectful to parents, and which flouts the advice and defies the control of what it calls "my old lady" and "my old man." Deep down under its callousness the sacred tie that binds parents and children together still holds and it is the exception, rather than the rule, when sons and daughters shut their doors in the old peoples' faces when they are in need.

I get hundreds and hundreds of letters from boys and girls who are in love and want to marry, but who cannot do so because they are not making enough to support two families, and they have old parents to take care of. They put their duty to parents before their own happiness, and they make the sacrifice cheerfully without posing as heroes or martyrs. Mom and pop took care of them when they were little and they are taking care of their parents when they are old and helpless. Thats all.

But admirable as mother devotion is, it is one of the virtues that can very easily turn into a vice, and it does this when a woman sacrifices everything to her children and demands nothing from them in return. Every mother should cultivate a certain amount of intelligent selfishness and salvage something of her life for herself, instead of giving everything to her children. If she has to work she should make the youngsters, even when they are little, have their chores and help her as far as possible. She shouldn't come home after a hard day's labor and get dinner for a lot of husky youngsters who have been playing ball for exercise, or lying on a couch reading a novel, while waiting for mother to clean up the house and press their clothes.

Unless it is absolutely necessary, she should not spend every cent of the income on giving her children so-called advantages. She should, if possible, save out enough to make her independent in her old age. Far better that mother should have her own pocketbook when she is 50 than that John should have sports car when he is 15.

And mother should keep her individual life, instead of merging all her interests in her children. She should belong to clubs, keep in touch with old friends, have her hobbies, so that when her children grow up, marry and leave her, as they will, she will not be left desolate, nor forced to go to live with them because she has no life outside of theirs.

So I should earnestly advise you to sell your home and put the money in an annuity that will make you comfortable and independent, and save you from worry about the future, instead of leaving it to your children who are able to take care of themselves.

DEAR MISS DIX: My fiancee and I are about to break up over an argument over present war conditions. She persists in ridiculing the war effort; sees no sense in buying bonds, and bemoans the sacrifices due to rationing. She says there is no sense in it and that she intends to get more, even if the Army has to go without food. I am sick of attempting to reason with her and am beginning to wonder what sort of a wife she will make.

STEPHEN.

ANSWER: Well, she will make the kind of a wife who will howl and shriek over having to do housework and being tied down with children, and who will make her husband get up in the night and fix baby's bottle. And she will go right along spending money, no matter how hard the times are, because she will say there is just no sense in not having what she wants and that her husband could make more money if he wanted to.

As to her attitude towards the war and the conditions it imposes upon us, she not only talks like a silly, but shows herself utterly selfish and unpatriotic. She wants to enjoy all the comforts and luxuries to which she has been accustomed, but doesn't want to pay the price, so she simply ignores the fact that wars cost money, soldiers are expensive to maintain, they can't fight without weapons, and that everything would go to pot if everyone acted as she does, and just sat down and folded their hands and did nothing and gave nothing, while the Germans and the Japanese overran our country.

When we see the courage, the stamina, the uncomplaining fortitude with which the British and the Russian women have accepted war conditions, it should make an American woman feel like a coward and a quitter not to be able to take the privation of a little gas and a little food.

Home and School

CENTRAL SCHOOL

"All children will not have the same success, since their capacities very and therefore the school should not place too much emphasis on the mere passing of examinations, but assure itself that each child attains full sucess according to the measure of his particular capacities."

So stated F. H. Dearborn, principal of Central public school Monday, in an address to that school's Home and School Association on the subject of "Education for Social Living."

Mr. Dearborn outlined for the parents in a penetrating and interesting manner the new course of studies in Ontario schools and the emphasis placed in its curriculum on the development in the child of a social consciousness and the strengthening of its social and moral fibre, under proper stimulus in the school room, to enable the child to choose the work which best gives scope to his capabilities and thus grants maximum satisfaction and pleasure.

Co-operation.

"The co-operation of the parents is necessary if the children are to get the best from their new school training." Mr. Dearborn said. "Parents must carefully guard their children's health by providing them with a balanced diet, particularly a full breakfast, and seeing to it that they have a maximum of rest."

He maintained that breakfast is the most important meal of the day and children should have time to eat eat it properly. He outlined the health program and services given in the schools but suggested that these safeguards must fail unless home conditions are right.

Mrs. Leslie Groombridge presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Lloyd Raper.

It was decided to entertain the 1943 graduating class at the October meeting and serve refreshments.

The meeting was favoured with two solos by Miss Helen Miller, soprano, who was accompanied by Mr. Martin B. Chenhall, M.R.C.O.

TWO HUSKY WRESTLERS BATTLE TO DRAW IN EXCITING TUSSLE

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The final round of the intermediate division of the Girls' Softball League is tied up tighter than the Italian navy at Malta. Faced with elimination last night when they met the Generals in the second game of the series for the Knox Cup, last year's champions, the Brintons, suddenly found their batting eye and hammered out a decisive 16 to 3 trimming against the team that had beaten them rather easily on Friday night. Now the rivals are on even terms with one win each and, the championship hinges on the result of the third game which will be staged at the Bowl at 6.30 o'clock Wednesday night. You can write your own ticket on the result. After the opening game it looked like Generals all the way but Brintons roared back with so much power last night that this column wouldn't want to bet a used-up ration book on the outcome. Anyway the winners are the intermediate champions so that there will be plenty at stake when they tie into each other tomorrow evening. It promises to be a snappy ball game with the verdict going to the team that gets he breaks. Beryl Lee will likely be the Brinton hurler on this occasion with Pat Wilson going back for Generals. The final league playoff of the season in the girls' loop rates a good crowd.

We are anxiously awaiting the special edition that Scribe Bill Walshe will undoubtedly put out to mark the fact that the directors of the N.H.L. have selected Kingston as the site for Canada's Hall of Fame. This action on the part of the hockey authorities puts the finishing touches on a campaign launched in the first place by the veteran Jim Sutherland of Kingston and carried on with vigor and enthusiasm. Kingston had some real claims to be so honored and the promoters of the plan in the Penitentiary City have done a fine job in having those claims endorsed. Just what form the Hall of Fame will take is a matter for future planning. So too is the list of players to be honored in the shrine of hockey. That of course opens the door to a lot of argument. There have been some very famous hockey players in this country and they will all have their advocates. Obviously they can't all be chosen and how the selection will be made will be a big head-ache. But meanwhile Kingston can rejoice. Its claim to be known as the cradle of hockey has been officially endorsed and that is all that matters for the present.

Air Force's Hockey Plans

So far as senior hockey this winter is concerned Canadians are going to have to depend largely upon the armed services and in this connection Gordon Headley of the Ottawa Citizen throws some interesting light upon R.C.A.F. plans for the coming winter. Says the Ottawa sports commentator: "The Royal Canadian Air Force plans to operate only five major hockey teams next season—three in the west and two in the east. In the west the teams will play at Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, but there was no mention made of where the remainder will operate in the east. Under this arrangement Ottawa, Toronto or Montreal would make up the remaining teams. However, according to a high-ranking Air Force officer in Ottawa who is in a position to speak with considerable authority on the subject, 'the R.C.A.F. will continue to encourage hockey in Ottawa for the men next winter,' thus putting aside any doubts regarding operation of a team in the Ottawa Senior Hockey League. The spokesman was without any knowledge of this latest report that only two teams will operate in the east, but he intimated quite clearly that the Capital would again have an Air Force contender for the Allan Cup. It seems quite reasonable, too, for the Air Force teams in the Ottawa League have always distinguished themselves and the season before last went on to bring Ottawa its second Canadian championship in the history of the Allan Cup."

* * * * * *

"Many things can happen before the start of next winter's hockey activities, but with Ottawa prepared to continue to have a major Air Force team, the whereabouts of the other team in the east is a matter of conjecture," continues the article. "Toronto at the moment, has N.H.L. players like Johnnie Mowers, Pete Slobodian, Roy Conacher, Johnny Quilty, Eddie Bush, Johnny Chad, Lloyd Gronsdal and others. Montreal also has its share and present plans call for an Air Force team from the Metropolis to again be represented in the Q.S.H.L. Majority of the hockey stars in Toronto are P.T. instructors and they might possibly be shifted to other centres by the time the snow flies. If they all remain in Toronto and Montreal, however, it is quite conceivable that this arrangement to have two teams in the east would have to be raised to three, for it has been proven that recreation of this sort for an airman-hockey player is not only beneficial to his mental attitude but also serves as a great morale-builder for the general public. Meanwhile the Ottawa Senior League held its first meeting on Sept. 13, and all six teams that competed last season were invited to attend."

Oshawa Roling Along

George Soup Campbell's Oshawa Colts are still steaming ahead in their campaign to grab off the O.A.S.A. intermediate A title for the second year in succession. They took Belleville Reliance into camp again Saturday by 5 to 3, exactly the same score by which they won the first game in Bellevile so the Colts for the second time in a row have cleaned up a series winning both games in each case by the identical count. They beat Genelecs twice 11 to 1 and now have won from Reliance twice by 5 to 3. Dean McLaughlin allowed Belleville only five hits in Saturday's game and fanned ten of the visitors. Oshawa won by getting the jump on Johnnie Bawden with a five-run splurge in the opening frame. He blanked them after that. A pass to Dalton, safe bunts by Hall and Hurst, Red Jubenville's double with the bases loaded, a double by Dean McLaughlin and Little's single was the barrage that that did the trick for the Colts. They couldn't do much with Bawden after that big start but they didn't need to for McLaughlin had too much on the ball for the Reliance hitters.

* * * * * *

Ken Colling comments on the sad happenings as follows in his Belleville sport column: "As was the case in Belleville, Reliance had one bad inning in Oshawa when the Homesters scored five runs. It was the initial frame in this case following which Johnnie Bawden outpitched Dean McLaughlin. Only one Motor City batter reached third base after the initial blow up and Belleville went on to score three runs. In the eighth Spike Pryke's charges could have well knotted the count, when they left two stranded on the runways after scoring a brace. "Soup" Campbell's Colts took full advantage of the errors of omission and commission committed by Reliance in that hectic initial frame, when the homesters chased five over the fourth base as the result of some noticeable help on the part of the Reliance nine. Most everything went from errors to the type of "let George do it" play and naturally Campbell's charges weren't losing any time capitalizing on these boots. However, after they got these miscues out of their system Reliance, and especially Johnnie Bawden, really went to work on Oshawa and proved they were every bit as good as the Motor City nine. In the series just two bad innings resulted in the elimination of Reliance when a total of nine of Oshawa's ten runs scored in the two games crossed the plate."

MooseMcCready Clayborne Evenly Matched

Outside of the fact that it did not eliminate anybody the British Empire championship elimination contest between Earl Moose McCready and Gentleman Jack Clayborne in the main bout of Frank Tunney's weekly wrestling card at the Brock Street Rink Monday night was a howling success. After one of the outstanding battles of the year the hard-fought but clean tussle wound up in a draw.

McCready took the first fall after 21 minutes hard going; the Black Comet evened it up in 16 minutes and then the two battled out the hour without another fall.

Neither boy made a dirty move throughout the hour. It was clean, fast, hard wrestling between the big and powerful McCready and the lighter but fast-moving Ebony Flash. Rabbit punches and elbow slams were left in the dressing-room, the battlers broke quickly and cleanly whenever Referee Bert Maxwell gave the word and the two put on a memorable exhibition of wrestling science, power and speed that has not been equalled this season.

The draw favored neither man. McCready had the edge in the early going but after each had taken a fall the Black Comet did most of the pressing in the last quarter of an hour and he had the Moose in a tight spot half a dozen times.

Throughout the first round McCready was the aggressor. He punished Clayborne with a series of painful arm holds that had the colored grappler in difficulty but the Comet finally broke loose. Then twice in a row the Moose clapped a forearm scissors on Black Dynamite and he kept the punishment on for minutes at a time but on each occasion Clayborne finally worked himself out of danger, although he came out of the holds looking decidedly limp. Clayborne did not do all the catching of course; he used a scissors hold on the Moose several times that McCready had trouble in shaking off but on the whole McCready was in the driver's seat most of the time, despite the speed the slippery Clayborne showed in getting out of jams. The fall came unexpected. The Comet was a bit careless coming off the ropes and McCready saw his opening and was quick to act. He launched himself through the air, applied his pet flying scissors on the black grappler with his usual precision and speed and that was all there was to it. Clayborne's shoulders were easily pinned to the mat when he hit the canvas.

Comet Takes Second Fall

Clayborne took the second fall almost as unexpectedly. McCready had been doing most of the attacking, working a series of arm and scissors holds on his black opponent and while the Comet eventually got out of those punishing grips he was not getting very far so far as tossing the Moose was concerned. However he got his opportunity after 16 minutes tough wrestling and lost no time in cashing in. After being thrown to the mat with a headlock he suddenly cut loose with a drop kick that caught McCready completely off his guard. The big Aurora farmer was bowled over and before he could dope out what had happened the speedy Comet flopped on him and spread him for the fall.

The South African had the edge for the remainder of the rout. He jarred McCready early with a punishing arm hold and then he resorted to the drop kick technique that had won him the second fall and it came close to giving him the match. He knocked McCready off his feet both times and almost pinned his shoulders to the mat but the Moose wriggled free at the count of two. Just before the final bell Clayborne shook McCready up badly with two or three flying mares but the former British Empire champ was too strong and the Comet could not get the fall, in spite of his advantage. The crowd cheered both men as Maxwell raised their arms at the end of the hard-fought battle.

There were once two Irishmen, so the story goes but for some time during the semi final bout between Irish Pat Flanagan and the tumultous Dick Hogan it looked if there might not be any when the affair ended. That argument which lasted seventeen minutes before the Housepainter's bad temper caused his disqualification was a riot. Hogan produced his whole bag of illegal tricks and tossed them at the popular favorite. Two or three times he hurled the Toronto Irishman through the ropes and kicked him out again when he tried to climb in. On one occasion he had the bout won if he had remained back in a neutral corner while Referee Maxwell did the counting. He had Flanagan out of the ring and badly shaken up and it is doubtful whether the Toronto grappler could have got back in time, if Hogan hadn't held up the count by refusing to go back to the corner.

The windup was a classic. After softening Flanagan up with a series of body slams Hogan picked up his opponent, carried him to the side of the ring and proceeded to strangle Flanagan in the ropes a la Howard Cantonwine. Referee Maxwell tried to interfere and the infuriated Hogan clamped a head-lock on the official and tossed him for a total loss. Meanwhile a spectator went to the rescue of Flanagan. He was no sooner freed however than Hogan put him back into the ropes again. This time Maxwell managed to release the Toronto Irishman who dropped outside the ropes and the referee followed him outside the ring and raised him arm, signifying that he was the winner because of the disqualification of Hogan.

However that did not satisfy Flanagan who was seeing red by this time. He crawled through the ropes, let go with a couple of swings to the Housepainter's jaw, then picked him up, carried him to the ringside, hung him between the top and second ropes and while Hogan was suspended there launched himself from the opposite ropes twice in pile-driving charges that landed amidships on the helpless Hogan. On the second crash the Pacific Coast rowdy dropped off the ropes, hit his head on the floor and lost all interest in the proceedings. It was tough medicine but the crowd cheered Flanagan's every move.

A Good Preliminary

Sergt. Ted Miller of the Trenton R.C.A.F. and the fast Joe Maich gave a repeat performance in the preliminary bout, going half an hour to a draw. For 20 minutes it was good clean clever wrestling with both boys showing skill in applying dangerous holds and equal dexterity in getting out of them Honors were about even and there was not a mean move on either side Suddenly however Maich started to swing punches at the Air Force grappler and when the latter came back with some of the same stuff the bout changed into a brawl Both men forgot their clean stuff and it was rough-and-tumble for the rest of the engagement Each had the other out of the ring and Miller hurt his back once when he struck the edge of the platform after Maich had dropped him over the ropes. However he was able to get back before being counted out and he was still in there punching when the final bell sounded. Bert Maxwell refereed all three bouts and Fred Scates was back in the announcer's role, as well as acting as timer.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS

By The Canadian Press

A review of the opening games in the United States places emphasis on the prospect of a poor football season in the United States both from the standpoint of college material and the paucity of spectators in the big bowls.

A survey shows that not more than 12,000 fans dotted the huge Yale stadium last Saturday for the Blue's inaugural fixture of 1943, while a mere handful of 3,500 persons were scattered around the Memorial stadium at Champaign, Ill., to greet the squad.

It has been found that the best teams of the year have been assembled at isolated colleges, such as Southwestern down in Texas, where they won't have the proverbial chance of breaking even on the financial budget because of grid followers simply won't be able to make the long trip by train or car. Apart from transportation trouble, the colleges themselves are being blamed for the frozen interest because they have been harping on their inability to sign up any but glorified high school footballers on account of army calls.

Major league ball clubs are laying the foundations for next season's campaign apart from building up team reserves. Yesterday the Pittsburgh Pirates announced the appointment of Frankie Frisch as 1944 manager to make the fifth year he has been in charge of the Buccaneers.

After winning 23 games for Baltimore Orioles during the past International season, Righthander Ed Klieman is to join the Cleveland Indians for the latter's final home series of the American League schedule. Pitchers Steve Gromek and Paul Calvert were also recalled from Baltimore.

Nashville defeated New Orleans 7-0 last night to win the Southern Association playoff series four games to one. Larry Gilbert, Nashville manager for the past five seasons, previously had managed the New Orleans Pelicans for 15 years. All told he has had 10 title winners.

In the Pony League playoffs among New York State teams, Jamestown made it three straight games against Lockport in the semi-finals last night with an 8-2 decision.

Bought a month ago by Mrs. J. Kemp of Hamilton for less than $900 from K. S. Cleveland of Kentucky, Mugwump yesterday created something of a sensation at the Thorncliffe meeting at Woodbine by winning the Parkwood handicap, paying $6.60 for $2.

The Stratford girls' softball team is scheduled to cross bats with St. Catharines in the semi-final of the Intermediate "A" series of the Women's Provincial Softball Union on a date to be announced. The winner of this round will meet Peterborough for the Ontario honors.

Rinks from many sections of Ontario and from Buffalo, N.Y., to the number of 56 have been matched for the annual Snowbird lawn bowling tournament for the Dr. J. J. Williams Trophy at Woodstock today. Secretary Fred Dean announced that entries had been so heavy that late-comers had to be declined.

Recalled from the Toronto Leafs, Pitcher Bill Brandt of the Pittsburgh Pirates received an order yesterday to report to the army depot at Aurora, Ill., this week for medical examination. Outfielder Maurice Van Robays has been ordered to join the U.S. army at Detroit next week-end.

Winner of the women's division of the Tam o' Shanter open and holder of many golf titles, Patty Berg, 25, of Minneapolis, has been ordered to report at the U.S. Marine training camp at New River, S.C., next Monday to join the Waves.

Major League Slab Stars Of '42 Run Into Jinx This Year

Hughson, Higbe, Warneke, Lee and Wyatt Among Losing Moundsmen

Whit Wyatt — Hal Newhouser — John Niggeling

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Sports Editor

It's "hero today and bum tomorrow" in baseball as in all sports.

Looking about for baseball's best 1943 examples of form reversal, we can't help but notice the misfortunes on the mound of several of the 1942 slab stars.

There are others who have failed to duplicate or better their 1942 records, but we will overlook them for a short discusion of the ill-fated pitchers.

Handsome Tex Hughson, the No. 1 flinger in the American last season with 22 victories to his credit, has won only half that number at this date—with a month to go. Only recently he had a bad streak of luck which gave him a four-game losing streak. Hughson's inability to baffle the opposition as much as he did last year also naturally affected the Red Sox standing in the league race, which now has put them 19 games off the pace of the Yanks.

Newhouser Jinxed

Hal Newhouser, the strikeout king of the Tigers, was counted on to help the Bengal hill staff. Instead, young Hal suffered nine defeats in a row until he whipped the Browns Sept. 2. Newhouser, however, continues to lead the American in strikeouts. With a break here and there he should be near the top of the A.L. heap instead of being just another flinger with eight victories to his credit.

Mel Harder, veteran twirler of the Indians, beset by injuries, has managed to win only five games this season. He turned in 13 last year. Al Milnar, the southpaw who was expected to be a regular starter for the Tribe this year, failed miserably and recently was traded to the St. Louis Bowns.

Niggeling Traded

Atley Donald, who won 11 for the Yanks last year against only three losses, is six behind his 1942 pace. Johnny Niggeling, the knuckleballer who was expected to help pitch the Browns into a pennant contender, has notched only six victories against nine defeats this season as against 15 victories last year. He recently was traded to the Washington club.

In the National league, the ill-fortunes of the Brooklyn hurlers have turned the Dodgers into just another ball club from a status as pennant pursuer the last couple of seasons. Their ace righthander, Whit Wyatt, victor in 19 games in 1942, has won only eight this season. Kirbe Higby, the $100,000 beauty grabbed from the Phils, has tossed only eight wins this year against 16 last season. And Curt Davis, 15-game victor for the Dodgers last year, has turned in only seven wins this season.

Bill Lee, the former Chicago Cub mainstay, won 13 games in 1942. He has three to his credit this year and recently was traded to the Phils.

Bill Lohrman, now with Brooklyn but formerly with the Giants, had a fine record of 14 wins and five losses for Mel Ott's club last year. He has won only five this year.

Lon Warneke, once the best twirler in the National league, won 11 games last year and has only two to his credit this season. Ray Star and Bucky Walters of the Reds are behind their 1942 pace but have been pitching better ball now and are helping the Reds in a courageous bid to overcome the stretch-running Cardinals.

LAWN BOWLING

After being rained out and well nigh frozen out, over the week-end, the bowlers got back into circulation again last evening. It was the games in the extra series contest and judging from the scores handed in there were no walkovers. It looks to us as if this "elimination" idea makes the boys pep up a bit. It's do or else. The winners will continue this evening.

Tomorrow evening it will be men's doubles tournament, pick of our own pastures and be out by seven-thirty o'clock. Fee 50c per pair. Here is something special: All bowlers keep Friday night open. We'll have more information for tomorrow's column.

A number of our bowlers are taking in the mixed rink tournament at Port Hope on Wednesday afternoon and evening. Our boys, who went to Toronto, on Saturday to play in the Loblaw doubles, just couldn't get enough points to be in the money. Some of them came close, but that's all. Better luck next time.

MY CONSTIPATION HAD ME DOWN!

Until I Stopped "Dosing" and Got Right at the Cause

Constipation really had me on the ropes! I'd take purgatives and get temporary relief—but soon, the old trouble would be back—bad as ever!

Then I discovered mine was the common type of constipation—due mainly to lack of "bulk" in my diet. So I began eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day and drinking plenty of water. It's a swell-tasting cereal—mighty good in muffins, too—and it got right at the cause of my constipation by supplying "bulk" I needed for natural regularity. You'll find ALL-BRAN at your grocer's in two convenient sizes. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

BRINTONS EVEN INTERMEDIATE SERIES BEATING GENERALS 16 TO 3

Deciding Game Wednesday At The Bowl

Playing steady ball defensively behind effective pitching by Beryl Lee and hammering out eighteen hits on the attack, Brintons, last year's girls' intermediate champions, evened up the final series for the Knox Cup last night by overwhelming Generals 16 to 3.

The championship will be decided in a third game to be played Wednesday night at 6.30 o'clock.

Generals had won the first battle of the series handily and looked to be in but they never had a chance last night. Brintons scored six runs in the opening frame and the result was not in doubt after that. Brintons had their batting togs on and cuffed the left-handed pitching of Pat Wilson hard, their eighteen blows including triples by Ruth Killen and Marg. Thompson. Generals had a bad night in the field, too, and their defensive slips were costly.

Beryl Lee worked steadily on the mound for the winners, keeping the Generals eight hits well spaced out.

Brintons practically tucked the game away in the first inning when the first six batters to face Pat Wilson in that frame all reached first safely and eventually all scored. In all eleven Brintons strode out to the plate and Thelma Batley who was up twice nad two singles in the innings. Betty Hamblin walked and Marg. Batley, Helen English, Beryl Lee all singled in a row and Marg. Thompson tripled to right. Then the Generals managed to get a couple out but two errors and hits by Thelma Batley and Betty Hamblin followed, the net result being six runs.

Two errors and hits by Marg. Thompson and Regina Killen added two more in the second to make it 8 to 0.

Generals got a run in the first of the fourth on Gladys Young's single and the steal of second and a single by Doreen Smith, but Brintons broke up the game completely on their half by chasing in eight runs on the same number of hits and three errors by the Generals. Ruth Killen's triple was the crowning blow in that big inning.

Pat Wilson's hit and a couple of misplays gave the Generals two runs in the fifth but that was their last effort. The game was called at the end of the Generals' half of the seventh. Marg. Thompson with a triple and two singles and Betty Hamblin with three singles led the Brinton attack. Pat Wilson, Gladys Young and Doreen Smith each had two blows for the losers.

Thelma Darling's smart fielding at third base for Brintons and two pretty running catches by Marg. Barrie in centre field for Generals were the defensive features.

Brintons—Thelma Batley 3b, Betty Hamblin rf, Marg. Batley 1b, Helen English cf, Beryl Lee p, Marg. Thompson 2b, M. Ogden lf, Doris Walker lf, Regina Killen c, Agnes Weir ss.

16-Year-Old Blonde High School Girl Specializes In Drop Kicking On Rugby Team

NEW CASTLE, Ind., Sept. 14 —(AP)— New Castle High School's girl gridder—comely blonde Agnes Rifner—whose specialty is drop kicking, will have to wait another week before she makes her debut on the football field.

Agnes was kept on the bench last night in the Trojan's opening game with Central but coach Griz Baker said to-day she would see service in next week's game with Morton Memorial of Knightstown.

The coach has faith in the 16 year old girl's kicking ability. He discovered her football kicking talent a year ago and urged her to practice for a place on the squad. She spent many hours in practice during the summer and won a berth.

The Indiana High School Athletic Association had no percedent to rule whether Agnes' participation was legal, but Baker said he didn't need a precedent.

"Legal?" he said. "She wouldn't even actually be in the game. The ball is dead during the try for the point after touchodwn."

Boston Wins And Loses To The Dodgers

By JUDSON BAILEY, Associated Press Sports Writer.

There isn't any mystery about which teams are going to win the Major League pennants, but a lot of fans are rushing for pencil and paper to figure out when St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees will get around to clinching their championships.

It may contribute to the calm and orderly processes of arithmetic, therefore, to point out that there will be no clinchings before next week-end.

The Cardinals can settle the senior circuit controversy with any combination of five victories for themselves or five defeats for their immediate pursurers, Brooklyn Dodgers, while the magic combination for the Yankees is 10, and consequently farther removed.

The Cardinals might be able to make short shift of their pennant problem except for the fact that they haven't played since last Saturday and aren't scheduled again until Thursday, when they will embark on a six-game four-day series with Chicago Cubs.

The Dodgers have single games to-day and tomorrow with Boston Braves, will be idle Thursday, and then play a four-game set-to with New York Giants.

Out of this action should come the Cardinals' clinches, but it can't arrive before Saturday.

Here are the figures for both races:

National League.

	W	L	Games Ahead	To Play
St. Louis	90	44	15½	20
Brooklyn	75	60	—	19

American League.

	W	L	Games Ahead	To Play
New York	85	49	11½	20
Cleveland	73	60	—	21

Action in the majors yesterday was confined to Boston, where the Braves completed their suspended game of July 18 with the Dodgers and obtained a 7-6 10-inning triumph, but lost the regularly scheduled contest 10-3 in the face of six-hit hurling by Whit Wyatt and a 17-hit assault by the Dodgers.

The suspended game had been halted because of Massachusetts Sunday curfew with the score tied at 4-4 in the sixth inning.

Mauriello To Meet Savold On Nov. 5

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP). — Promoter Mike Jacobs filled two fall boxing dates at Madison Square Garden yesterday when he matched Heavyweight Tami Mauriello of New York with Lee Savold of Des Moines, Ia., and Greenwood Lake, N.Y., for Nov. 5, and Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight champion, with Jake Lamotta of New York, for Nov. 12. Both bouts will be 10 rounders.

The Mauriello-Savold bout will be their second meeting. Savold outpointed the young New Yorker last October. Zivic and Lamotta split the decisions in a pair of bouts at Pittsburg early this summer.

De La Cruz Gets Pitching Job

By The Associated Press

A pair of youngsters who expect to win major league berths next spring take the mound at Syracuse to-night in the opening game of the International League play-offs, while a pair of veterans will be the hurlers at Toronto.

Tom De La Cruz, slender Cuban who won 21 for Syracuse while dropping 11, is the choice of Manager Jewell Ens in the first game of the best-of-seven series. He will be opposed by Walt (Monk) Dubiel, young right hander of Newark Bears, who pitched a no-hit, no-run game earlier this month.

Bob Chipman, lanky southpaw who has seen service with Brooklyn Dodgers, will pitch for Montreal Royals in their meeting with Toronto. Luke Hamlin, who also hurled for the Dodgers, is the pick of Manager Burleigh Grimes.

De La Cruz recently was acquired by Cincinnati Reds of the National League for delivery next spring. For the last two years he has been one of the Chiefs' better flingers. Dubiel, only 22 but 4-F in the draft, likely will be viewed by New York Yankees in 1943. He has won 16 and lost nine.

Hamlin, winner in 21 of 29 decisions, has registered eight shutouts during the season and is the league leader in that department. Chipman's record is 15-7.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 14—(CP)—Decision of the military authorities to withdraw service teams from senior hockey on Vancouver Island this year was a tough blow to island fans. They had seen service teams bring hockey back to a prominence it had not enjoyed on the island since Lester Patrick's Victoria Cougars of 1926. Victoria had never before had a team in the Allan Cup play-offs but last season Victoria Army reached the National final.

Clash of military training and hockey, with a consequent effect on the hockey players, was given as the reason for the ban on service teams. This action followed a similar ban at Cornwall, Ont., where the Army decided to withdraw from senior hockey.

It is understood, also, that the R.C.A.F. will not sponsor senior teams in Saskatoon and Yorkton, Sask., as they did last season. Obviously there is to be a considerable curtailment of service hockey although a number of teams will continue to operate.

Maritime Gridders

The talk about a possible Maritime challenge for the Canadian football championship this season is more than mere rumor. Halifax Navy has sufficient high-class playing material to warrant a Grey Cup challenge. Among prominent players now reported with the Navy at Halifax are Bob Isbister, former Toronto and Hamilton kicking star, Al Lenard, Hamilton backfield ace who led the O.R.F.U. in scoring last Autumn, Mike Hedgewick, Scotty Wright and Dick Pawley from last year's Hamilton Wildcats and Steve Levantis, Jack Wedley, Pat Reid, Frank Morris and Jack Plaxton of the 1942 Toronto Navy club.

Incidentally:

The National Hockey League's raids on Canada's junior hockey camps are giving the junior clubs a bit of worry. Fred Cox expects to lose one complete forward line he had lined up for Galt's junior club this year. Red Kane, last year with Brantford Junior Lions, has been signed to a Detroit contract. Among rookies slated for the Chicago Black Hawks camp are Hec Highton, Vancouver goalie, Bill Ingram, London, Ont., defenceman, Johnny Harms, 17-year-old Winnipeg winger, Gordon Butrey, 17-year-old Winnipeg centre, and George Grigor, 21, a Toronto winger.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP). — Since the Phillies' Bill Cox scheduled an arc light game tonight, followed by an 11 a.m. contest tomorrow, the visiting Giants have been threatening to sleep right at the ball park...Isn't that what they've been doing in the Polo Grounds all season?..When E. J. Baker, St. Charles, Ill., hotelman paid $20,000 to Doc Parshall and E. J. Cray for the speedy pacer, King's Counsel, it was the highest price paid for a "wiggler" since C. K. G. Billings bought William for $25,000 back in 1915... According to Newark's Babe Culman, only 1,750 spectators will see the Freddie Mills-Jack London fight in London September 22—but they'll pay $100 each for ringside pews.

When Jack Kelly, Jr., won the rowing title in the Ocean City, N.J., lifeguard meet last week-end, Jack Senior, the famous oarsman, confessed: "I got a bigger kick out of that than I did out of winning the Olympic championship."

Service Dept.:

When Lieut. Steve Juswik, former Notre Damer and star of the Great Lakes Naval Station grid team, reported for duty as master at arms at the regimental building, he found his new bunkmate was Tom Jozwik, former Detroit amateur hockey star ...They decided to let somebody else worry about roll call.

Armistice Plans Started Month Ahead

LONDON, Sept. 14—(CP)—Negotiations for the Italian armistice were started almost a month before the actual terms were laid down and Italy stepped out of the war, an authoritative account of the secret sessions has disclosed.

First overtures were made to British officials in two unidentified countries by emissaries of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, who said that Italy's plight was desperate and asked for terms, the account declared, but they were told that the only terms were unconditional surrender.

In the middle of August an Italian general travelled to Lisbon ostensibly on another mission and went to Sir Ronald Campbell, British ambassador to Portugal, to renew his plea.

He told the British envoy he had full authority to say for the Badoglio government that when the Allies landed in Italy the Italians would join them.

This was reported to the British and American governments, and the Russian and Dominion governments also were informed. High officials of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's staff and the American charge d'affaires took part in the negotiations.

When the terms were drafted the Italian general returned to Italy was delayed and the Italian government, worried, sent another general who brought with him the British general, Carton de Wiart, a prisoner of war, as evidence of good faith.

The account added that the armistice itself was signed by Maj. Gen. Bedell Smith, an American, for the Allies and by Gen. Castellano for the Italians. Both Gen. Eisenhower and Gen. Sir Harold Alexander were present.

Remember Courage

LONDON, Sept. 14—(CP)—Britain's skimpy wartime newspapers paid tribute to "a very gallant gentleman" in both front-page stories and sports-section recollections in telling that test cricketer Hedley Verity died of wounds in an Italian prison camp. Capt. Verity of the Green Howards fell mortally wounded on the plains of Catania while leading his company on an enemy strong-point studded with pill boxes.

Danish Ships Scuttled

The valiant Danish people, stirring under the Nazi yoke, gave the Germans a full taste of their mettle when they sank their fleet under the noses of their invaders. This is Peder Skram, Danish coastal defence ship scuttled in Langebro harbor, Copenhagen. Other ships escaped to Sweden.

Americans so much trouble in Sicily and the 15th and 16th Armored Divisions, among the best the Germans have, were contesting the Allied advance.

Yesterday, the communique said, Allied heavy, medium and light bombers attacked road and railway junctions at Torre del Greco and Pompei in the Bay of Naples and enemy installations southeast of Salerno. Roads near Pompei were again attacked last night. The previous night road junctions, railways and enemy transports in the Potenza and Auletta areas were blasted by medium and light bombers.

In addition to the 10 enemy planes reported destroyed by Allied fighters yesterday three more were listed as shot down last night.

Lose 3 Planes

Allied losses in all these operations were put at three planes.

In a dispatch filed from the 5th Army front last evening, Reynolds Packard, representing the combined American press, said the Allies had pushed forward several miles yesterday on the southern sector of the Salerno front and had repulsed a "suicidal" German counter-attack in the centre which had cost the Nazis the heaviest losses they have yet suffered in Italy.

"The Allies also consolidated both their northern and southern flanks," the dispatch said.

It added the German had temporarily regained a portion of the Salerno Gulf highway which had changed hands several times, but only at high cost.

Both Allied warships and planes were said to be strongly supporting the 5th Army forces battling to enlarge their bridgehead.

The air and sea superiority which the Allies held in the south was a great military advantage, for it permitted them to hop along the coast and dump men and material ashore at almost any point and at the same time deny a similar privilege to the Germans.

It was becoming increasingly apparent, however, that Hitler was staking the future of Nazi Germany on the ancient battlegrounds of his one-time Axis partner.

From the cloudy military and political situation on the Italian mainland the best information available gave this picture:

Draw from France

1. Germany, with 15 to 20 divisions in Italy at the start of the campaign, has poured into the Italian boot tens of thousands more soldiers drawn from France and possibly Russia.

This, combined with the reported appointment of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel as commanding officer in Italy, indicates that Germany is establishing a battle line which may satisfy even the Russian concept of a "second front"—one which will engage at least 50 Nazi divisions.

2. The Germans also are reinforcing their air strength in Italy.

3. Despite Italian surrender the Germans have a firm grip on all strategic points from Naples north to the Po river, where a great final battle may well decide the war.

4. British and Canadian troops are launched on the biggest campaign since the fall of France, while the Americans are headed for their biggest and bloodiest battles of the war.

5. Little help can be expected from the Italians, who are tired of fighting.

6. If Germany is defeated in Italy it likely means the collapse of her satellites in the Balkans.

The possibility the war may be decided in Italy is based on the fact that the Germans seem determined to make a major stand there. If defeated at the Po the Germans, being military realists, may well give up in an effort to keep their country from being overrun and laid waste.

Nazis Suffer

ansk were reported paying heavily for their stubborn but futile resistance. Upwards of 2,000 German troops were slain in fierce fighting.

Many prisoners were taken in this operation, and the Germans abandoned huge quantities of war supplies in their retreat to the high west bank of the Desna, the Moscow war buletin added.

Bryansk, regarded as one of the most-heavily fortified Nazi bases in Russia, now has only one railway artery left, leading northwestward to Smolensk. A Red Army mechanized force is reported to be only a few miles from this line and is expected to render it useless momentarily. This would make the German position practically hopeless.

Capture of Bryansk would open the way for a drive on White Russia, a bare 75 miles to the west.

City Under Fire

Long range Russian artillery already has been brought up and is shelling the city, it was reported, and the battle was growing in intensity as Gen. M. M. Popov sent in his shock troops.

So swift was the Russian advance in the Upper Ukraine that at Kruti, rail station just east of Nezhin, the Red Army troops surprised and killed or captured an entire trainload of Nazi reserves headed for the front lines.

South of Bakhmach, where other Red Army thrusts are pointing toward Kiev, the Russian communique declared that the remnants of four Nazi divisions, originally totalling about 60,000 men, were encircled by Soviet troops and wiped out.

One Russian column in this sector was reported only 30 miles from Chernigov, northeast of Kiev, and within artillery range of Nezhin. Seizure of Nezhin would place Russian vanguards but 72 miles from Kiev and cut the last north-south rail line in German hands east of the Middle Dnieper. The Romney-Poltava line has already been cut by Red Army spearheads at a point 42 miles east of Prikuki and 124 miles from Kiev.

Add 90 Villages

Zaporozhe and Dnieperopetrovsk, at the lower end of the Dnieper River, were objectives of Soviet columns operating in the south. The battered Germans were falling back in disorder, and upwards of 90 villages were added to the 250 which fell to the Russians on other sectors of the long front. Red Army reports said that 1,500 Nazi dead were counted in the drive toward the Lower Dnieper from the liberated Donets Basin west of Stalino. Russian units were reported within 45 miles of the Kharkov-Crimea railway.

Group Begins Inquiry Into Aluminum Set-up

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—(CP).—The House of Commons Committee of War Expenditures decided yesterday to invite suggestions from the public on outlays to be investigated, appointed a sub-committee to look into aluminum purchases and discussed at length the question of whether hearings should be conducted in public.

The 24-man committee, under the chairmanship of Hughes Cleaver (Lib. Halton), will meet again this afternoon for further discussion on whether its inquiry into war expenditures should be open to the press. Members expressed divergent views on this question.

To-morrow morning, the subcommittee appointed to examine aluminum purchases will leave for the Arvida, Que. Aluminum Company of Canada plant to study operations there.

Mr. Cleaver told the organization meeting that for the aluminum inquiry it had been decided to join the No. 2 and No. 3 sub-committees.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, who had urged an inquiry into aluminum purchases in the House of Commons, said he understood that the inquiry would cover Arvida, the Shipshaw Power Development and other aluminum activities. Mr. Cleaver agreed.

Tom Reid (Lib. New Westminster) said the Truman committee in the United States had saved "billions of dollars" by conducting inquiries into charges of waste in the war effort. If a Canadian made a charge of waste, the War Expenditure committee should be in a position to ask him about it.

"The public conscience as well as economy has to be considered," said Mr. Reid. "Take the charges about steel waste in shipyards. I would like to know if they are true."

Mr. Cleaver said he believed the Canadian newspapers should be asked to publicize that the committee wished to have made known to it any charges of waste, and the committee agreed with this suggestion.

Karl Homuth (Pro. Con. Waterloo South) said that when public statements charging waste were made the people making them should be forced to appear before the committee.

Poland Desires Red Agreement

By A. I. GOLDBERG
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Tadeusz Romer, in his first public statement as Foreign Minister of the Polish government, said today that his country desires a "full and equitable understanding with Soviet Russia on a basis of complete loyalty and recognition of mutual rights and mutual independence."

Romer, former Polish Ambassador to Russia who was appointed to the Cabinet of Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk last July, addressed the Polish National Council.

"We do not wish to minimize in any way the position due the Soviet Union in post-war organization of the world," Romer said in the authorized English text of his address. "We look for peaceful and neighborly co-operation between Poland and Russia in the future."

Suggesting that solution of some of the problems that await the "common victory," he added, however, that on "humanitarian grounds" it could be desirable that as many as possible of the Polish citizens now on Soviet territory be enabled to leave Russia to rejoin their families or work for Poland.

Aussie Papers Laud Canada's Effort

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 14.—(CP Cable.)—The Bulletin and Smith's Weekly—weekly newspapers published here and circulating throughout Australia with big reputations for the pungency of their political comments and the "bite" of their cartoons—in their latest editions featured special articles emphasizing Canada's war effort.

The Bulletin said in an editorial Canada was playing the part best adapted to her resources and geography. It said the reason so many Canadian troops were sent to Britain was not a matter of Canada's desire her men should serve in Europe but a matter of urgent necessity after Dunkirk.

"The war with Japan brought a new burden to Canada. With hundreds of islands on the Alaskan and Canadian Pacific Coast to be defended it brought no small responsibility.

"It is little realized that the enemy in the Aleutians was as close to the great Canadian naval base (of Esquimault) and the railway terminal in the Vancouver region as they were in the Solomons to Sydney and Newcastle.

"Canada is doing as big a job in relation to her population as any nation in the war."

Smith's Weekly had a special article pointing out that holding of the recent Churchill-Roosevelt conferences in Quebec highlighted the great contribution Canada is making to the Allies. The article set out the chief facts in Canada's many-sided war work from "Canada at War," issued by the Canadian Wartime Information Board.

The cheque from the Provincial Treasury represented one-fifth of the tax paid by the eight beverage rooms in the city to the Liquor Control Board. Assuming that fact, the total of beverage room authority fees collected from Peterborough during that fiscal year of 1942-43 was $21,370.75.

124 Peterboro Farmers Work In Saskatchewan

To date Saskatchewan has been the chief beneficiary in the program of sending farm help from the Peterborough area West to assist in the harvesting of the grain crops.

This fact was revealed to-day in a statement by W. H. L. Mellis, manager of the local Selective Service Office, who said that all but six of the 130 farmers who have gone to harvest areas in the Western Provinces were assigned to farms in Saskatchewan. The balance, he added, had been given positions in Manitoba.

The original directive granting reciprocal aid to hard-pressed farmers in the bread-basket of Canada enumerated the three provinces of Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and Alberta as included in the scheme, but up to the present time no farmers from the area covered by the local office have been sent to Alberta. The crop in this area is believed to be a little later in coming to the fore than in the other two provinces, Mr. Mellis related.

Two hundred and thirty applications in all have been approved by Frank Paterson, the Department of Agriculture's local representative, and by the Selective Service Office, it was said. Fifty more men are scheduled to depart for the West during this week or by the first of next week, and the names of those to go have been selected from the list of available applicants still on hand, the labor officer stated.

Choose Carefully.

Emphasizing the great importance of having sufficient labor on hand to clear the crops in Western Canada at the time they are ready for havesting. Mr. Mellis pointed out that no selections are made from among farmers and farm hands for this particular work without thorough investigation of their fitness to go.

"If there remains any harvesting or the fall ploughing has yet to be done, men on such farms will not be chosen," he said. "It stands to reason that when one man goes it makes it a little harder on the others on the farm in carrying out the everyday chores, but this is a temporary inconvenience that should be put up with cheerfully in view of the vital need of harvesting the Western crop."

AFTER EFFECTS OF THE "FLU"

After the "Flu" there invariably follows some weakness. The lungs may be weakened or perhaps there is a bronchial trouble. Some show Sinus or Antrum congestion with resulting pain and discomfort. Quite often the kidneys, stomach and bowels are effected as well as other parts of the body.

Radionic Examination will reveal any of the causes of pain or discomfort in any part of the body. Now is the time to take care of your health and not allow toxins to remain in your system to do destructive work that may impair your health for years.

Serious Charge Faces Woman Motorist

Mrs. Laura Storms, Aylmer street, was bailed for trial at the General Sessions of the Peace on a charge of reckless driving in police court this morning after three crown witnesses had been heard in the preliminary inquiry. Bail was fixed at $2,000.

The charge arose out of the fatal accident on Highway 7, east of Peterborough on the evening of Labor Day when Pte. Fred D. Hinton, a Toronto member of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps was killed.

Mrs. Storms, who was represented by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., pleaded not guilty and elected trial by jury.

Coroner Dr. H. G. Carleton, the first witness called by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., testified that he had found the lifeless body of Pte. Hinton in a ditch on the south side of Highway 7, ten miles east of Peterborough when he was called to the scene of the accident. Hinton, he said, had sustained a fracture of the skull and of his left elbow and the injuries were sufficient to have caused death.

"He could not have been dead more than an hour before I got there," the witness stated.

Going To Toronto

Frank Deacon, 44 Belmont street, Toronto, Hinton's brother-in-law told of the week-end party at Trent Bridge. He said that late in the afternoon of Labor Day the party had started out to drive home to Toronto. Witness, Mrs. Hinton and Mrs. Norman Madill were in an automobile and Hinton and Madill were riding motor-cycles in front of the car. Hinton, he said, had been riding a motor-cycle for nine years.

Deacon said that shortly before the accident a car driven by Mrs. Storms had passed the car and the two motor-cycles. "We were travelling about 40 miles an hour," he said, adding that Mrs. Storms' car had been going at the rate of 55 miles an hour when it passed them.

Madill and Hinton, he said, were riding on the north side of the highway, Madill on the track closest to the north side and Hinton on the inner track.

Three Gravel

"As she passed the motor-cycle I could see gravel thrown up over them," Deacon said.

Hinton, he said, put on speed and went to pass the Storms' car.

"Then I noticed the Storms' car sideways," the witness swore. "It swerved to the south side. I saw Hinton crowded right into the ditch.

Deacon said that when he reached the scene of the accident Hinton was prostrate in the ditch and the Storms' car was some distance further on.

Norman Madill, 28 Scollard street, Toronto, the other motor-cyclist in the party estimated the speed of the Storms' car as it passed them as between 55 and 60 miles an hour. It threw gravel and dust over them, witness said.

"When I saw Hinton take after the car," Madill said. "He put on speed and caught up with it and ran alongside of it for some distance. Then I noticed the car swerve to the north as if the back of it had gone on to the shoulder. Then it veered toward the south and seemed to cut across the road to the south side. I could see Fred's red machine outlined against the dark of the car."

Car Ditched

Madill said that the car went into the ditch and he saw it in there when he reached the scene of the accident.

To Mr. Gordon he said that Hinton would have to put on speed to catch up to the Storms' car. He said that Hinton had not given any clue as to why he had taken after the automobile. "He might have wanted to tell her about the dust."

At this stage accused and her counsel consented to bailment for trial without any more evidence.

3 Months In Jail On 3rd Drunk Count

Donald Armstrong was sentenced to three months in jail in police court this morning after he had been convicted of being drunk on Charlotte street and then admitted two previous convictions. The sentence was dated back to September 9.

Armstrong pleaded not guilty to the drunk charge but after hearing the evidence of Constable Ernest Beatty, who arrested the accused, and Sergts. W. E. Wigg and Gordon T. Puffer who saw him in the police station afterward he was convicted. Armstrong did not give any evidence.

Another charge against the accused of stealing $10 was dismissed when Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., announced that he would not offer any evidence.

Gun Crew Stop Tanks

WITH THE AMERICAN 5TH ARMY IN ITALY, Sept. 14—(CP)—A gun crew composed of a young Texas lieutenant and four men shot it out with 13 German tanks on the day the 5th Army landed and they probably saved the whole American beach-head from being cut to pieces. Names of Lieut. John Whitaker, 18 and his men already have gone into citations.

Pte. Wilfrid Lackey, Peterborough member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, previously reported missing, is now known to be a prisoner of war.

Fred T. Tuggey Resigns Incinerator Job

As the first superintendent of the new incinerator, Fred T. Tuggey figuratively tossed in the towel yesterday requesting the property committee to appoint some one else in his place.

The former chairman of the property committee of the city council, in that position and since then as special repair man of the old incinerator, was regarded by the Swanston committee as especially equipped to take on the position the committee hoped to develop at the incinerating plant, in its regular operation and also in a scheme of improvement of the appearance of the city's property.

From all accounts Mr. Tuggey has battled with the new type incinerator until it has got him down, and he has frankly admitted it. For some weeks he has been intimating that he was not satisfied with the results he was getting from the plant, and also that if the committee had anyone else in sight they should get ready to engage him. His resignation has been deliberated for some time and was discussed with members of the committee, the final decision preceding the meeting of the committee Monday afternoon.

The committee also decided to employ a combustion engineer to come to the city and ascertain whether the incinerator can be made to consume the present run of garbage. It was also decided to advise Francis Hankin & Company of this action in the event that they might wish to have some representative present.

A contributory cause of the resignation of Mr. Tuggey was the difficulty of maintaining fire in the new plant under the loads of green garden produce, vegetable tops, lawn clippings, wet garbage and all the rest of a condition which is said to have a higher content of moisture than the incinerators guaranteed to burn when they took the city's contract.

After keeping the old plant in working condition by occasional repairs authorized by the council Mr. Tuggey has been keeping its fires going, according to reports, to relieve the pressure on the new one as it struggled against loads of damp and sometimes dripping garbage.

Horse Hair Needed For Army Vehicles

Up to date information from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is to the effect that the supply of horse hair is getting short. This is no laughing matter, the Board indicates.

Horse hair has an importance all its own in the prosecution of a total war, it was explained. Hair from the tail and mane, for instance, is needed to build shock pads for army tanks, cushions for army vehicles, mattresses for the men who go down to the sea in ships. It is also used to make brushes for cleaning guns, the wings of aircraft and many war machines.

The farmer is reminded of its importance and asked to remember that it's getting scarce. His co-operation is requested in bringing the supply of this war material back up to normal.

"Save the combings when you give your team its everyday hair-do," the W. P. T. B. advises the farmers.

Draw On Cane Nets $34 For War Victims

Some time ago, Rufus McKnight, a retired gentleman living in Hastings, donated a gold headed cane to the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund for the purpose of raising money to give aid to the sufferers from air raids over Britain.

This cane had quite some sentimental value apart from its commercial value, having been a presentation to him in days past, which probably gives a real picture of the urge he felt to do something to help in the rehabilitation of those whom the fortunes of war had afflicted in this manner.

Then the Peterborough-Whitaker Cricket Club comes into the picture, through their sponsoring the sale of tickets for a draw on it at 10 cents each or three for 25 cents, which has resulted in the nice sum of $34.30 being raised, which is credited in today's list for the fund.

This group of sportsmen have supported the fund on a number of occasions, in all, the aggregate of their help to the fund surpassing the $500.00 mark, and further on, this column carries the news of another effort in which they are again playing a prominent part.

Second Effort

This particular effort also marks the second time that Mr. McKnight has given assistance to the fund, the former occasion being reported some time ago, when money was raised in a similar manner from his set of golf clubs also donated for the same purpose.

The draw for the cane was made by the secretary of the fund, the winning ticket proving to be No. 384, which gave the prize to J. W. Cruikshank of Bridgenorth.

There is a tale of high finance connected with the item marked "The story of a silver ship" which from its very character could hardly be told here, except to add it was a one hundred and fifty per cent producer for the fund amongst a group who have been amongst its most consistent supporters.

R.A.F. Sports Event

For the third season in a row, the lads in blue stationed at the Royal Air Force at Picton are coming here to give a helping hand to their fellow compatriots in the motherland, in which for the second time, they will be assisted by a similar group from the school situated at Mount Hope.

Last year a team from each of these stations provided one of the outstanding events of the whole summer sports season, through the sponsorship of the Peterborough-Whitaker Cricket Club, at which time the sum of $311.00 was raised for the fund, itself an indication of the general interest taken by the public at large.

This game of soccer will take place at the Riverside Park next Saturday, September 18, with the kick off being made at 2 p.m. and with Picton using a large number of the same team composed of many members of outstanding teams in the British Isles, it is expected that the Mount Hope R.A.F. School will place its strongest team in the field to overcome the reverse they suffered last year.

Tickets for this outstanding event are now on sale at the very moderate price of 25 cents, and every cent thus raised will come to the fund. These may be procured from interested workers in most of the city's industrial plants, or from members of the cricket club, or at the Examiner Office.

Ministers Appointed To Public Schools

At a recent meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Ministerial Association plans were made for teaching religious education in the public schools.

During the past three years the Board of Education has permitted clergymen of the city to teach one-half hour each week. Several of the ministers have never missed a single lesson. The children also seem eager to learn the stories of the Bible it was reported. The classes commence this week.

The following ministers have been appointed to the various schools for this coming season:

May's—Rev. C. E. Moore.
Confederation—Major R. Bamsey
King Edward—Rev. F. W. Craik.
Prince of Wales—Rev. H J. Manoney and Rev. W. A. Filer.

TPR. MELVILLE BANHAM

Tpr. Melville Banham (Bob) youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Banham, 271 Simcoe street, is now stationed at Orillia. Before moving to Toronto he was a member of the Prince of Wales Rangers (R). At one time he was employed in the wire department of the C.G.E., but at the time of his enlistment he was working at Malton airport. Trp. Banham's wife and two sons live in Toronto.

After seven years at the Western Clock Company, Miss Grace Eldred, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Eldred, 36 Anson street, decided to enlist in the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. and she left last week end for training in Rockcliffe where she expects to be a truck driver.

An Ennismore boy, Pte. Arthur Renout, who worked north of Buckhorn for a time before he went overseas with the Hastings Prince Edward unit more than three years ago, has been in Sicily since the beginning of the invasion.

A letter posted August 4 reached his wife on September 6 with a number of souvenirs which will be pouring into the country from all the soldiers. Two of the larger items were an Italian soldier's identification card and a piece from a German parachute, which he had taken from the former owners since they had no more need of them.

His letter said that while they were there the soldiers did not get a great deal of sleep. It was too hot during the day and at night the ants and flies were there in such large numbers, it was impossible to rest. After the allied bombardment, he said there were absolutely no houses for rent. Pte. Renout's job has been that of a stretcher bearer and he mentioned that the Germans with whom he came in contact were magnificent physical specimens.

FLT. LIEUT. ALFRED DAWSON

According to word received by Mrs. C. H. Dawson, 543 Gilmour street, her son Alfred Dawson has been promoted to Flight Lieutenant, dating back to May 18.

The 24-year-old airman enlisted in May 1941, after four years with the Utilities Commission. He took a radio technician's course at Queen's University and graduated in second place in a class of more than 100 students. Because of his high standing he was given his commission, which he received three months after his enlistment in the lowest rank.

During the winter he was serving with an R.A.F. Sunderland flying boat squadron where he was responsible for the upkeep of the intricate radio equipment and acted as instructor for the aircrew with these instruments. Flt. Lieut. Dawson went overseas in March 1942.

A visit from General Bernard Montgomery, commander of the British 8th Army, has been one of the highlights of the Sicilian campaign for Pte. Keith Nelson of the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mrs. T. Nelson, 735 Water street. Gen. Montgomery inspected the men and Pte. Nelson said he gave a wonderful speech and praised the Canadian troops for the job they had done in the invasion.

"We were a pretty proud bunch of boys, Mom," he wrote.

In his letter, this soldier said he had come through the Sicilian fighting in fine shape and had gained a lot of valubale experience. The Italians set such a pace that it kept Canadian troops hustling to keep up with them, he declared.

"Where we are campaigning now we have a lovely creek and the boys have fixed it up as a swimming pool. We have lots of fresh fruits like grapes, oranges and lemons and many varieties of nuts, which add variety to our diet. The ony thing I really miss Mother are your swell pies, and I hope I don't have to wait too long before I have some more."

L. SEAMAN GERALD BRONSON

Home on furlough after serving 2½ years in the R.C.N.V.R. is Leading Seamen Gerald Bronson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bronson, 29 Crescent street. He and his brother, A. B. Elwood Bronson enlisted together 2½ years ago and both have been serving aboard minesweepers. Gerald has seen some action, but strict navy regulations keep his lips sealed about his adventures.

Word has been received that Capt. L. E. Tompkins of the 6th anti tank unit has arrived overseas, a second time. His parents live at 483 George street south, and he went overseas the first time with the 4th anti tank unit under Major J. A. Harstone. Capt. Tompkins returned some months ago to qualify for a commission.

The ground crew are responsible for the success of the fliers in the opinion of P.O. "Bill" Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, who has just been awarded the D.F.C. In a recent letter home he paid special tribute to this unsung branch of the service.

"Everyone thinks that the ground crew on their own plane is the tops and I am no exception. In fact I am sure our ground crew are much better than most. There is certainly not a plane on the station which get better care. These guys would work all night on the kite if you asked them to, and when the sergeant in charge says the aeroplane is ready to fly, we can always be sure that it is in tip top shape.

"Their complete thoroughness may not seem so important to one who is not flying, but boy when you and your crew have to spend half the night in the plane, the good work of the boys on the ground means an awful lot. It did not mean so much back in the training schools if things were not in perfect shape, but they have to be now. There are other things to concentrate on without pampering a dud engine and worrying about faulty controls.

"I would swear by the chaps on our plane and I have never seen any fellows so interested in their work. In all time we've been flying here, none of my crew have found a thing to complain about the maintenance that the ground crew have given our plane. Most people do not realize that a good ground crew is easily as essential to an aircraft's success as a good aircrew. They do twice the work of the aircrew and get none of the credit. In fact they get criticism for not being on the flying crew themselves. I used to feel like criticizing them myself, but in the past few months I've gradually come to realize that all our success or failure largely depends on them."

WPTB Permits Refunds For Customers

Many phone calls are received by the local office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board regarding the return of goods which have proved unsatisfactory to their purchasers and which customers have attempted unsuccessfully to obtain refunds on, it was stated to-day by W. E. Foley, manager of the Peterborough branch.

On returning to the store where the goods were bought, Mr. Foley said, many a customer is informed that the merchant is forbidden by "Government regulations" to make refunds. "This is strictly untrue," he said, pointing out that under the rulings of the W. P. T. B. it is permissable for a merchant to make refunds provided articles are returned within 12 clear business days of the date of purchase or if found defective either in material or workmanship.

Market Checked.

Complaints come in from time to time, it was also stated by Mr. Foley, on the question of prices prevailing in the weekly Saturday markets. "The market is checked every Saturday," he said, referring to such complaints. "Two investigators from this office check farmers' prices on all goods on which a ceiling has been placed to see that there are no infractions. We have found that in the local market prices for all types of produce under ceilings are practically 100 per cent in line.

The Consumer Branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is to have an exhibit at the Lindsay Fair, September 15, 16, 17 and 18. As a feature of this exhibit there will be demonstrations of various methods whereby savings can be effected and wastage prevented in the making and remodelling of clothes. Another display, set up by a local grocer, will give visitors a graphic picture of the amount of groceries one can buy to-day for the price of a bag of sugar and a bag of flour back in 1920.

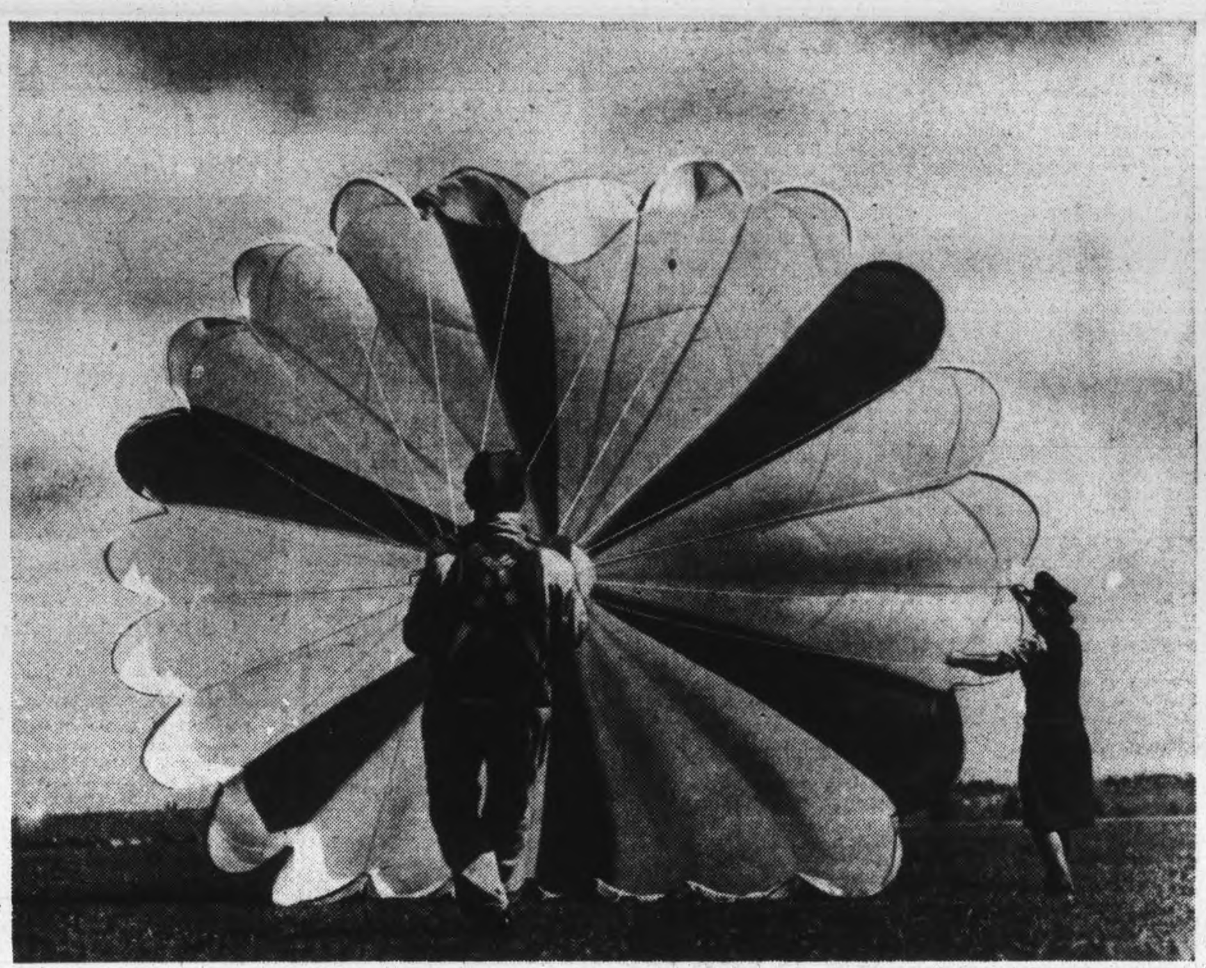
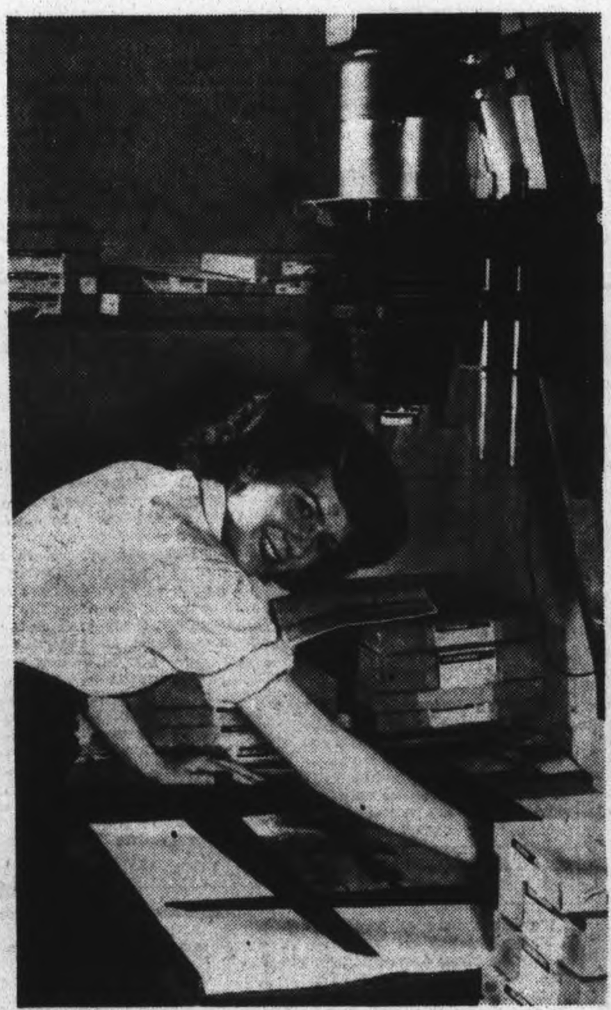
Uniformed Women of Canada's Army, Navy, Air Force are Jills of all Trades

Canada's three women's services, C.W.A.C., WRENS, and the Air Force Women's Division are calling for recruits to replace men for overseas combat duty. Tears flow as C.W.A.C. recruits come out of the gas chamber at their Kitchener, Ont., Training Centre. Each Corps member receives gas protection training.

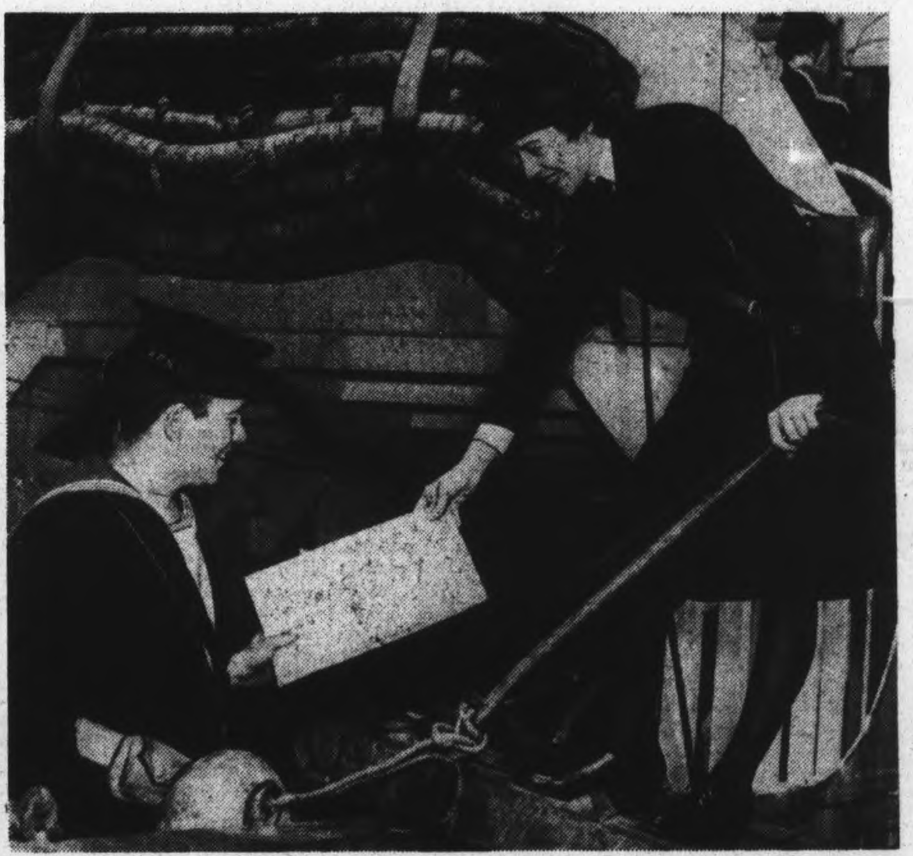


In air stations across Canada the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. has an admirable record of service. By their efficient handling of jobs once done only by men girls in air force blue are relieving their brothers-in-arms for combat duty in the air. L.A.W. Olive Grekol, Vancouver, checks a 'chute for tears.

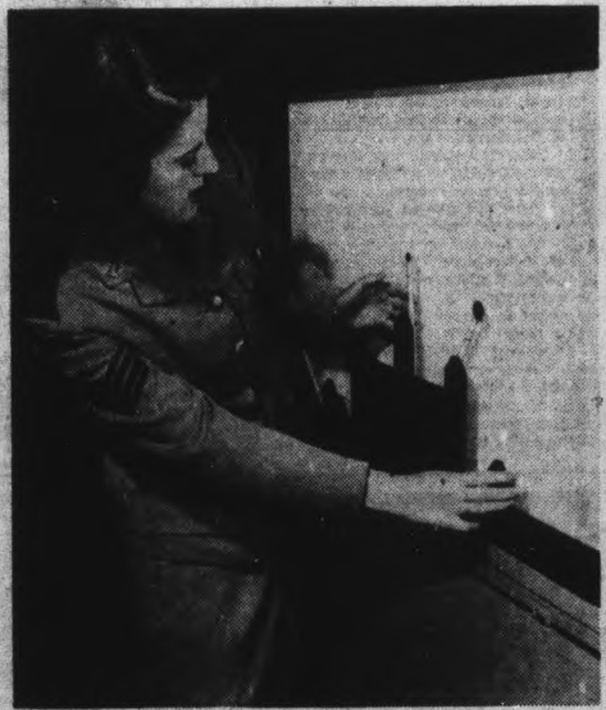


WREN Photographer Blanche Heyes, Port Arthur, Ont., works in darkroom of Naval Photographic Section. In Canada's WRENS 2,000 officers, ratings are serving.

Handle with care! Leading Air Woman S. Wallace, Vancouver, lends a hand with a bomb. Once this was exclusively a job for men. But today girls are taking over more ground duties so that their brothers, sweethearts, husbands may fly.



Message for C.O. of a Canadian Corvette is delivered by WREN Maria Wallbank, Montreal, to Quartermaster Able Smn. Eric Hall, RCNVR, of Toronto. Up-to-date quarters, recreational facilities second to none are provided for RCN WRENS.



Sgt. Marguerite Richardson, of Toronto, is night vision tester in Ottawa. She is shown operating a machine used to test ability to see in darkness.

Life in Women's services isn't all work and drill. For off duty hours recreation is provided in Naval bases, Army camps and Air Force Stations. Girls are given leave regularly. Out on pass Sgts. Keen Canadian Air Cadets Seek Careers in Aviation

THE first aim of the Air Cadets of Canada is to give Canadian boys an opportunity to develop their interest in aviation and to lay a foundation of sound knowledge. It is intended to provide Canadian boys and young men with ground training and instruction similar to the ground training given to R.C.A.F. aircrew to create a body of trained young men, capable of being of service should they subsequently decided to enter the R.C.A.F. At the same time Air Cadets can prepare themselves to follow a career in aviation after the war.

Also fundamental is the development of character. Every Air Cadet must realize the necessity of co-operation with every other member.

In the Air Cadets, physical as well as mental needs are recognized, and training to ensure strength and health is a fundamental part of the program. Actually the goal of Air Cadets is the creation of a nation-wide body of youth educated in aviation subjects, trained in co-operative effort, and possessing the qualities of leadership.

Making it Canada's official Air Cadet organization, the Air Cadets of Canada received the authorization of His Majesty's Privy Council in Canada in November, 1940. The Order in Council provides that:

Balanced Training

1. Air Cadets shall be subject to the authority and under the orders of the Air Officer Commanding the Royal Canadian Air Force Command in which the Air Cadets Units are located.

2. Air Cadets shall be drilled, trained, and furnished with arms and equipment, in such manner and under such conditions as the Minister of National Defence for Air may prescribe.

3. Air Cadets, as such, shall not be liable to service in the Royal Canadian Air Force in any emergency.

On the authority of the above Order the Air Cadet movement in Canada was launched through the medium of a civilian organization called the Air Cadet League of Canada. Since the original organization, the R.C.A.F. has taken an increasing interest in the movement and a division of responsibilities has resulted which is outlined as follows:

Organization

(a) Operating under a Dominion charter, the League elects a Board of Directors from its membership consisting of prominent citizens throughout the country who are interested in the Air Cadet movement. A balance has been maintained by having at least one representative from each of the provinces in the Dominion on the Board.

(b) The Board elects annually an Executive Committee which is responsible to the Board of Directors and is charged with transaction of business, statements and development of policy, and co-ordination with the R.C.A.F.

(c) The Board of Directors forms and maintains a Provincial Committee in each of the provinces, and these Provincial Committees may in turn form and administer Regional Committees where centres of population or other conditions necessitate such action. Provincial Committees are also responsible for the organization of Unit Committees and the Unit Committee in turn is responsible for the organization and administration of the Air Cadet Squadron.

(d) The League maintains a National Headquarters in Ottawa with a permanent staff consisting of a secretary-treasurer and other necessary assistance. The office of the National Director is also established at this Headquarters and at present the position is filled by a senior officer of the R.C.A.F. on loan to the Air Cadet League. The R.C.A.F. also maintains a Liaison Officer at this headquarters.

Responsibilities

(a) Finance—Unit Committees are responsible for furnishing any funds necessary for the administration and training of Air Cadet squadrons over and above that provided by grants paid by the Government. These committees, however, may be assisted financially by funds received and disbursed by the Provincial Committee.

(b) Promotion — The League, through its committees, is responsible for the promotion and formation of Air Cadet Squadrons. In this they are assisted by R.C.A.F. officers maintained at Commands for cadet purposes.

(c) Officers and Instructors — The Unit Committee is responsible for the recommendation of gentlemen to act as officers and instructors of Squadrons, and Provincal Committees are given an opportunity to concur or otherwise in these recommendations.

(d) Co-ordination of Policy with the R.C.A.F.—The executive Committee collaborates with the R.C.A.F. in matters of policy affecting Air Cadets and makes recommendations to the R.C.A.F. in such matters.

(e) Co-operation with Education—Due to the fact that education in Canada is provincially controlled, provincial committees of the League maintain Liason with provincial educational authorities with a view to establishing certain phases of Air Cadet training in school curricula.

(f) Magazine—The League is responsible for publication of the "Canadian Air Cadet", a monthly periodical published mainly for Air Cadet use but also distributed to the public. The managing editor of the magazine is appointed by the League and accomodation for the necessary staff is made at national headquarters.

(g) Enrolment — Boys between the ages of 12 and 17, inclusive, are eligible for enrolment as Air Cadets, but the enrolment of Juniors, 12 to 14 inclusive, must not exceed one-third of the total strength of the Squadron. Boys are medically examined on application for enrolment, the examination being similar to that given to applicants for aircrew duties in the Air Force.

Many Subjects

Administration of Air Cadets by the R.C.A.F. is described as follows:

(a) Training—The syllabus of training is that of the R.C.A.F. Initial Training Schools except that instruction in Armament is more limited and Navigation is not covered as fully as the I.T.S. course. To the I.T.S. syllabus has been added a course on knots and splices and the St. John Ambulance Course in First Aid. Examinations are set by the R.C.A.F. in each subject except the last two named above.

(b) Enlistment in R.C.A.F.—Air Cadets who submit a record of training showing successful completion of any five subjects, plus drill, of the Air Cadet Syllabus, are not obliged to undergo a tour of ground duties on enlistment in the Air Force. This applies to aircrew applicants only and such applicants must meet all other aircrew requirements. Commencing 1st September, 1943, the requirements of any five subjects plus drill will be replaced with a list of five specific subjects, viz: Administration, Aircraft Recognition, Mathematics, Drill, Signals. A combination of Navigation and Meteorology will be accepted in lieu of Administration and Aircraft Recognition.

Air Cadets who are enlisted and placed on leave without pay till their reporting date, return to their squadron for further training during this interim period. Those enlisted for aircrew duties are autorized to wear a red "flash" in the cap of their Air Cadet Uniform which distinguishes them as enlisted Air Cadets.

(c) Officers and Officers' Courses—Officers are recommended for appointment to commission in a new component of the R.C.A.F. known as the "Air Cadet Corps" and applications for appointment are made in the usual manner. Officers are required to attend a qualifying course within one year of the date of appointment, such course being of two weeks' duration.

(d) Instructors and Instructors' Courses—Up to the present time Instructors have been appointed by Unit Committees. Training Courses for instructors have been provided by the R.C.A.F.

(e) Equipment — Instructional equipment is provided free of charge by the R.C.A.F. This includes service publications and equipment necessary to teach Signals, Aircraft Recognition, Navigations, Anti-Gas, Drill, etc. Rifles are also provided on the basis of one per two cadets. Squadron instruction in Armament is limited to learning how to shoot the .22 rifle properly. Supervised instruction on shooting the revolver and Browning gun is made available when cadets visit R.C.A.F. stations.

Smart Uniforms

(f) Clothing—Uniforms of closed neck style but otherwise resembling the R.C.A.F. airman's uniform are provided for senior Air Cadets. The uniform includes cap, tunic and trousers only. A free issue of two shirts and one pair khaki slacks is provided for each senior Air Cadet.

(g) Annual Inspections—A formal inspection is held annually usually during the month of May or June when each Air Cadet Squadron is reviewed by an R.C.A.F. officer. An inspection of equipment and an inventory is taken at this time and the accomplishment of training for the preceding 12 months is reviewed.

(h) Grants—Annual grants are paid to Unit Committees based on the results of training achieved during the 12-month period, the strength of the Squadron and the result of the annual inspection. The basis of the grants is $1.00 capitation grant for each senior Air Cadet, $1.25 uniform maintenance grant for each uniform provided and used, and $2.00 per band instrument. These grants are paid in full provided that the Squadron shows a good training achievement and there are no discrepancies in the equipment inventory.

(i) Camps—Air Cadet camps of 10 days' duration are held on R.C.A.F. stations. Accommodation is provided either under canvas or in barracks and regular service rations are provided. Phases of training which are difficult to provide with average squadron facilities are covered at this time. Transportation to and from camp is provided.

(j) Educational Recognition —In conjunction with Provincial Educational Committees, the Air Force maintains close co-operation with provincial authorities. Some provinces already have adopted certain subjects or phases of Air Cadet training as a school requirement. Air Cadets who successfully complete these phases of training at school are credited accordingly by the Squadron to which they belong.

The number of Squadrons to date exceeds 300, with a strength of nearly 22,000 Air Cadets and a total of about 1,600 officers and 900 instructors. The Air Force, with the concurrence of the Air Cadet League, has set an objective of Junior Air Cadets, but it is estimated that there are approximately 3,500.

All-Canadian Norseman Beloved By Bush Pilots

THE Noorduyn Norseman, the only wholly-Canadian designed plane in Canada's aircraft program was born on a spring day in 1934 in a small office high in a Montreal office building. It was there that R. B. C. Noorduyn wrestled with the problems of specifications and construction necessary for a plane designed to purely Canadian needs.

His own ideas, tempered in the bath of Canadian bush pilot experience, resulted in the creation of the Norseman, which is now being delivered to the U.S. Army Air Force as a cargo transport craft. At least, Canadian bush pilots know it familiarly as the Norseman. Officially the craft delivered to the United States is known as the UC-64 and this model contains a number of modifications adapting it to the use of the American air force.

Like the Harvard trainer, also built by Noorduyn, the Norseman is powered by a single 550-horsepower Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine. A high-wing monoplane, it has a wing span of 51 feet, 6 inches and is of composite steel tube and wood construction. Designed, as it is, to meet the varied conditions of Canadian flying it is quickly convertible from wheels to skiis or floats, the conversion taking only about one and a half hours from wheels to floats and 20 minutes from wheels to skis.

Unusual Versatility

In peacetime the Norsemen won the hearts of the northern fliers and when Bernt Balchen took over the job for General Arnold, chief of the U.S. Army Air Corps. of helping establish air fields in Greenland, the famed pilot asked for a Norseman to help carry out the job. That was the craft's introduction to U.S. official circles and the impression it made was sufficient to keep the Norseman flying south over the border in increasing numbers.

The cabin is equipped with swingover type dual controls, and in addition to the seats for the pilot and co-pilot there are quickly removable seats for six passengers. The original version of the plane provided for eight seats so that under the new arrangement considerable space is left for military equipment, supplies and other cargo.

The pilots' cockpit is provided with good-sized doors on either side, for convenient entrance and exit when the cabin is loaded with freight, and to enable the crew to get out on the floats quickly, an important feature under conditions of strong wind and current. Doors are also fitted with an arrangement whereby they may be jettisoned instantly in an emergency. At the rear end the cabin is reached through a door on the left side. The door and panel to which it is hinged may be removed quickly providing a large opening for loading freight. There is a corresponding removable panel on the other side for loading freight.

Fine Utility Plane

The cabin of the Norseman has been carefully sound-proofed and temperature-proofed and a very efficient system of heating and ventilation installed. Among the modifications made for the United States model is the installation of additional fuel tanks in what is normally the baggage compartment of the fuselage below the cabin floor. The total capacity of these tanks, plus those in the wings and a reserve tank in the fuselage gives the plane a cruising range of 1,200 miles.

When Bob Noorduyn set out to design this ace utility plane, he had a wealth of experience in the aircraft industry behind him, dating back unbrokenly to 35 years ago, when he first started tinkering with model planes back in Holland, where he was born, his father being Dutch and his mother English. In his work he has been associated with many of the pioneer builders and pilots, names like Sopwith, Bellanca, Byrd, Wilkins, and his compatriot Anthony Fokker with whom he worked in partnership in the United States for many years following the last war.

Impressive Poster In C.P.A. Plant

Canadian Pacific Airlines repair plant at New Westminster, B.C., report an impressive poster which made its appearance in the paint shop. The sign, 56 inches by 44 inches, is of a book opened at Elbert Hubbard's famous piece entitled: Loyalty. It reads: "If you work for a man, work for him. If he pays you wages that supply your bread and butter, work for him; speak well of him; stand by him and stand by the institution he represents. If put to a pinch an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness. If you must villify, condemn and eternally disparage, why, resign your position, and when you are outside, damn to your heart's content. But as long as you are a part of the institution, do not condemn it. If you do, you are loosening the tendrils that hold you to the institution and the first high wind that comes along, you will be uprooted and blown in the blizzard's track, and probably you will never know why."

Huge School At St. Thomas

The largest training school in Canada is the R.C.A.F. Technical Training School at St. Thomas, Ont. It is housed in one of the most modern public buildings taken over by the Air Force for the duration. Built as a hospital by the Ontario Government at a cost of several millions of dollars the buildings had been completed but a short time when war broke out. The whole of the institution was turned over to the Department of National Defence for war training purposes, by the Ontario authorities.

This huge ground instructional specializes in mechanical trades connected with aircraft and aircraft engines. Airframe mechanics, aero-engine mechanics, electricians and instrument mechanics, are a few of the trades which the airmen learn at this school. Various types of advanced related technical courses are also undertaken to meet special requirements which arise in the service. Since it was opened, late in 1939, it has turned out thousands of specialized tradesmen.

At its inception the school was staffed principally by R.A.F. personnel, but in the intervening years many of them have been recalled and replaced by R.C.A.F. personnel. A large portion of the staff are R.C.A.F. Women's Dvision, who look after most of the clerical work that is required at the school.

Since the R.C.A.F. took over the institution a number of extensive temporary buildings have been added so as to house aircraft and equipment used for training purposes. The school's hospital is the largest and best equipped of any in the R.C.A.F. It is used to serve many of the surrounding R.C.A.F. stations in Western Ontario as well as the school. Until quite recently the W. D. Hospital Assistants course was held here. Recreational facilities on the station have also been developed and enlarged and now consist of a large drill hall, theatre, recreational hall and athletic fields built on a large scale.

Commanding Officer of the Technical School is Group Captain J. H. Keens, A.F.C. a veteran flier of the last war. A native of Toronto Group, Captain Keens was formerly personnel staff officer at No. 1 Training Command Headquarters, Toronto. Chief technical officer is Wing Commander B. H. Rolles, R.A.F. who is charged with the difficult task of controlling and overseeing the instruction of the airmen who are taking training at this school.

RED CROSS PLANES

The latest edition of "Dispatch" the official journal of the Red Cross, shows pictures of some de Haviland "Rapides" flying in formation. These ships, in addition to the Air Force rondels, have a large red cross on a white circle painted on the side of the fuselage and on the under side of the lower wings.

Roomy Anson Trainer Can Accommodate Five

THE boys who pilot those bombers across blacked-out Europe to hit Berlin square on the nose will in future find their targets with navigation taught in Canada on a new, streamlined version of the familiar Avro Anson II, the dependable, old, twin-engined plane which has become so familiar to millions of Canadians.

The new Anson, known as the Anson V, is now being produced at MacDonald Brothers Aircraft in Winnipeg and the Canadian Car and Foundry plant at Amherst, N.S.

Though still essentially the same plane, the new version has more power, speed and derives many advantages from a new type of construction using plywood to the exclusion of much vital aluminum and other badly needed war material.

The Anson is a twin-engined, low wing monoplane used exclusively for training purposes. The Anson II was designed to fill the role of carrying two or three people for dual instruction mostly on short flights. The new Anson is primarily a navigational trainer.

Replacing quantities of seamless steel tubing by use of plywood construction makes it possible to finish twice as many fuselages in the same factory floor space, an important contribution to speeding Canadian plane production and the war effort.

The new plane carries five men for three and a half hours and can stay at 8,000 feet with one engine, whereas the older version's one engine ceiling was 3,000 feet.

New Engines

Other improvements which come with the 450 horsepower Pratt and Whitney engines, replacing the Jacobs, include a climbing speed of 1200 feet a minute, cruising and top speed 20 miles an hour faster to 165 and 200 respectively and with only seven miles an hour greater stalling speed.

The inherent stability is not affected by the change. On the Anson it has always been good. There are no spin characteristics for pilots do not spin this type of plane, in which aerobatics are not carried out.

The new type of construction is more comfortable and far roomier.

It was designed by Canadian engineers for Canadian conditions. The cosy cabin with porthole type windows is a great improvement in the Canadian climate over the older draughty, glass enclosed cabin of the Anson II.

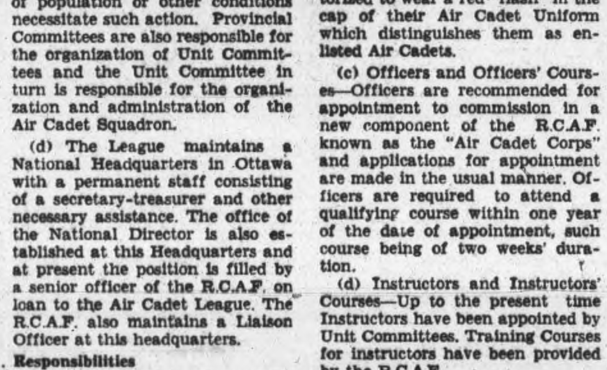
Instead of the bulky turret a less bulky astral dome has replaced it for use of the sextant.

PIONEERED AIR CARGO

Canada's northern air operators pioneered commercial air cargo, commencing in 1926, and, at the outbreak of war, the Dominion's fliers carried the world's record tonnage of air freight. During the past decade Canada's pilots blazed a network of northern air trails which, by 1937, carried commercial air freight totalling 24 million pounds and, even in prewar 1939, these operators moved 22 million pounds as compared to 9½ million pounds by the United States.

CHESS CLUB

Included in social activities at Canadian Propellers Ltd. in Montreal is a chess club. Nine aircraft workers turned out for the first meeting.



MANY THOUSANDS of letters are being carried to and from the members of Canada's fighting forces overseas by the Canadian Government's Trans-Atlantic Air Service, operated by the Trans-Canada Air Lines. Photograph shows Lieut. E. R. Kightley, of the Canadian Army Postal Corps (CENTRE) supervising the loading of mail previous to the take-off of one of the flights.

Woman Runs Airplane Plant

Mrs. E. E. Horner, a Canadian housewife, got busy when her husband took sick, visited a bank, then called on various government and other agencies handling sub-contracts for war industry component parts. That was a little over a year ago and today Mrs. Horner has a small aircraft parts factory in Toronto with one man and 16 women busy at a battery of machines turning out thousands of components.

Her company operates under the name of the Airplane Supply Co. Ltd. A year ago it had one machine. Today the plant's output carries all sorts of official approval after passing all tests with flying colors and it is working 24-hours-a-day on three shifts to make these machines function at full capacity.

In addition to equipment supplied directly to Squadrons, the R.C.A.F. keeps moving picture projectors with instructional films circulating in each Command.

PLANES OVERHAULED

Canada's aircraft industry is doing more than simply building planes. Aircraft maintenance and overhaul—and that includes damaged planes shipped back from overseas—is an urgent branch of our war effort. One of the country's biggest aircraft and engine overhaul plants is that of Central Aircraft Ltd., Crumlin, Ont., near London. It has more than 223,000 square feet of floor space.

Bomber Radio Operator Rates High In Importance

LONDON—(R.C.A.F. News Service)—The radio operator on an R.C.A.F. bomber is a pretty important fellow. His task isn't spectacular, but when he's needed, he's needed badly.

Picture a bomber over the Ruhr Valley with a wounded crew member aboard and with one or two engines out of commission, perhaps belching smoke. There's no moon out, and freezing rain beats a constant tattoo on the fuselage.

Visibility is virtually zero, and the plane is forced to return home—and must do so by the shortest possible route. We won't say that the navigator is "lost," but his idea of his location is too vague if the ship is to get home without crossing enemy - occupied territory where flak positions are heavy.

This is an emergency to be handled by the wireless operator, who sits at his own little table in a compartment surrounded by radio receivers, transmitters and other radio devices of a special nature. He is the man who can find out what lies ahead—despite the clouds, despite the darkness. He can find his exact location, or the course to follow to reach home. Or if the crew are ready to ditch in the sea, it is he who gives Air-sea Rescue Service his position.

Gets A "Fix"

So the navigator calls up the Wireless Operator and asks him to get a "fix". The WAG contacts a control station in England, which in turn co-ordinates with two other stations, and in no time they are able to signal back the distressed plane's exact location. When the bomber gets closer to home the WAG can ask for a "QDM", which comes back to him in the form of a bearing and course to fly in degrees.

Typical Wireless Operator-Air Gunner is Sgt. Jack Williams, of Box 4, Cumberland, B.C. Jack, who is on an all-Canadian squadron, once got his trailing aerial shot away by an unusually heavy concentration of flak.

"It came too close for comfort," was all he had to say. He considers such experiences to be just part of an "every-night" job carried out by Canadian airmen. Men like Jack don't often have glowing accounts to tell interrogators grouped around a table. The WAG usually sits there, quietly sipping a mug of hot cocoa as he listens to the vivid reports of the other aircrew.

It's only when he has guided his bomber back to home base by bearings, or perhaps manned a machine gun to blast away at attacking night fighters, that he enters into conversation.

Invaluable Work

Sgt.-WAG Milton Warren, of Geraldton, Ont., making his 13th mission over enemy territory recently, was able to assist intelligence officers to accurately chart the position of a particularly large fire on the target map. "I just happened to be looking out my window as my pilot banked to avoid a flak barrage," said Warren, "and there, expanding outwards like the ripple in a pool of water, was an explosion that would have done the old devil proud. It bloomed up like the hole made by a crayfish . . . if you know what I mean."

Matt Cruickshank, 29, formerly of 424 Pitt street, Cornwall, Ont., garage mechanic is another. You see WAGS come from all walks of life and all ages. Some of them formerly had "ham" stations before the war. Others knew nothing about electrical devices and had to learn "from the ground floor up." Their job is never done. New technical radio aids are continually being developed and they must master their use and operation. Codes and methods of procedure also change, and the wireless operator absorbs their use. He is constantly "going to school," so to speak. By actual count, he's required to do more things in an aircraft than any other man aboard He's the key man

Seldom In News

You don't read much about wireless-air gunners in mission reports unless they happen to be stories about bombers that have been lost in bad weather....or have been saved from the seas by signals sent out on a portable radio from a rubber dinghy. Then the attention focusses on the boy behind the key. He is the only man in the aircraft who can guide the ship back. The pilot can't do it....he has no course to fly. The navigator can't do it....bad weather makes it impossible for him to take an astro-shot or to chart a course without radio bearings. It's the WAG's show. He's the man the rest of the crew look to, to get them home. He's the unsung hero of the mission. It's just an every-day job for him.

Comfort Is Most Essential In Planning RCAF Clothing

By
Flt. Lieut. Kenneth G. B. Wright
Public Relations Officer, R.C.A.F
In India

NEW DEHLI (R.C.A.F. News Service)—Group Captain or LAC, you learn a few things about uniforms when you are serving "east of Suez," as thousands of members of the Royal Canadian Air Force are these days.

Except in the northern sections in winter, blues are discarded by the lads attached to the R.A.F. in India. Instead, you wear khaki shorts and what is generally known as a bush jacket, or bush shirt. The latter is something like a tunic, but has sleeves which button at the cuff. For day wear, the garment has short sleeves.

In very hot weather you wear a topee, or pith helmet. Shoes are very much as you like them, black or brown, often suede, for both officers and men. You can get a pair made to order in India for the equivalent of about $5.

In the evening, long sleeves and slacks are the order, as much as a protection against malarial mosquitoes as for dress reasons. The bush shirt, without a tie, is permissible, even the custom, in most messes in the evening.

Don't get the idea the boys are slack in their dress, however. It's a question of health and comfort. When tunics are worn, as they sometimes are, every button is polished just as brightly as it was back home. Slacks have just as fine a crease as the blues used to have, and if the shoes will take a polish they have a good one. You seldom wear a uniform more than two days before sending it to the dhobee, the native who does your washing.

Officers wear their rank stripes on their epaulettes, and warrant officers theirs on a strip around their wrists, like a watch.

A NOVEL PLAN

Employees of Central Aircraft, London, Ont., have a novel plan for supporting war charities. Each worker kicks in with an hour's pay each month. The plan, for one thing, helps keep contributions on a fair comparative basis so far as ability to contribute is concerned, officials of the workers' association explain.

Accepted Invitation

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.— (CP).— A Japanese flier who dropped leaflets on a U.S. fighter squadron in China, asking to meet the American airmen in battle, didn't live long. Lieut. David Neil wrote his parents here that the Americans accepted the challenge and the whole Japanese squadron, including the Jap who wrote the letter, was wiped out.

Loose Talk Sinks Ship

VANCOUVER, Sept. 14—(CP). — The Vancouver Sun, in a newspage story dealing with "loose talk," said yesterday a 10,000-ton freighter built on this coast was torpedoed by a waiting enemy submarine at midnight of the day it left a west coast Canadian port laden with cargo. Apparently the incident referred to occurred some time ago.

New Booklet Issued on Quick Grooming

Beauty on a Few Minutes a Day!

"What a girl!" he thinks. "Works like a bee from 8 to 5, looks like a butterfly at 6."

No one can take lots of time to be lovely these serious days. There's too much to do! But loveliness, smart grooming is as important as ever.

The secret is to know how to use your time. If you schedule your beauty care, using time-saving short-cuts, you can keep your hair in place, your skin radiantly clear, your body immaculately bathed—all in 35 minutes a day.

For instance, the well-groomed girl never has rough elbows peeping out of short-sleeved dresses. You can keep yours smooth and soft by just dabbing on cream left over from your face-creaming at night.

Our new 32-page booklet tells all about right make-up and quick grooming technique for the busy woman. Gives care of skin, hair, nails, hands and feet—and has time-saving routines for business girls and housewives.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service for your copy of THE QUICK WAY TO SMART GROOMING. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

DON'T LET IT DOWN YOU

WHEN YOUR side fails to make a contract which it bid by sound methods, don't let it down you or make you timid the next time a like situation is presented. Average players could learn a very useful lesson if they could sit in on some of the world's greatest experts when they got set on a constructively bid contract. They would find the stars treating it as "all in the game" and not having a fruitless post-mortem about what might have been, when they were agreed on what correct action was.

North on this deal was John R. Crawford, brilliant Philadelphia master; South was Howard Schenken of New York, who won practically every national championship, including the Masters' Pairs, in which this deal arose. West was Lee Hazen, who has won many championships including the Masters' Individual, and East was Richard L. Frey, one of the most consistent winners of national events since the game began.

Mr. Hazen made the clearly marked correct lead of the spade 3. Doing all he could to protect the spade entry to the dummy to help score the diamonds, Mr. Schenken put on the 7, and the J won. Mr. Frey returned the club 4, the 10 being taken by the K, and the spade 6 to the Q was taken by the K. Now the spade 9 knocked out the A from dummy.

In the lead at last, Mr. Schenken made a desperate try for game by leading the heart J. The Q went on, the A scored, and now the diamond Q was led, overtaken by the K, Mr. Frey, of course, holding up the A, as South might have had a doubleton. Now the club J was covered by the Q and A, the spade 8 scored and the heart K. The heart 9 was then led in the hope that the holder of the 10 did not have a diamond, but Mr. Frey had the A and set the contract with it. Then he had to return a club to the good 10 and heart 8, so that the set was only one trick. Everybody concerned had done the best possible with his cards, except that a finesse of the heart 9 would have made the contract if it had been tried after East held up the diamond A. But nobody commented on it.

HAVELOCK

Mrs. Scott Tells Of Mission Work In India

HAVELOCK, Sept. 14 (ENS)—As their opening of the fall program the Women's Missionary Society of the United church entertained as their guests the Societies from Knox Presbyterian church and St. John's Anglican church recently, at the home of Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Wilkinson.

Mrs. C. M. Scott, Peterborough, a returned missionary from India, was the guest speaker, gave a talk on the work that she and Dr. Scott accomplished while in Central India. Like all other missionaries, they worked at tasks associated with teaching, preaching and healing.

"India is a large country, equal to the size of Europe, minus Russia. It has a population of 388 million people, 90 per cent of whom live in rural communities, and there are only 36 cities in all of India. They speak 22 different languages and several dialects. About 68 per cent of its people are Hindoo and 22 per cent are Mohammedan. The first task of the missionary going to India is to attend the Language school up in the Himalayas Mountains and write off their examinations, in order to talk, read and write their native language.

Copy Customs

Mrs. Scott told of the many customs of India, and how other nations are copying the painted finger and toe nails and darkening of eye brows. She described, in detail, a day in a missionary hospital, its devotional classes, meals and various treatments of diseases uncommon in Canada. She told about the choosing of mates for marriage and their wedding customs.

The speaker exhibited 5 dolls, all dressed in Indian costumes, and closed her address by reading a poem "Eating our Morsel Alone."

Dedication

The president, Mrs. George Chiles, presided over the devotional, which was a service of Dedication to the Great Commission, using as a theme "Christ for all the World, and for all of Life." The new study book "For all of Life," written by Dr. and Mrs. Wiser is to be purchased also the helps for the presentation of the program.

Mrs. A. S. Thompson, on behalf of Knox Auxiliay and Mrs. D. J. Holdcroft, on behalf of St John's Auxiliary, thanked the guest speaker and the W.M.S. for the entertainment, after which an afternoon tea was served.

French Patriots Stampede Rebels

MADRID, Sept. 14.—(AP).—Reports reaching here yesterday from the French border said many of the Vichy Government's pro-German employe's were quietly vanishing under fear of assassination and that German domination was nearing an end.

Hundreds departed in recent days, the reports said, with none leaving forwarding addresses.

Others who did not leave soon enough after receiving threatening letters were sent to hospitals or cemeteries, the reports said.

French newspapers reaching Spain told of "terrorism" in France.

JAMBOREE AHEAD

On Friday the final meeting of officers was held in St. John's parish hall to discuss the plans for the Jamboree. Owing to the weather there was a very poor attendance. On reviewing the Cub events it was decided that all competition should be run on a 3-2-1 basis and the Bill Coleman Memorial trophy be awarded to the Pack gaining the most points and the same to be presented at the camp fire program.

The following items are to be run off: (1) Knot relay, four Cub knots, A. Ingham in charge. (2) Leap frog and hopping relay, team 8 boys, Jim Baird O.C. (3) Obstacle race, two boys, Miss Grace Marshall O.I.C.; this race subject to change. (4) Potato race ,one boy, R. Collett O.I.C. (5) book balancing relay, 4 boys, no hats to be worn, C. Lambert O.I.C. (6) Jungle dance of Bagheera, whole pack, Mrs. Langhorne O.I.C. (7) Tug of war, team 10 boys, R. Murray O.I.C. (8) Skin the snake, team 8 boys, Miss Peggy Houghton O.I.C.

In the Scout section it was decided that some trophy should be placed for competition and that points be awarded in like manner but at the present time there is no definite cup available for this purpose. The items for competition are: (1) three cornered tug-of-war team 5 boys, H. Nokes O.I.C. (2) Skin the Snake team, 8 boys, Ed Johnson O.I.C. (3) Pillow fight, one boy, F. Ford O.I.C. (4) Message relay, team 6 boys, Mr. Olmstead O.I.C. (5) Obstacle race, two boys, R. Perks O.I.C. (6) Tub tilting, one boy, E. McNabb O.I.C. Should any troops be camping on the grounds over the week-end there will be a tent pitching competition. The camp fire program is under the leadership of Q. McKinney who will request Packs or Troops for items of display. It is expected to start with the grand howl and flag break sharp at 2 p.m. Each pack and troop responsible for its own transportation and supper.

Hut At Grounds

There is still some work to be done on the Scout Hut out at the grounds and we want to do a little preparation to the grounds for the Jamboree. We would ask every Cub and Scout officer to do his or her best to be on the grounds next Saturday afternoon to give a hand in this work.

Annual Registration

The annual registration of Scouts will be on the agenda for October and this year it has been decided by Dominion headquarters that the Cubs should also be registered. It has been usual for every Scout to pay 50 cents per year toward the field work of Scouting, in other words to help finance the promotion of Scouting in other fields. This year the Cubs will be assessed 25 cents per boy. We feel that this is a step forward as it will give the boys a feeling that they are a real part in the Scout life and that as such they can do their little bit in the promotion of Cubbing. Cubbing is essentially the root of good Scouting. So let us all get behind this new move. And register early. It is not necesasry to have the fees at the time of registration so do not hold up the papers if that part is not ready.

St. John's

There were eighteen boys out on Friday showing several absentees from the roll of pre-summer days. We would ask all old members to come along this week and any new boy who wishes to join to attend the meeting next Friday at 7:00 p.m. Several tests were tried out on the jamboree events. The troop held its first fall meeting and drew up plans for future training.

At St. Luke's

A good attendance was recorded for the first of the fall meetings at which George Gough led the grand howl. Many events were practiced for the jamboree including skin the snake, caterpillar race, knot tying, leap frog and hopping. A game of tunnel ball was played. Jack King who recently completely his first star tests received his star. A "cheer up the sick" fund was started, all Cubs being requested to bring along their spare pennies to boost the fund. The money will be used to send gifts of cheer to any member of the Pack who becomes sick. At each meeting the Cubs will take it in turn to lead in the grand howl at opening and closing. Any boy being absent will miss his opportunity until his name rolls round again. We would like to see more boys with uniform for the jamboree which is to be held on September 25. Full details will be given out at the next meeting. All members should note the new change in time of meeting. In future the pack will meet from 7 p.m. instead of 6:30 p.m. We are pleased to welcome one new chum, Joe Burns and also Mr. E. Pearse who has kindly consented to assist our Cub leader in the work of the pack.

At St. George's

The pack started its fall meetings with a corn roast with some 18 boys turning out. We are looking forward to a real pack this fall.

George St. 12th

To start the season off right the pack is holding a hamburg party on Wednesday of this week and will meet at Akela's home, 30 Aberdeen avenue at 4:40 p.m. We would like to see every cub out in full uniform and on time. So come along for a good time. Don't forget the nickel.

Local Association Meeting

This being the third Wednesday of the month it is executive meeting night and we would urge that every member do his best to be on hand as there are one or two items of interest ot discuss.

Fellowship Key To Rotary Work Governor Warns

Stating that fellowship was the fundamental and foundation stone of Rotary and that the strength of the individual units was always the measure of the strength of the club, Harmon E. Rice, District Governor of District 168 of Rotary International, addressed a meeting of Rotarians in the Empress Hotel on Monday.

The sense of responsibility of the individual member, he said, toward the life and needs of his community was the leading element in establishing the importance of a service club. As the guest of numerous Rotary Clubs in the northern parts of Ontario, Mr. Rice spoke of the admirable work being carried out in small towns through the energy and enthusiasm of a handful of enterprising member. In such places they had built city parks, wading pools for children, and laid plans for the construction of hospitals. It was such work as this, the Governor assured his audience, that showed what Rotary could accomplish when initiative and the teamwork of fellowship existed among its group of members.

Origin of Rotary.

Mr. Rice sketched the beginning of Rotary and related to his listeners how it had grown out of the brain of one man who felt a certain something was lacking in his relations with his fellowmen. This man, a lawyer, was convinced that common bonds of interest could be found among leading business and professional men irregardless of the nature of their businesses and that personal fellowship and good to the community would follow naturally as the result.

He set about to prove it, and met with instant success. It was found that fellowship, to be complete, entailed service to the community as well the contacts and interchange of ideas over the weekly lunchon table. The growth of Rotary, Mr. Rice emphasized, was in direct relation to the growth of Rotary's public service work.

Complimenting the local club on its enterprising spirit and the high level of its community achievements, he said that he had drawn much inspiration from his visit here.

Mr. Rice was introduced by M. H. Riddle and Gordon Matthews moved the vote of thanks.

Congress Talks Of World Unity

WASHINGON, Sept. 14 (AP) — The United States Congress returns from a summer recess tomorrow to work for the war and prepare for the peace.

International and domestic problems of historic import confront the refreshed lawmakers as they resume their legislative chores in an atmosphere brightened by the surrender of Italy.

Immediate congressional attention was focused upon the direct problems of war and their impact on the domestic economy—problems of raising revenue, of rationing, of mustering man-power for production and for the military forces.

Ahead are questions of long range legislation—issues and controversies which may shape American Foreign policy in the post-war world and blueprint the pattern for economic life at home for years to come.

Pending before the House of Representatives is a simply-worded resolution, which would put the House and Senate on record in favor of world co-operation to preserve peace. Leaders are reported to have agreed to make it the first order of business.

3-Power Conference Appears Imminent

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(CP).— An indication that preliminary arrangements have been completed for a British-Soviet-American conference appeared to-day as it was reliably understood that Ivan Maisky, Soviet Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, had completed his mission here and would leave shortly for Moscow.

The Soviet Embassy would not confirm a report that Maisky had actually departed. During his stay he conferred repeatedly with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and U.S. Ambassador John G. Winant and there was every sign that an announcement about the conference would be made shortly.

1st Tank Brigade Engages In Bloody Action

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 14 (CP Cable)—The bloodiest seesaw armored action the Mediterranean front has produced since the middle phases of the Tunisian campaign probably has given units of the 1st Canadian Army tank brigade a full-scale baptism within the last few days in the Salerno Gulf region of Italy, near Naples.

This brigade, which fought only scattered actions in support of infantry attacks in Sicily and did not get into action against German tanks there, is believed to be fighting in support of the combined British-American 5th Army which landed at Salerno September 3.

It is probably the only Canadian force engaged in this slow, grimly-contested Allied advance on Naples, against which the enemy has thrown air and armored power in numbers unprecedented in this campaign.

Advance Rapidly.

Elsewhere in Italy the Canadian 1st Division fighting with the 8th Army in Calabria is advancing rapidly to help clear the entire Italian foot and unite all Allied armies in Italy for the vital push northwards.

Announcement of the exact disposition of Canadian units in Italy probably will not come for weeks or months—certainly not while the information could be of any value to the enemy—but the Canadian force fighting as part of the 8th Army is believed to be fundamentally the same as that which fought in the Sicilian campaign.

Canadian units in Sicily as announced near the end of the campaign were the Princess Patricias, the Royal Canadian Regiment, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the West Nova Scotias, the Carleton and Yorks, the Royal 22nd, the 48th Highlanders, the Seaforth Highlanders and the Loyal Edmontons, with a reconnaissance unit from the Princess Louise Dragoons, in the many forward actions, and units from the Saskatchewan Light Infantry in close support.

Units Break Up.

The 1st Tank Brigade in Sicily was made up of the Three Rivers, Ontario and Calgary Tank Regiment. Because the terrain was not suitable, it did not get into action as a brigade, but the Three Rivers and Ontario Regiments saw fighting while the Calgary Regiment was in reserve.

The only other major Canadian unit known to have been in Sicily—besides the tank brigade—is the No. 5 General Hospital from Winnipeg. It was naturally kept well in the rear during the Sicilian fighting but may have moved up to the Catania or Messina areas during the lull which preceded the attack on the Italian mainland.

Military commentators here stress that even the comparatively light Canadian losses in the Sicilian campaign probably changed the personnel of fighting units considerably and that as fighting progresses they will become less and less regional because reinforcements may come from all parts of Canada.

Numbers included a solo by Miss Ferne Gainer, a reading by Miss Mary Larmer, and a quartet by Miss Allie Berry, Mrs. O. B. Johnson, Messrs. George Berry and Jacob Isbister, also Reeve W. W. Flaming Ribbon Of Gasoline On Highway Overtakes And Demolishes Army Truck

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—(CP) — A flaming ribbon of gasoline, left by a punctured tank, overtook a busload of soldiers from Camp Borden, near Barrie, Ont., early Sunday, and destroyed the vehicle just after the last occupant escaped, it was learned here Monday.

"It was almost unbelievable," said Pte. Roy Bartleman of Toronto. "We were on our way to Barrie.... when something hit the gasoline tank and opened a leak. Even while we looked back the gasoline ignited at the end of the ribbon and flames raced towards us.

"The driver stopped to find out what was happening .... We piled out and the last soldier had just thrown himself into the ditch beside me when the flames caught up with the bus. In less than a second, the whole vehicle was a churning mass of flames."

Bishop Refuses To Name Priests

TORONTO, Sept. 14 (CP) —Rt. Rev. Arthur Sovereign, Anglican Bishop of Athabasca, said in a sermon in Toronto yesterday that "I am on strike," and that he refused to appoint any priest to charges in the Far North "until our church can pay a living wage and fix up the miserable rectories."

Bishop Sovereign, a native of Woodstock, Ont., who is attending meetings of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, said that in the Far North of His Diocese there are seven strategic points and the church is represented in only three.

"Fort Smith, Fort Simpson, Fort Hay and Port Norman are vacant because there is no money and I have refused to appoint any more men unless we can pay them at last $1,500 a year, for expenses are high," he said. "Eggs are $1.10 a dozen, oranges $1.50 to $2, parcel post costs $1.20 a pound."

Bishop Sovereigns Athabasca diocese covers an area one-sixth that of Canada and five times that of the British Isles.

The Deal Was Off

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 13—(AP). — C. B. McKeever rented a safe deposit box to a new customer — who promptly picked up the box and started away. McKeever hastened to explain the box had to stay in the bank vault, to be safe. If he couldn't take the box home, the deal was off, the man declared. "The bank is crazy if it thinks I'm going .to come down here every time I want to put something in that box."

Session Reports Religion Only Peace Salvation

By H. H. GORDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(CP) — tian education was referred to as one of the finest "war measures" possible, in the report of the gene[illegible] board of religious education presen[illegible]ed today to the general synod of the Church of England in Canada in point session at Trinity College.

The report was presented by Rev. Canon R. A. Hiltz, general secretary of the board.

"Is there anything short of the passion and motive of religion that will help to pay the full price necessary for victory," the report asked.

"The war cannot be really won until we have found a way out of selfishness and strife, and there is nothing that can save us from these except religion, the specific training of the young in religious living," the report added.

Must Be Christian

In regard to the post-war situation the report said that the term "new social order" means many things. In the minds of some it meant the coming of a new age—a sort of millenium.

In recommending that the church keep its thinking straight the report said the "new social order" in order to be truly effective must be "a Christian social order."

The report urged greater efforts to make the general educational system more religious; more practical training for the educational heads of parishes; better training for Sunday school workers and wiser and more effective use of broadcasting.

8,000 Planes Produced By Canucks

CANADA produced its first Lancaster bomber on August 6th and christened it the "Ruhr Express." The plane is now in operation with the R.C.A.F.

By manufacturing this giant 4-engined bomber, one of the foremost in the world, Canada adds to her growing reputation as a maker of aircraft.

During the last war, Canada produced fewer than 3,000 of what would now be called "stick and string" flying machines. In the period between the wars, the few planes made in the Dominion were strictly peacetime types. Any new contributions made by the Dominion were by way of adaptation and development of transport planes used for mining exploration and bush flying.

Eight aircraft companies were operating at the outbreak of war, and their total combined production, for the four years immediately preceding the outbreak of war, averaged less than 40 planes a year. They employed, on the average, fewer than 1,000 workers. Their plants, including overall facilities, occupied about 500,000 square feet of floor space.

The rapid expansion and the complete conversion of this modest industry to wartime production was based initially on the requirements of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Canada had assumed the vital responsibility of training thousands of airmen from all parts of the Commonwealth. Large numbers of elementary and advanced trainers were needed. In the early stages of the war many of these trainers came from Great Britain and the United States, but after Dunkirk, when Great Britain was forced to concentrate on combat aircraft for her own protection, Canadian production facilities were expanded swiftly. Until the crisis in the demand for trainer aircraft was overcome this output accounted for a large percentage of Canadian production.

Nine Types of Aircraft.

To-day, with more than 10,000 trainers in Canadian service, the aircraft program has become more selective. Although 28 types of aircraft have been made in Canada at various times since the outbreak of the war the list has now been reduced to nine. These include one transport, an all-Canadian development regarded as one of the best transport aircraft in the world, four trainers, and four service aircraft. Each type has been selected as the best of its kind. Just as the Lancaster is regarded as the most formidable long-range bomber and the Mosquito the swiftest and deadliest medium bomber, the Catalina flying-boat is the most useful of all patrol craft, and the Curtiss Hell-Diver, soon coming into Canadian production, is considered the best of all dive bombers. Similarly, on the retainer list, the Fairchild Cornell, the North American Harvard, the Canadian Anson and the Bristol Bolingbroke are "tops" among elementary and advanced trainers in their specific fields.

With more emphasis upon the production of service aircraft, the Canadian program is now evenly divided between trainer and combat craft since future schedules call for 50 per cent. of Canadian aircraft production to be devoted to combat planes.

Canada's aircraft industry, which employs more than 100,000 men and women in major plants and hundreds of sub-contracting firms from coast to coast, has thus kept pace with the tremendous developments of modern aviation under war pressure. Its contribution in trainer planes is now and has been of vital importance to the Air Training Plan which has been such a brilliant feature of the Dominion's contribution to the United Nations' cause. It is now concentrating more and more of its facilities upon more difficult problems in the field of combat aircraft. It will now be possible for a Canadian youth to train at Canadian schools, fly to Great Britain and engage in air combat using Canadian-made planes from his solo flight to his first raid over Axis territory.

From the outbreak of war to the end of May, 1943, service production ran to about 25% of the total. In that period Canada produced 2,360 elementary trainers, 3,578 advanced trainers, and 2,076 service planes.

By types production was as follows:

Advanced Trainers
Harvard	1,059
Norseman	51
Fleet 60	101
Bolingbroke	367
Anson	1,850
Lysander	150
	3,578
Elementary Trainers
Tiger Moth	1,384
Menasco Moth	10
Wireless Moth	126
Cornell Trainer	409
Fleet 16 Trainer	431
	2,360
Service Aircraft
Shark	15
Grummond	15
Stranraer	32
Delta	8
Lysander	75
Norseman	69
Bolingbroke	169
Catalina	63
Hurricane	1,451
Hampden	160
Mosquito	19
	2,076

Of the trainer types on the foregoing list only the Cornell, Harvard, Anson, and Bolingbroke remain. Of the service types, the Norseman, Catalina, Mosquito, and Lancaster are now in production, and completion of the first Curtiss navy dive bomber, expected later this year, will round out the current list of nine aircraft types.

Of the four combat types now in Canadian production, each is distinctive in its own field.

The Lancaster is an armed and armoured "battleship of the air". It is a four-engined, midwing

Canada Must Keep Pace With World in Aviation Two Essentials Outlined

By RALPH P. BELL
Director-General, Aircraft Production.

THE manufacture of aircraft has become one of the greatest industries in Canada in terms of personnel employed—now over 100,000; dollar value of output; and extent, character, and geographic distribution of the capital facilities involved.

To ensure a permanent future for Canada's aircraft industry two things are necessary:

(1) Design staffs capable of competing with any in the world;

(2) Manufacturing costs competitive with those of England or the United States.

It is highly doubtful if there is any company in the Canadian aircraft industry with sufficient financial strength to carry through a program of experimental design, prototype construction, and sales development to a point where production returns would carry the load.

The development of the aircraft industry in both England and the United States has been made possible largely through contracts from the Government that absorb these development costs, plus the fact that in each case the immediately available markets are much larger than the Canadian market. Even today the demands of the R.C.A.F. account for only 46 per cent of the business being handled by the Canadian aircraft industry.

A Baby Industry.

Add to this the fact that the aircraft industry in Canada at the oubreak of war was in he most literal sense of the word an infant industry with exceedingly meagre financial resources; that it has not, and is not, being permitted to earn and retain profits that will enable it to build a substantial capital structure; and it is obvious that it requires assistance in more than one direction if it is to be successfully guided through the immediate post-war period.

Geographically, Canada is the keystone of the arch of aerial transportation between the most important centres of the world.

For our population we probably have the greatest background of knowledge and experience in "northern" flying of any country on the globe with the possible exception of Russia.

Relative to our population we probably will come out of this war with the largest proportion of trained airmen of any of the Allied nations.

With First Four

We have long since established ourselves as one of the four first trading nations in the world.

It would seem obvious and reasonable that under the spirit and broad general terms of the Atlantic Charter, and subject only to adequate "policing" and control by the Allied Nations, postwar, the air oceans of the world, and the great airports of the world, must be free to aerial traffic as the high seas and the world seaports have and must always be.

The part that Canada will play in the field of aerial world transportation and the position our Aircraft Industry maintains in the postwar economy will in a large measure determine the relative position we continue to maintain in world trade.

That these are closely associated subjects demanding specialized and concentrated study by properly constituted groups of individuals particularly qualified to assess the various complicated factors involved, is a proposition that should enlist unanimous support from every informed source.

Salient Points

The interests most vitally concerned are:

(a) Those charged with the Defence of Canada in the air—the Department of National Defence, Air Service, (the R.C.A.F.)

(b) Those hundred thousand and more young men and women who have been trained for air service who have gladly and voluntarily offered their lives for the defence of Canada, and for whom suitable occupation must be found when the war is over;

(c) The Industry itself with a hundred thousand or more employees;

(d) Those basic Canadian industries; such as aluminum, magnesium, lumber, etc. on which the Aircraft Industry is based.

Other interests involved include all those agencies, both government and private, connected or in any way associated with transportation, communication, and trade and commerce.

It is a problem requiring the broadest kind of imaginative thinking and planning, coupled with capable executive direction.

What a challenge to the ingenuity and capacity of those who direct this giant infant industry!

May Produce Gliders Here

STILL in the experimental stage of production and actual appliance, gliders to bring air-borne fighting troops of infantry to and behind the scene of battle, are now receiving deep consideration from military experts and leaders. Their production in Canada, as yet unsettled, may start soon. They are made of plastic bonded plywood, and Canadian workmen's experience in this field will open a new wing in the aircraft industry—the construction of motorless aircraft. The aerial hitchhikers, generally towed in threes by multi-engined bombers, enables the load of each powered plane to be increased tremendously with the resulting loss in drag still remaining slight in comparison.

AIRCRAFT FACTORIES across Canada have grown by leaps and bounds to meet the needs of this global war, and the rapidly developing Canadian Air Force. In (1) a large section of the Bolingbroke bomber plant is shown where these twin-engined medium bombers are mass-produced. In (2) is an interior view of a mighty Lancaster bomber, now being turned out in Canada. The workman is busy boring holes inside the fuselage. (4) Installing the equipment in the fuselage of Mosquito bombers is no small task, and on this operation, the two sides of the fuselage are not joined until all interior work is complete.

Canada's Aviation Industry To Date Has Shown Phenomenal Growth

ON October 1, 1907, at Baddeck, Nova Scotia, Doctor Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, in association with J. A. D. McCurdy, F. W. ("Casey") Baldwin, Thomas Selfridge and Glen H. Curtiss, formed what was known as the Aerial Experiment Association.

The idea upon which this organization was based originated with Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell, who provided the money with which to finance it.

Seventeen months after the formation of the Association, the first heavier-than-air machine to fly in the British Empire, the "Silver Dart," made its initial flight with McCurdy at the controls. It took off at Baddeck on the twenty-third of February, 1909.

The birth of Canada's Aircraft industry was, therefore, one of international import and significance.

Some years later, in 1916, McCurdy scored another "first" with the establishment at Toronto, Ontario, of Curtiss Airplane and Motors, Limited, the first organization in Canada to build aircraft on a commercial scale.

Alive Today

The youth of the industry is emphasized by the fact that Mr. McCurdy is still in the forefront, occupying as he does the position of supervisor, purchasing division, Aircraft Production Branch, Department of Munitions and Supply, Ottawa.

Because of their Aerial Experiment Association which produced the first heavier-than-air machine to fly in the British Empire, and the fact that one of its members actually piloted it on that epic trip, it is not unnatural that Dr. and Mrs. Bell, and their associates are usually referred to as the pioneers in this field, so far as Canada and the Empire are concerned.

Actually, however, a tremendous amount of the basic research work, the science of aerodynamics, which is the foundation on which the whole structure rests, was done prior to 1907 by Wallace Rupert Turnbull. It is an interesting coincidence that Turnbull is also a Canadian, a native of the Maritime Provinces, and that his research and experimental work in this field, each of which has made such an important contribution to the subsequent developments in the aircraft industry, should also have taken place in a small rural community, namely the Village of Rothesay, N.B.

Mr. Turnbull's activities date from 1902, and include such aircraft work as the first wind tunnel in Canada, and the invention of an electrically controlled variable pitch constant speed propeller.

Writing at the time of these early experiments, Turnbull said: "Just as soon as the mechanical engineer can command at his designing table full data concerning the lift, drag, and centre of pressure of aeroplanes, the thrust and efficiency of different forms of aeroplane propellers, the strength and suitability of materials, and the complete elements entering into the stability of the aeroplane, just so soon, and not before, can we reasonably expect the problem of aero navigation to be really solved."

Called His Shots

As someone subsequently said, "That was certainly calling his shots for the next twenty-five years."

The aircraft built in Canada in the last war were the product of Curtiss Airplane and Motors, Limited, and the succeeding company, Canadian Aeroplanes, Limited, formed by the Imperial Munitions Board. Between the two they turned in a truly remarkable performance for those days by building just short of 3,000 of what, today, would be called "stick and string" machines. These planes played their part in the conflict of that era and produced for the Empire such brilliant heroes as Bishop, Barker, Collishaw, and Maclaren.

The description 'stick and string' is not used with the idea of disparaging the aircraft these companies produced, but in the jargon of the industry denotes machines constructed chiefly of wood and fabric—many of this basic type of construction are still being built and used today.

Following the close of the war the manufacture of aircraft in Canada ceased completely.

In 1923, as a result of a requisition of the Canadian Air Board (to which was attached the condition that the planes be built in Canada) Canadian Vickers, Limited, the successful tenderers, commenced the production of eight single-engined amphibians.

Started to Grow

The revival of Canada's Aircraft Industry dates from that contract.

It is an interesting coincidence that it is this same Company that has produced the Stranraer Flying Boat for patrol work off our coasts in this War and that it is today engaged in the construction of one of the great flying ships of all time, the famous PBY Amphibian.

The PBY has the record of the greatest range of any service flying boat in the world to-day, being able to stay aloft over 33 hours. It was one of these sturdy craft that apprehended the "Bismarck" in the final stages of that spectacular game of hide and seek in the early period of

TRANS-CANADA'S Wings are Spreading

MUCH has been written about the kind of world we will be living in after this war, but one fact stands out—no one country on this globe will be more than a few hours distant from any other.

With this peacetime Air expansion, the operations of T.C.A. will be closely allied—speeding the commerce of this Nation across the oceans and hemispheres. To this end, and based on the valuable experience being acquired by its personnel in day to day trans-Atlantic flying, T.C.A. is now preparing carefully studied plans.

In just five years T.C.A. has proven a necessary arm of Canada's transport, flying coast to coast twice daily—north to Edmonton—south to Windsor and New York—22,670 miles a day—carrying the men, mails and materials essential to the war effort. This is but a prelude of things to come.

Today the operations of T.C.A. are largely devoted to the prosecution of war, but in the peace to come the knowledge and experience of Canada's National Air Service, as accumulating now, will be available to Canadian commerce, travel, comfort and convenience, over national and international routes.

Thus will Canada take her place in the forefront of the Air Age to come.

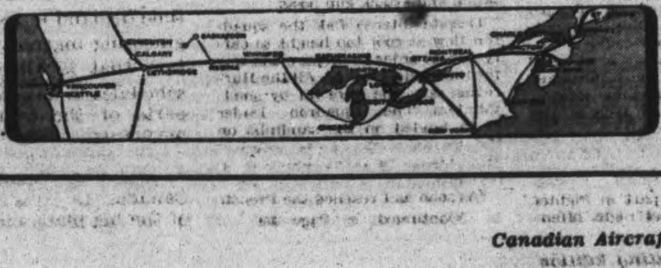
CANADA'S NATIONAL AIR SERVICE



Trans-Canada Air Lines Showing Rapid Growth

PROGRESS has been continuous in the story of Trans-Canada Air Lines, each succeeding year providing a volume of traffic greater than that of the preceeding twelve-month period. A similar experience is being recorded in 1943 carryings of passengers, mail and express for the first six months of the year being heavier in comparison with those of the first half-year of 1942.

In April, 1937, when Parliament provided for the establishment of Trans-Canada Air Lines, even some of the optimists regarded the project as exceedingly ambitious for the Dominion, despite the country's record of getting along in other fields of transportation. Two years were occupied in organization, the training of personnel and the establishment of ground facilities, during which there was placed in operation a limited air service between Vancouver and Seattle. This service was afterwards discontinued by agreement with United States air authorities when in 1941 T.C.A. began flying from Toronto to New York. In the spring of 1939 regular schedules were commenced, and in the period of just over four years which has since elapsed the company has become truly Canada's national air service.

The organization was firmly established when war came in the autumn of 1939 and well prepared to aid in the national effort. It has done so by expanding its services on each succesive demand and successfully answering every call so that today its flights are not only national and international, but also trans-Atlantic.

Top Rate Personnel

It is probable that even Canadians themselves do not always recognize the magnitude of the services carried out daily by Trans-Canada Air Lines in the air and on the ground through the agency of its excellent equipment, thoroughly organized establishments, and admirable flight and maintenance personnel.

The daily flights of T.C.A. planes extend across Canada from Halifax to Vancouver, with additional hop to Victoria, while in the East there is a service from Moncton to St. John's Newfoundland. To these continental flights are to be added the daily services from Toronto to Windsor, Toronto to New York, and Lethbridge to Edmonton, making the daily route 4,857 miles. With multiple schedules over these routes miles flown by T.C.A. aircraft during 1942 aggregated 22,670 daily and this has been increased during the present year by the extension of the western trans-continental route to Victoria. Last year miles flown by Trans-Canada aircraft amounted to 7,688,902.

Trans-Atlanic service is now in operation by T.C.A., the organization having accepted the responsibility for the Canadian Government flights to and from Canada and Great Britain. The first flight of an aircraft operated by a TCA crew in this service established a new record for a land to land trip, the crossing from Montreal Airport to the British destination being made in 12 hours, 25 minutes, which was 25 minutes better than the previous fastest flight. On these Trans-Atlantic flights the planes carry official passengers who are concerned with the war efforts, mail to and from the Canadian military forces overseas, and freight of special character needed for war work.

Carries More Mail

The growth of Trans-Canada Air Lines is shown in a graphic manner by the increasing volume of mail carried on the planes. During the organization preiod in 1938 mail was caried on flights to a total of 367,734 pounds. With the establishment of the service on a permament basis in 1939 the weight of mail carried increased to 539,906 pounds and substantial increases were recorded each succeeding year, mail carried in 1942 being at 2,306,812 pounds. The ratio of increase has been more than maintained during 1943, the total for the first six months being 1,732,227 pounds, which compares with 854,095 pounds carried in the similar period of 1942, and suggests that the mail carryings for the complete year will be well over 3,000,000 pounds.

The number of passengers carried has increased in like manner, rising from a modest 2,086 in 1938 to the substantial total in 1942 of 104,446, many of whom were military men or civilian passengers engaged in Canada's war effort and receiving priority.

Fighting War, Too.

The record of express carried by T.C.A. planes corresponds to that of mail and passengers, being one of yearly increases, the air express being important in swiftly moving parts and finished products required by war industries.

In addition to those services which are of strategic importance to Canada, T.C.A. is fighting on the home front in other ways. Ground crews overhaul and maintain the trans-oceanic transports operating between Canada and Great Britain. Thousands of instruments and accessories are overhauled by T.C.A. for the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Air Force, the British Overseas Airways Corporation, and the Commonwealth Air Training Plan; engines are overhauled and propellers reconditioned; tools are manufactured; annealing and other work is done for aircraft manufacturers in war industry; and T.C.A. has assisted in important experiments for the National Research Council. Truly, the T.C.A. is Canada's National Air Service.

Hurricanes From Canada Built for Tough Jobs

TOUGH-RIBBED stout-engined Canadian-built Hurricanes are now being catapulted from merchant ships into the sky in Battle of the Atlantic, it was announced today by the Munitions and Supply Department. Canada recently completed her contracts for this type of plane.

Planes with a single mission, to protect the merchant ship, these catapulted Hurricanes fight off enemy dive bombeers and blast submarines off the skim of the sea. For those few moments of heroic flight, the Hurricane must prove its strength. Only an iron-strong plane could withstand the slight-hot wrench from the deck of a ship to hundreds of miles per hour into the air. Only a heavily armed fighter plane could be entrusted with the task of meeting all enemy comers. The Hurricane mounts either 12 machine guns or four 20 mm. cannon and is also used as a light bomber.

Hurricanes made in Canada and flown by Canadian, English, Australian and New Zealand pilots have played a big part in Fighter Command's day and night offensive against the enemy in Occupied Europe. They are the favourite planes of the Northern Rhodesian Squadron which was in the vanguard of the air attack during the Dieppe raid.

Used At Dieppe

Led by a British squadron leader from Walsall, Staffs, the Hurricanes took off from an aerodrome on the South coast just before dawn last August. Navigation lighters were kept on until the wing was in formation and the course set for Dieppe. By the time they reached their objective, dawn was breaking and there was enough light for them to fly along the beach and attack gun posts.

Despite intense flak the squadron flew at roof-top height to carry out its order to prepare the way for the landing troops. All the Hurricans save one were hit by shell-splinters. The squadron leader crash landed on the sandhills on the English side of the channel after flying 70 miles with no oil pressure.

FLOCKS OF PLANES to carry the war to the Axis doorsteps are rolling off the production lines in Canadian factories at record levels. Canadian plants geared to wartime demand in record time, producing engineering ingenuity, and worker co-operation that is phenomenal, and production schedules to date have been exceeded in all parts of the Dominion. In (1) skilled mechanics are shown giving the final check-over to an Avro-Anson trainer plane at one of the many up-to-date plants in Canada. In (2) is shown the interior of one of the big plane factories operated by Norduyn, and the big Norseman planes shown in the shop are favorites with fliers during peace and war. Modern plant conditions are apparent in all pictures as the manufacturers throughout Canada in the aircraft industry have set and maintained a high level of efficiency, convenience and comfort for their staffs. Lighting and ventilation have been given considerable thought.

Produced in the Largest Aircraft Wood-Working Factory in the World

Specializing in the making of wood wings, Massey-Harris Aircraft Division has developed and expanded with Canada's aircraft industry until today the Company's Aircraft factory for producing such wings is the largest of its kind in the world.

When there was a desperate need of aircraft for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Massey-Harris quickly brought into production a plant to make wings for the Avro-Anson Bomber.

And when the "Mosquito" that deadly, speedy terror of the skies was scheduled for production in Canada, Massey-Harris was able to undertake the making of wings for this outstanding British plane. Surely and steadily the tempo has been increased, so that now wings for the "Mosquito" are coming off the Massey-Harris production lines in ever-increasing numbers.

Canada's Aviation Industry To Date

this present war. Had it not been for this ability to stay aloft for such long periods the quarry might easily have escaped.

In November, 1934, Noorduyn commenced the design of the Norseman at Montreal. Manufacture was started in May, 1935 and the first Norseman flew on November 7 of that same year. That this machine should still be in active demand, and that only recently the United States, with all its aircraft manufacturing facilties, should have come to Canada and ordered hundreds of these machines for special work speaks in glowing terms of the quality and the inherently-sound design characteristics of this now famous Canadian ship.

Six Companies

At the outbreak of the present war, the roster of Canadian air craft companies was:—

Montreal area: Fairchild Aircraft, Ltd.; Noorduyn Aviation, Ltd.

Toronto: — The DeHavilland Aircraft of Canada, Ltd..

Hamilton: Cub Aircraft Corporation, Ltd.

Fort Erie: Fleet Aircraft, Ltd.

Vancouver: Boeing Aircraft of Canada, Ltd.

The six foregoing were engaged exclusively in the manufacture and/or assembly and repair of aircraft.

In addition to these there were also:

Montreal — Canadian Vickers, Limited, Aircraft Division, which in 1923 undertook a contract for flying boats for the R.C.A.F., thus leading the revival of the industry in Canada.

Montreal — Canada Car and Foundry Company, Limited, Aircraft Division, which had designed and built a small radial engine of less than 200 h.p.

Ottawa—Ottawa Car and Aircraft, Limited, which Company was still concerned chiefly with aircraft engines and the overhaul and repair of planes.

Fort William—Canadian Car and Foundry Company, Limited, which had designed and built both trainers and fighting machines chiefly for export.

One courageous, far-sighted Canadian industrialist, Robert J. Magor, president of National Steel Car Corporation, Limited, envisioning the impending conflict and the need for modern facilities, for the construction of aircraft in Canada on a large scale, had already laid down plans for the largest aircraft plant in Canada. To-day, there is at the Malton Airport on the outskirts of Toronto one of the most modern aircraft plants in the world, with a total area of some 1,050,000 square feet of floor space. The plant now is operated as a Government project under the name of Victory Aircraft Limited.

Pre-War Picture.

The total floor space occupied by the Canadian Aircraft Industry prior to the war was something in the order of 500,000 square feet, the total personnel engaged (average for four years preceding the war) was less than 1,000 and the number of aircraft produced in a year averaged less than 40.

This was the pre-war Canadian picture. So much for the past.

Today, Canada's Aircraft industry occupies more than 7,000,000 square ft. of floor space, employs 100,000 men and women, and produces twice as many planes in one week as were produced in the average of the four years preceding the war.

These things do not just happen. The vision and driving force responsible for this achievement sprang largely from the Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply in the Canadian Cabinet. In June, 1940, when Britain's allies were toppling like the proverbial pack of cards, and so many people had seemingly given up all hope, his indomitable courage and determination inspired those around him and stood out like a beaconlight on the Canadian horizon.

Made Rapid Strides

That was three years ago. Then, the Canadian Industry comprised nine small inadequately equipped main plants, most of which were located alongside rough fields; these in turn supported by a couple of small engine and service and repair plants in Montreal, and two or three small overhaul plants in the West. To-day, six of these are thoroughly modern plants completely tooled and equipped, with hard-surfaced runways at their very doors. A seventh has been totally rehabilitated. The two others have been substantially expanded and equipped proportionately. These are the dramatic figures! Increase in plant area 14 times, increase in personnel 100 times, increase in output 90 times.

Canada's aircraft engines have all come from England or the United States, our requirements in this field having been scheduled by the respective governments to provide for our projected airframe production.

So far as Canada and the United States are concerned, this had been in keeping with the policy of co-ordinating the manufacturing facilities of the two countries for the most efficient use of our respective productive facilities.

At Kingston, Ont., an aluminum forging plant capable of forging the largest propeller blades in the world was brought into operation in 1941, and today thousands upon thousands of these important units flow from this great industrial operation.

At Montreal, St. Johns (Quebec), and Winnipeg, there are completely up-to-date propeller-manufacturing plants where blades of every type are fashioned and finished—the solid wooden blade, the complicated laminated or compressed wood blade manufactured under a secret formula and operating in a metal hub and, finally, the metal blade itself assembled with its hub and completely ready for operation.

Many Do Smaller Jobs

At Toronto and Montreal, Ottawa, and other cities, several large concerns are exclusively devoted to the manufacture of aircraft instruments, and today Canada's aircraft industry is virtually self-contained and independent so far as power plant instruments and the regular line of standard flight instruments are concerned.

Hundreds of manufacturers throughout the Dominion have undertaken the production of parts and equipment of one kind or another, whilst from coast to coast there stretches a chain of 30 modern overhaul and repair plants manned by a huge personnel of expert workers and occupying a total floor space of more than 1,000,000 square feet. Such are the facilities necessary to service and keep in the air the thousands of craft required in the gigantic training plan, in the conduct of which maintenance, overhaul and repair occupy a position almost as important as that of primary production.

Since these astounding developments had their genesis in the mind of a sturdy little woman in the Cape Breton hills, some third of a century ago, no article on aircraft production in Canada would be complete without reference and tribute to the part that women play in this vital industry.

Fliers On Coastal Patrol Unsung Heroes Of This War

By Flying Officer J. H. Mosher
R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer

THE aviation spotlight nowadays, naturally enough, focusses upon the daring exploits of Bomber Command and Fighter Command over Europe and the Mediterranean, so that few realize the importance of the work being done by the less spectacular Royal Canadian Air Force "Home War Establishment."

While their Canadian brothers in the R.A.F and R.C.A.F overseas were winning mention in despatches and decorations for raids on Hamburg, Berlin, Essen, Dusseldorf, Milan and Rome, and for knocking Nazi bombers out of the skies over Britain, the aircrews of the Home War Establishment, trained in the same air schools, bred from the same stock, capable of the same deeds of daring, flew endless hours over the Western Atlantic and the Eastern Pacific, straining their eyes for sight of a periscope, an enemy surface raider, or perchance the first glimpse of a Japanese invasion fleet.

Lifetime Thrill

In May, this year, Squadron Leader B. H. Moffitt, D.F.C., pilot and captain of a Canso flying boat on anti-submarine patrol in the Atlantic, attacked his first U-boat, probably destroying it, for his depth charges exploded close to the conning tower and debris and a heavy oil slick resulted.

Said Squadron Leader Moffitt: "After two and a half years of peering for subs it really makes the pulse quicken when you finally click."

Many another airman of the Home War Establishment has the same story to tell. Theirs is one of the most difficult and thankless jobs of the war—long patrols, in the air 10, 20 to 25 hours and more at a time, in cold, stormy weather, in cramped uncomfortable quarters, bumped about unsparingly by wind and weather, constantly on the alert, nerves wracked, and eyes strained.

The first enemy U-boat appeared in Canadian waters in October, 1941, and during that month an R.C.A.F patrol bomber attacked one near the straits of Belle Isle. By January, 1942, the westward movement of the U-boat packs had extended to the eastern seaboard of North America, and in May last year they were in the St. Lawrence River

The problem facing the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Canadian Navy was defensive rather than offensive Just as there were not enough corvettes and destroyers to make a detached search of every square mile of Western Atlantic waters for lurking U-boats, so there were not enough aircraft available for this "needle in the haystack" Therefore, until recently, this air-sea team of shepherds has concentrated on the primary job of convoy protection, with increasingly good results.

Figures show the growth of the R.C.A.F.'s force of ocean watchdogs. During 1939 and 1940 it flew some 14,300 hours. In 1941 this was increased to 25,980 hours, and during 1942 more than 7,530 separate patrols totalled 94,450 flying hours. During the year 1943 the objective is almost complete protection of convoys plus purely offensive patrols as well, involving an increase of nearly 100 per cent in aircraft, aircrew and hours flown

Canadian-Made.

In the early years of the war the majority of the aircraft used for coastal patrol work were either British or American. Now it can be said, for the first time, that most of our aerial sub-hunters and convoy sheepdogs are of Canadian manufacture. Early in the war the greatest need for aircraft was overseas, so that only comparatively obsolescent machines could be spared for convoy work, but now that the vital need for protecting our supply line to

Rayon's Wartime Job

RAYON has a vital job today, on the battlefront and on the home front Canopy fabrics and shroud cords for flare parachutes, as well as towed targets, are now being made from Viscose rayon yarn. A large quantity of spun rayon fabrics is also needed for munitions purposes such as powder bags.

Viscose rayon linings are being used for uniforms; and blends of spun rayon fabrics form smart summer uniforms for some of the women's army corps.

In addition to all this, research work is being done on rayon yarns for many other types of equipment.

In the meantime, on the home front, rayon is being used more than ever before, for men's wear, women's wear, and piece goods. For rayon yarn is adaptable to a wide variety of weaves and fabric styles.

This means that even with standardization and limitations of types of fabric, there still remains a broad choice for the consumer on the home front.

So, while rayon's wartime job is on two fronts, and on each it is proving its adaptability and dependability, it must stand ready to divert, if necessary, a still greater percentage of its production to the needs of our fighting forces.

Canadian Pacific Planes Serve Canadian Frontier

IN the early days of Canada the Canadian Pacific Railway opened the vast western regions and united the Dominion with its first transcontinental railway.

Today the airplane is the pioneer and Canadian Pacific is playing a similar role in linking the rich and relatively undeveloped northland with the outside world through the operation of a vast air network stretching throughout Canada from the St. Lawrence to the Pacific and northward to the Arctic.

This new name in the aviation world—Canadian Pacific Air Lines—came into existence early in 1942 when a company was formed to integrate the ten constituent lines which the Canadian Pacific had purchased in Northern Canada over the past few years. Some idea of the area to be covered and scope of operations can be gained by a review of the following companies, and their head office locations, now under Canadian Pacific control: Canadian Airways, Ltd., Winnipeg, Manitoba; Quebec Airways, Ltd., Montreal, Quebec; Dominion Skyways, Ltd., Montreal, Quebec; Arrow Airways, Ltd., Le Pas, Manitoba; Wings, Ltd., Winnipeg, Manitoba; Prairie Airways, Ltd., Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan; Yukon Southern Air Transport, Ltd., Vancouver, B.C.; Ginger Coote Airways, Ltd., Vancouver, B.C.; Starratt Airways and Transportation, Ltd., Hudson, Ont.; and Mackenzie Air Service, Ltd., Edmonton, Alberta.

As a result of these airline purchases in Western and Northern Canada the Canadian Pacific has now every right to consider itself as a major commercial air operator. The ten constituent companies now in process of being organized into Canadian Pacific Air Lines, Ltd., own and operate approximately 100 aircraft and fly about 5,500,000 aeroplane-miles annually. In normal years the value of air traffic in Northern Canada amounts to about $3.5 million. It is generally estimated that about 60 per cent of the total revenue is derived from passengers, 33 per cent from freight, and 7 per cent from mail. At the moment the company is handling a record volume of war freight, particularly in the British Columbia-Yukon area, as well as performing special ferry duties to outlying defence posts for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

These North - South privately-operated freight and passenger air services are in no way competitive with the East-West main line passenger route of the publicly-owned Trans-Canada Air Lines.

Northern air business is now a real industry standing on its own feet, much of Canada's huge mineral development owing its very existence to the air service operating through northern areas. The amount of air freight has grown rapidly, soaring from 2.3 million pounds in 1931 to a record figure of 26.2 million pounds in 1939. Aircraft have flown in complete mining equipment, parts of power-dam structures, dismantled tractors and trucks, whole dog teams, and even horses and cows—an odd assortment to say the least, but all vital to life in the north.

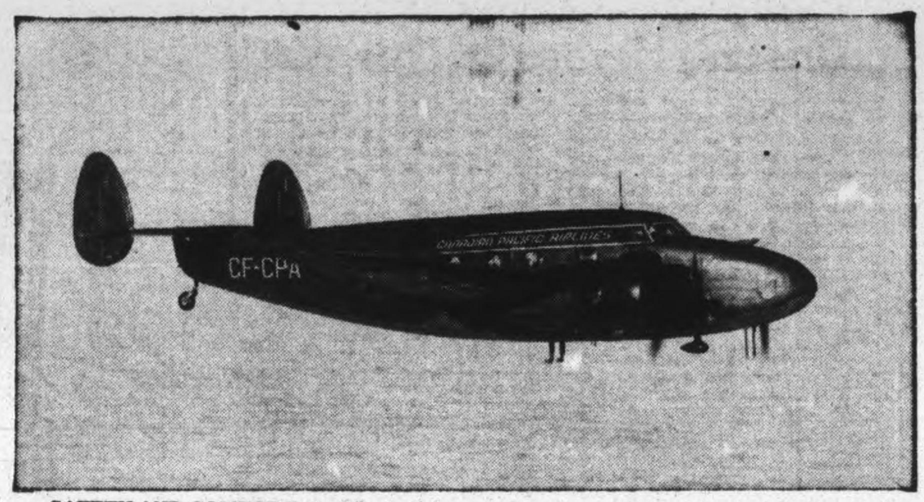
These aerial supply lines to the North Country are steadily rolling back the map of Canada. For instance, from Vancouver to Whitehorse, via Fort St. John, a heavy traffic leg now that defence supplies and military personnel are being rushed north to defend Alaska, is about 1,400 miles. Likewise it is roughly 1,500 miles as the aeroplane flies from Edmonton to the air terminus on the rim of the Arctic Circle at Aklavik. Perhaps nowhere else in Canada has the aeroplane such an advantage over other means of transport in terms of time. From Vancouver to Whitehorse in the Yukon takes only 9 hours by air, while the best ground transportation involves 96 hours. In like manner Vancouver to the Peace River block by air takes 4 hours, while the same journey by ground transportation is a matter of 45 hours.

On the main routes twin-engined aircraft are the rule although single-engined types are still largely used for certain types of flights, especially charter services to outlying points.

Behind the present sensational air expansion in Canada's northland lies fifteen years of development. It is now generally admitted that without the groundwork laid by "bush" flyers and small commercial operators, many of the present northern air cargo routes and the valuable background of operating and weather data would not exist. In other words, Canada is receiving large dividends from the relatively small outlay of public funds in past years in the form of mail contracts granted to encourage development of these air routes.

At a time when discussion on air cargo developments is now world-wide, it is well to remember that until 1940, more air cargo was flown in Northern Canada than anywhere in the world and that Canadian pilots and aircraft operators have developed a technique which has won the respect of air operators throughout the American continent. After all, the aeroplane in many parts of British Columbia and the Northwest Territories is the only vehicle of transportation, rather than a competitive means with surface transport.

Thus with Canada's two great rail systems now controlling the Dominion's mainline and feeder airways the transport world is watching closely this unique and far-flung Canadian rail-air transport plan.



SAFETY AND COMFORT combined with speed and efficiency are paramount in the operation of Canadian Pacific Airlines, and the huge planes which whisk passengers and mail-across the broad stretches of the Dominion are modern to the nth degree. The plane shown above is typical of this great fleet.

35,000 Now Working

From a mere handful at the outbreak of war to well over 35,000 today, from a seamstress stitching fabric on the wing of an elementary trainer, from a secretary in an office, from a rivetter on a cockpit cowling, or a welder at the bench, to chief engineers and foremen, women play and will continue to play an increasing part in this great Canadian industry.

It is doubtful if any country in the world today has a better diversified aircraft program than that of Canada. Certainly no country of its population can even remotely compare with what is being done here in this important field. Primary, intermediate and advanced trainers, each the best in its class anywhere, fighter-bomber, dive bomber, heavy bomber, and coastal reconnaissance amphibian each the finest in the world, each being built in a single plant, several of which were especially designed for the particular machine in question—that is Canada's aircraft program.

From a mere figment of imagination in the minds of one woman and five men in the little village of Baddeck, Nova Scotia, to the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, from five visionary experiments in a small wooden workshop on a Cape Breton hillside, laboriously building something they hoped might fly, to an industry stretching from coast to coast, occupying 7,000,000 square feet of floor space, employing 100,000 men and women, and turning out 4,000 machines per year are the developments of less than half a lifetime.

Fliers On Coast Patrol

Europe is realized by the United Nations, the most modern types are being diverted to the Atlantic sector.

The bases from which these planes are flying, stretching from Newfoundland, down the coast of Labrador, the St. Lawrence and the Maritimes, have in many cases been hewn out of vergin forest. An infinite amount of thought, labor and money have gone into establishing and equipping them, but they are now practically completed, and as the longer-range aircraft become available in quantities they will literally command the western Atlantic, in an offensive rather than a defensive sense.

Within the last month or so giant four-motored Liberator bombers have been introduced to convoy patrol work, and in collaboration with the U.S. Army Air Forces based in Newfoundland, the R.C.A.F. is now helping to provide convoy protection to a point near mid-Atlantic, from whence it is taken up by big aircraft of the R.A.F. Coastal Command. With inauguration of this long-range service a long hoped for objective in the fight to protect our convoys has been reached.

In this monotonous and unsensational work, the flying mariners of Canada's "coastal command" rarely receive decorations, the conventional form of recognition, but there have been a few. Since the outbreak of war they have won 10 Air Force Crosses, 9 Air Force Medals, 2 Distinguished Flying Crosses, 9 British Empire Medals, and one Order of the British Empire. Thirteen officers and five other ranks have received "mention in dispatches."

In Aleutian Fogs

In the fog-veiled Aleutians other units of this same R.C.A.F. Home War Establishment have been at grips with the enemy in the air and on and under the sea. American commanders in that theatre speak most highly of R.C.A.F. co-operation. The first R.C.A.F. pilot to make direct contact with the Japs, Squadron Leader K. A. Boomer, was awarded the D.F.C. for shooting down a Zero fighter late last year, and Canadian airmen have since participated in numerous bombing attacks against Japanese-held islands, shipping and aircraft in that area.

It is not generally known that a strong Japanese invasion force, which obviously had Alaska as its objective, was repelled by a handful of United States and Canadian air force units, late last fall, or that to meet that emergency an R.C.A.F. fighter squadron was flown to the Aleutians from Ottawa in 48 hours flat.

As far as possible, members of this home Air Force are exchanged with airmen overseas. Many of the commanding officers of our home war squadrons saw overseas service early in the war, and the air officers commanding Eastern and Western Air Commands as well as the Senior Air Staff Officer at Headquarters have served for a time in Britain on operations.

THREE-IN-ONE GLOVES complete this airman's new issue of R.C.A.F. Type E flying clothing. Fully clad he wears . . . aside from the gloves . . . heavy underwear, wool socks, sheepskin-lined boot fillers, the Type E suit, flying boots, woollen bell-jar neck cover, emergency ration belt, helmet, goggles, oxygen mask, radio equipment, Mae West and parachute harness. Sounds heavy, but the new suit is lighter and more comfortable than the leather garments it replaces. (RC.A.F. Photo).

KEENLY INTERESTED in the "Turret Trainer", Air Cadets members of the Windsor, Woodstock and Brantford Squadrons, who recently spent 10 days at No. 4 Bombing and Gunnery School, Fingal, Ont., flock around the instructor as he points out a few important features.

WINGS
OVER THE NORTH
...and Beyond!

HISTORY repeats as Canadian Pacific extends another of Canada's frontiers . . . this time northward . . . this time by air!

More than half a century ago Canadian Pacific drove its steel across Canada, linking ocean to ocean by rail. There followed great ships plying the broad Pacific . . . then the Atlantic. Now, opening wide the door to Canada's New North, Canadian Pacific Air Lines reaches out to tap new and little known resources . . . to give access to the short, roof-of-the-world air routes to Europe and Asia.

Today these nothern air routes form a vital link in global war strategy. Tomorrow they will help to reshape the commercial map of the world . . . for the shortest distance from Toronto or Detroit to China and India is via the Yukon and Alaska! Dedicated now to bringing victory nearer (90% of its total traffic is connected with the war effort), Canadian Pacific Air Lines will be ready to build and serve a greater Canada when peace returns.

Sleek Harvard Trainers Known to Every Schoolboy

A flashing, swift, yellow plane, with wheels folded neatly under its chin, can swoop down over any street or country lane in Canada and children will look up from their play to exclaim, 'Boy there goes a Harvard.'

Now a familiar household word in any part of the country, the name Harvard three years ago was associated in the minds of most only with that of a great educational centre. Now everyone knows the Harvard as the AT-16 advanced trainer plane of Canada's vast air training scheme. Those who know it best of all are the present day heroes of the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. who learned from it how to twist, turn, and outfly the best of the Axis airmen.

Although the plane is not essentially designed as a fighting craft it has played a tremendous role in Canada's war effort, and 9,000 Canadians are working day and night to make sure that their brothers of the air forces get the best possible plane to complete their preparations for action.

An all-metal two-seater, low-wing monoplane, the Harvard spreads her wings over a span of 42 feet. Her single 550-horsepower can lift the craft's 5,340 pounds of gross weight swiftly from the ground and send it roaring through the air, obedient to the slightest control, at a speed in excess of 200 miles per hour.

Armament Provided

Armament provision for the plane consists of a machine gun in one wing, a camera gun in the other, and a light type practice bomb rack. Full equipment is also provided for night flying. For the benefit of potential pilots, all controls and instruments are duplicated. Instruments also include the full range required for blind flying, and a hood for blind flying instruction is provided.

Painted a bright yellow which fl[illegible] brilliantly in the sunlight, the plane is of metal construction throughout. The front, or cockpit section of the fuselage and the detachable engine mount, are of welded steel construction, covered with detachable metal side panels and cowling. The rear part of the fuselage and the wing, tail, and control surfaces and flaps, are of metal "skinstresse" build, with the exception of the ailerons, rudders, and elevators, which are fabric covered. A special feature of the Canadian-built model is the extensive system of cockpit heating, for cold climate operations.

Production on a large scale, the Harvard is manufactured in Canada by Noorduyn Aviation Limited under license from North American Aviation Incorporated, of California.

Slow Action

In 1937, when war was still two years below the horizon, R.B.C. Noorduyn, Canada's "Flying Dutchman," went to Ottawa to discuss with the R.C.A.F. the need for an advanced trainer. Official action was slow in developing but Noorduyn went ahead on his own and obtained a license from North American to make the Harvard. It wasn't until January 1940, however, that he got his first contract and the trainers began to roll from his shop. The rest of the story of the Harvard is familiar to all Canadians. The government now needed trainers and needed them fast. Canadian workmen produced them fast. The plant of 142 men on January 1, 1939, had grown to an organization of 8,710 persons by January 1, 1943 as the sleek yellow trainers began to swoop over Canadian fields by thousands.

It is not by haphazard choice that the top-flight trainer is painted a brilliant yellow. Study and experience revealed that if a plane is forced down in isolated country it is more easily spotted by searching planes if it is painted a brilliant color which will show up against a background of either snow or foliage.

HARVARD TRAINER

Curtis Helldiver Superior To Vaunted Nazi Stuka

THE Curtiss Helldiver which Canada is busy building at the Canadian Car and Foundry plant in Fort William and the Fairchild Aircraft plant at Lonqueuil, Quebec, is one of the world's deadliest dive bombers.

So deadly and dangerous is the Helldiver that few details have been released on its construction and performance. It is still a hush hush plane.

But we do know that it is miles ahead of the vulnerable German Stuka. Its speed is plenty fast for a plane designed to operate from the decks of an aircraft carrier and do it with the bomb load and range of the Helldiver —figures on both these features being secret incidentally.

The Helldiver is also powerfully armed and highly manoeuverable. It decidedly is not easy meat for enemy fighters.

The Helldiver is one of the few planes so well adapted to holding its own while delivering a deadly bomb load that is used by land forces in a slightly different version as well as by naval forces. Often carrier-based planes are not considered to be in the same class as land-based planes. This is not true of the Helldiver.

CURTISS "HELL-DIVER"

IT'S THE AMBITION of every pilot in Alaska to tangle with the Jap Zeros. Here Flight Lieut. Al Crimmins, Westmount, Que., of the R.C.A.F., who spent more than five weeks flying with American pursuit squadrons on daily missions over Kiska, points out some of the choicer targets on the once enemy-held island to Pilot Officer A. C. "Major" Fanning, Winnipeg; Flying Officer Bill MacLean, Campbellton, N.B.; Pilot Officer K. Barrie, Edmonton, Alta.; Pilot Officer Ronnie Cox, Winnipeg, Man.; Flying Officer George Stiles, Cornwall, Ont., (LEFT to RIGHT) and Flying Officer Frank Galbraith, Shelburne, Ont.; Flight Sergeant H. 8,000 Planes Produced monoplane of all-metal stressed skin construction, twin fins and rudders, and fully retractable undercarriage. With a wingspan of 102 feet, it is 69 feet, 4 inches long and 20 feet in height. The wheels are 5 feet, 6 inches in diameter. It is powered by four Rolls-Royce-Merlin engines, each of 1,250 horsepower at 12,250 feet with low-gear supercharger in operation. Its wing area is 1,205 square feet.

It is armed with 10 Browning aircraft machine guns mounted on four Nash and Thompson hydraulically operated turrets, located in nose and tail, mid-top, and mid-belly. There are four guns in the tail, fed by long ammunition tracks running alongside the rear fuselage. Each of the other turrets mounts two guns. The rear gun turret can be swung to any position. The aircraft has no blind spots.

Empty, the Lancaster weighs approximately 35,000 pounds. The maximum bomb load is 15,800 pounds, equal to that of three to four Wellingtons. The huge bomb compartment is 33 feet long, closed by two doors curved to follow the lines of the fuselage. They can be opened hydraulically in five seconds.

The bullet-proof gasoline tanks have a capacity of 2,154 gallons. Engines on each side are usually fed from the tanks on the same side but transfer pipe systems permit of a changeover if necessary. The four Rolls-Royce-Merlin engines are installed in separate nacelles. A feature peculiar to the Lancaster is that the engines are underslung, the engine bearer being attached to the wing spars instead of being built into the wing structure. This arrangement has aerodynamic advantages and allows for rapid changing of engines.

Weighs Over 30 Tons

The Lancaster has a longer nose than most other bombers, so that weight can be well balanced. It is largely owing to its design, providing for low structural weight and the proportioning of the structural members to the load they have to carry, that the Lancaser is probably the finest four-engine bomber in the world.

Fully loaded, the Lancaster weighs more than 60,000 pounds but can take off from a concrete runway in about 650 yards at 90 miles an hour. It climbs 1,000 feet a minute, fully loaded. It cruises at about 200 miles an hour, can attain top speed of more than 300. Its range is in the neighborhood of 3,000 miles. Flaps and landing gear can be let down up to speeds of 200 miles an hour, which is higher than normally allowable of other large bomber aircraft. And, unlike other big bombers which must be flying level before bombs can be released, the Lancaster can drop its load "off the flat" if necessary.

The plane carries a smaller crew than most other large bombers — six instead of seven. These are the captain, second pilot, observer (navigation or bomb aimer), two radio men (alternative air gunners), and an air gunner.

There are some 50,000 different parts in the Lancaster, not including nuts, bolts, and rivets, and counting such items as engines and turrets as one. There are about 500,000 manufacturing operations.

Here is a part of the official R.A.F. test report:

"The aircraft is eminently suitable for operational duty. Even with two motors stopped on the one side, the performance was exceptional. Baulked landings present no difficulty even with 60,000 lb. loaded weight. Take-off and night landings are straight forward. Manoeuvrability is good and evasive and jinking tactics easy."

Patterned on the British Avro Lancaster, the Malton-built plane is Canadian from nose to tail. Only the engines and certain instruments are made outside the country.

The Mosquito

The famous Mosquito, built by the de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd., is the world's fastest and most manoeuverable bomber. It is made of Canadian wood, laminated and moulded under pressure. It embodies more qualities than were ever previously deemed possible of one aircraft. It has amazing speed, can operate at long range can be utilized on day or night operations, is an efficient fighter bomber and can be used to advantage in reconnaissance. It is 40 feet long, with a wingspan of 54 feet and is powered by two Rolls-Royce engines, carries an armament of four machine guns and four cannons. A Mosquito recently flew from Toronto to Burbank, California, in seven hours and 20 minutes. Recently five Canadian-made Mosquitoes took flight from the de Havilland airport after a mass christening in which they were named in honour of five Canadian communities.

The Catalina

The Catalina (Canso A) amphibian, built by Canadian Vickers Limited, Montreal, and the flying boat of the same name built by Boeing Aircraft of Canada Limited, Vancouver, are recognized as the world's best coastal patrol bombers. The Catalina is a 14-ton ship with the greatest range of any twin-engine bomber in the world. It is 65 feet long, with a wingspan of 104 feet and hull and wings are of duraluminum. More than 100,000 man-hours go into the construction of one of these giant planes. Catalinas have been of inestimable value on patrol work and convoy duty in the Atlantic and Pacific.

The "Hell-Diver"

Two Canadian aircraft companies are beginning production of the Curtiss "Hell-Diver." Large contracts are held by the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, Limited, with plants at Fort William and Montreal, and by Fairchild Aircraft Limited, Longueuil, P.Q. An American naval combat plane, the "Hell-Diver" is classified as a scout-bomber and is regarded as one of the deadliest dive bombers in the world.

Other Canadian Aircraft

Other planes on Canada's aircraft production list are the Fairchild PT-26 low wing monoplane, known in Canada as the Cornell, most modern primary trainer in the world. This is being made at the plant of Fleet Aircraft Limited at Fort Erie.

The North American AT 16 low-wing monoplane, otherwise known as the Harvard, is recognized as the best single-engine advanced trainer yet developed, and is made by Noorduyn Aviation Limited at Montreal.

The Avro Anson, outstanding twin-engine trainer, is a Canadian version of the British-made Anson. The latest model, the Anson V, has moulded plywood fuselage. Production of the Anson trainers is administered by the Government-owned Federal Aircraft, Limited, utilizing facilities of MacDonald Brothers Aircraft Limited, at Winnipeg, and Canadian Car and Foundry Company at Amherst, N.S.

The Noorduyn Norseman, Canadian-designed transport, is being made by Noorduyn Aviation Limited, at Montreal.

The Canadian Bolingbroke, a twin-engine medium bomber adapted for advanced bombing and gunnery training under the Air Training Plan, is made by Fairchild Aircraft Limited, at Montreal.

Canadian-made Ansons, Harvards and Tiger Moths accounted for one-half of Canada's total wartime aircraft production up to May of this year. Emphasis has thus been on trainer production. But the big new combat planes now taking wing from Canadian plants will follow a fine tradition set by the service craft which have already seen action.

Canadian-built Hurricanes, for instance, have a brilliant record in this war. Flown by Canadian, English, Australian and New Zealand pilots, they have played a big part in the Fighter Command's offensive against the Axis in occupied Europe. The Northern Rhodesian squadron flew Hurricanes in the air attack at Dieppe. They have been in operation with the China-British fighter squadron which has made many "locomotive-smashing" raids over Europe.

Poet's Plan To Come True

NOTHING is so modern as big bombing planes in use today. No major industry is so new as the aircraft industry. And yet among fliers and plane builders to-day aviation is still talked of as something to come, the industry of the future.

Beside the image of the future being conjured up by aircraft manufacturers and designers, today's heavy planes look puny. One manufacturer is said to have plans to develop a 500,000 pound plane to carry passengers and freight.

Enthusiasts look forward to the peacetime day when Tennyson's vision will be fulfilled and the "heavens fill with commerce." Luxury liners with as many as 50 staterooms may ply the air above the oceans where great ocean liners of the Normandie type held sway in pre-war days.

One important stage of the future development in aviation is considered by some experts to be a great swing to helicopters, those little planes for personal business jaunts which can come down vertically in a back yard and take off without a runway. Designers feel that the trend in these will be toward smaller and simplified machines which could be as easy or easier to operate than an automobile.

Airforce Needs 25,000 Women at Once To Release Men for Combat Duty

By Squad. Officer Willa Walker Senior Women's Division Staff Officer, R.C.A.F.

FOR almost two years now, citizens of Canada have seen members of the Royal Canadian Air Force (Women's Division) in uniform going to and from our work in the various cities across Canada. You have seen us on parade, perhaps, but very few of you have ever really seen us on Air Force stations where our women in the service are doing the real jobs of work. How many, seeing these girls in uniform, have ever stopped to consider why they joined up, and what the women in uniform are really doing, and why their work is so necessary to the Armed Forces? Women take the same oath of allegiance as the men; we have signed up for service anywhere in the world for the duration of the war and for the period of demobilization; we come under the same rules and regulations and the same discipline as the men in the forces.

27,000 Now Serving.

There are now more than 27,000 women serving their country in uniform— approximately 12,000 in the Army, approximately 12,000 in the Air Force, and 3,000 in the Navy.

That figure of 27,000 sounds like a substantial figure, and it is. But many times that number of women could be put to work at once in the Air Force. The Air Force needs immediately 25,000 more women recruits. In Canada there are approximately 700,000 women, exclusive of women on the farms and in war industries, between the ages of 18 and 45, single or married, without dependent children, who could be enlisted. It is absolutely necessary that those women should join us in the services and thus release more men for combat duty. The women in the service have proven their ability to perform a wide variety of duties as capably and sometimes better than the men in certain trades. As hundreds of thousands of women throughout the United Nations are doing, they are proving that they can play just as essential a part in the conduct of this war as their brothers-in-arms. They are working not only as cooks, hospital assistants, clerks of all kinds, telephone operators, drivers of motor transport, but they are wireless operators ground, meteorological observers, laboratory assistants, photographers, dental assistants and a host of other difficult and more technical trades. The proof of this is that in the R.C.A.F. alone we have progressed from ten trades to well over 40, and it is quite possible that as time goes on, more and more trades will be opened up to women.

Women Officers

Wherever our women are stationed they have their own women officers and N.C.O.'s to supervise them and look after their welfare, health and happiness. Their health, by the way, has been excellent, far better than was anticipated. Our women officers are not only in charge of the airwomen. They are replacing men in more specialized positions, such as signals officers, equipment and accounting officers, doctors and messing officers, who are trained dieticians. We not only work with the women, but with the men as well. On the majority of Air Force stations you will find a W.D. officer working as assistant station adjutant, and in some cases they have actually taken over the work of adjutant for a month or more. At Air Force headquarters in Ottawa, more and more men officers' positions are being filled with women officers, and you will find these officers working on the men's records, etc., and taking the place of a junior man officer.

After being enlisted at any one of the recruiting centres across Canada by one of our W.D. officers, a recruit will go to No. 7 Manning Depot in Ottawa, where she will have five weeks basic training. During that time she will be taught to drill and march; be issued with her uniform; be given inoculations; have a great deal of physical training and sports, be taught service etiquette, and learn something about the service. Recruits from every part of Canada train at this Manning Depot.

There, as ever after in the service, she will meet women from all walks of life and from all parts of Canada. During her time at the Manning Depot she is put into the trade for which she is best qualified and great care is taken in the selections. At the end of the five weeks' basic training, she is sent for further technical training to any one of our training establishments. The cooks go to the School of Cookery at Guelph, hospital assistants to St. Thomas, W.O.G.'s to the Wireless School in Montreal, others to Toronto, etc. After being fully trained in her trade she is sent to any one of the more than 100 stations right across Canada.

On a station she may be one of approximately 200 women. She will work in any one of the sections on that station, replacing a man. She will live in a barrack block that has been set aside for the women and sleep in a barrack room in a double-decker bunk. Our barracks are painted an attractive shade of green and the girls have done much to make them more colourful with curtains and dressing tables. She will eat in the same mess hall as the airmen and at the same time. She will rise with reveille at 6.30 a.m., and she has to be in barracks with lights out at 10.30 or 11.00 p.m.

If you were to visit that station you would see airwomen driving the cars and tractors, cooking in the mess halls for both airmen and officers, hospital assistants working in the station hospital, airwomen doing all the clerical work. Up in the Control Tower meteorological observers chart the weather, the wireless operators (ground) communicate with the aircraft; the airwomen in the flights check the pilots "in" and "out" and keep close check on their flying hours; in the equipment section they hand out parts of engines; in stores they give out uniforms; in the maintenance hangar, they repair fabric on the wings, or in the parachute sections they pack parachutes, or in the shops they clean spark plugs, and a great many other varied duties and trades. In fact, in every section you will find women doing the work that was formerly done by men. I know this for a fact because I have asked the N.C.O.'s in charge of the sections, "who used to do the work before the airwomen came?" and always it is the same answer, "Oh, so and so who has now remustered or who has gone overseas, etc."

Recreation Rooms.

On all our stations our airwomen have their own recreation rooms where they are permitted to invite the men as their guests two or three nights a week. The men also have their own canteen and then there is another building which is used for both men and women. In the beginning there was naturally much speculation about having women right on the stations with the men. There have been no complications, however. The discipline of the women in uniform has been splendid. The chief reason for its success is because we were accepted quite naturally and every encouragement was given to provide us with attractive recreation rooms where

Wild Williwaw Gales Plague Fliers Across Modern Peter Pan Wonderland

By Flight Lt. A. G. Cannings
R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer

FAR north in Alaska and down the Aleutians chain, members of the R.C.A.F. battled the Japs and the wild williwaw gales.

Deprived of modern living conditions and other conveniences which went to make up this world of ours before Herr Hitler decided to throw it in chaos, these lads have overcome numerous difficulties under primitive conditions. They have mastered most of these problems in short space of time and are ever on guard against possible invasion by the Japs.

It's the modern land of Never-Never.

It's a land where money is almost valueless through its quantity and lack of market; where the sun smiles on your face and snow-

HIGH OVER ALASKAN mountains this flight of fighter planes carry out their daily patrols ready to battle any invading Japs or the numerous wild williwaw storms that appear without warning in this land of beautiful scenery and uncertain weather.

squalls blast your neck before you have taken ten paces; where Paradise blooms and dies in a week as green grass and red, yellow and blue flowers briefly replace the Alberta burnt-prairie effect; where the williwaw flattens hangars, building and men with its 118-mile-per-hour blasts and where pilots of the Royal Canadian Air Force are rivalling the fighting legends of the ancient island totem poles through their activity over the fog-shrouded Aleutians.

I speak of Alaska and the 'Chain' —the Fox, Andreanof and Rat Islands that stretch 3,000 miles into the North Pacific; that spawn real hell-weather for pilots in the union of the warm Pacific currents and the ice-filled Bering Sea.

Resourceful Gang

It is here that fighter and bomber squadrons of the R.C.A.F. are commanding mounting respect from their American hosts and Allies for their resourcefulness, efficiency and morale under as primitive conditions as any fighting front in the world can offer.

But although work is difficult alike for the fitter and rigger in his skimp "nose-hangar"; for the clerk in his corner of the Quonset hut office; for the pilot, the cook, and the motor transport driver—still officers and men of the R.C.A.F., especially in the Aleutians area, work hard and play hard, with native ingenuity for improvised sport overcoming the lack of entertainment normally found on Dominion stations.

There is always that indispensable holiday of the old hand—the 48. But in the Aleutians there is nowhere to go, no family friends to visit, no girl friends to visit. In fact there are no girls of any description, white or native.

To offset somewhat these diversions of the more sociable post and station life, Canadians in Alaska take full advantage of blanket invitations to personal appearances of big-name movie and radio stars.

They find a peculiar fascination in being able to say "I saw Bob Hope," "What do you think of Frances Langford?", "Even in the R.A.F., have you seen the equal of Jerry Colonna's moustache?", "Boy, I'll bet Joe E. Brown could eat a grapefruit in one bite."

Sparkling new movie and sound equipment and a highly-developed system of film exchange brings "A" pictures to the most remote posts even before the films open for first run in major Canadian cities. There is, too, a sprinkling of older films.

Have 4 Theatres.

At one station, four theatres—the largest capable of seating 2,000 men, the smallest about 500 —change shows daily with a maximum run of two days if the film rating of the current showing is high enough.

After the show, officers and airmen invariably drop into the officers' club or the "P.X." (the American canteen) for a coke, a cup of coffee, or light refreshments. The "P.X." sells everything from deodorants to doughnuts, from boot laces to beer (when available and of the American 3.2 variety).

Mail flown in by army air transport is usually received within 10 days after mailing. A letter from Montreal has reached its Aleutian destination six days after being posted. Mail days are the milestones of time for officers and airmen.

Regardless of where he hails from any Canadian will see scenery that can't be touched anywhere in the world for its grandeur and ruggedness. Tremendous mountain chains with 20,000-foot peaks, mighty glaciers that mother entire webs of rivers in the alluvial glacial deltas and the occasional coastal plains.

Canadian units sent into Alaska went in streamlined—with just enough men to do the necessary tasks of aircraft maintenance and administrative and equipment work. Alaska offers every tradesman a chance to work a normal day on his or her job with the prospect of many additional hours to keep up his end with hardworking mates.

No one is worked to death, even though he may think so at times. Commanding officers were carefully selected for their knowledge of men. Work and recreation schedules have resulted that give a man ample time to follow any of the many available off-duty sports.

In Alaska proper, baseball, volleyball and rugby are played regularly. R.C.A.F. teams are entered in the American army and navy leagues. An Air Force hockey team won the Alaska title in February. For the skiing enthusiast, American army skis are handy if he wants to try his luck on the perpetual snowlanes.

Hunter's Paradise

Here one can do hunting such as is not found elsewhere in the world. If you can dream up a nightmare that stands 12 feet erect and leaves a 26-inch-diameter foot print, then you'll have some idea of what an adult Kodiak bear looks like. It took 56 rounds from a high-powered rifle to stop a small one, an airmen reported on his return from a shooting trip.

Fishing, both deep sea and stream, is unlimited. Salmon are running and the trout are fat from gorging in the salmon eggs.

In the Aleutians there is no ice for skating but the numerous slopes are a skier's dream—steep and gentle, unmarked by tree or rock. In fact anyone from eastern or western Canada feels homesick for the sight of a tree—it doesn't seem to affect the hardier airmen from the prairie provinces.

Down the island chain, men find excellent fishing in the smaller lakes. The perennial canned food and fresh-frozen articles are often supplemented by the firm flesh of succulent trout and salmon.

There is little hunting in the area although caribou and fox abound. Caribou are protected as a natural food supply in case outside lines are cut by enemy action. The adult fox with natural craftiness stays out of sight although many an airman has a red or black fox pup as a pet after digging out a den in the tundra.

In some cases airmen have played midwife to a caribou. In grazing, the animal entangles its horns in signal wires and is either too stupid or to weak to clear the snarl. Many of the does are in calf when found and usually abandon the calf after the airmen helps with its birth.

As a result as many as four to six calves have adopted the airmen and stumble about the camp on their uncertain legs bawling for a dish of powdered milk. One armament section rigged up a nipple and feeder from an eyedropper bulb and ketchup bottle. Their pet is the only one that gets fed scientifically at regular intervals.

Weather Parade

The weather is perhaps the most amazing thing in Alaska and the Aleutians. "Down the chain" the four Canadian seasons can be experienced in twelve minutes. Standing on a hill the newcomer can watch the weather parade pass in the valley below.

Sunshine dances on the creek water. Then a baby williwaw flattens the grass. Light fog brings the rain and snow squalls follow close behind. Low clouds are sucked down to become heavy fog. All passes and the sun again dances on the creek water.

The sharpness of the demarcation line between sun and fog is hard to believe. Perhaps the best illustration can be given from the day I chased a herd of caribou with a jeep to get an "atmosphere" shot.

The herd was grazing in the centre of a long gentle slope that was bordered by clouds, the Bering Sea and a creek in that order. To get the sun at my back it was necessary to drive out into the open and across the creek. No sooner did the bulls detect a strange presence than they bunched the herd and, milling slowly with a number of calves, moved up the slope. They disappeared into the cloud.

On attempting to follow them into the cloud, I stopped when thick fog blotted out the jeep's flat radiator four feet in front of me. Backing up two jeep-lengths I was again in brilliant sunshine.

On looking back, fifteen minutes and ten thousand jolts later, the caribou could be seen in the sun higher up the slope. The cloud was a belt of fog some five thousand yards through.

The williwaw — the freakish winds brewed from the combination of the Bering Sea cold and the Pacific Ocean heat— is terriifc in its suddenness, fury and uncertainty.

It can blow north on one side of an east-west runway and south on the other. Then it reverses—but fast — and blows parallel to the line of take-off. One fighter pilot taking off was hit by a williwaw at right angles to his line of flight. As soon as his wheels were clear he found himself 300 yards to starboard—blown off his course by the williwaw.

An Alaskan posting means a slight boost in wages for an airman. The Canadian is paid in American money and the difference to his equivalent pay in Canada is the difference in Canadian exchange on the American dollar. Actually money is almost valueless because there is nothing to buy. When articles are put on sale afaer the transports come in, shelves are cleared in less than two hours. If the airman is lucky enough to get something, he can often realize a good profit by re-selling it to an American.

Need Little Money.

Officers and men get along with very little money other than expenditures for cigarettes and personal necessities. There is no liquor to be had anywhere "down the chain" and American army post offices do a roaring business selling money orders to Canadians who send their surplus money home. In a recent Victory bond drive one fighter unit put an entire month's payroll into bonds.

Working and living conditions have produced brilliant examples a flimsy "nose hangar" provided for major engine overhaul, N.C.O.'s and men built their own engine stands, hoods, tail frames, and heating arrangements.

Tiring of going through the rain to get water from the abolution taps, a fitter patiently "scrounged" enough pipe, taps and sinks to install running water (from a 46-gallon oil drum) in every hut. And after ten weeks of going without a bath, the same patient gathering of material from many sources enabled the carpenters and fitter to rig up a shower room.

When the Canadians took over one advanced base, they took over bare huts. With wood from broken packing cases, bits picked up on the black sand beaches of the Bering Sea and pieces blown from original sites by the williwaws, all hands turned to building desks, lockers, tables and wood panelling.

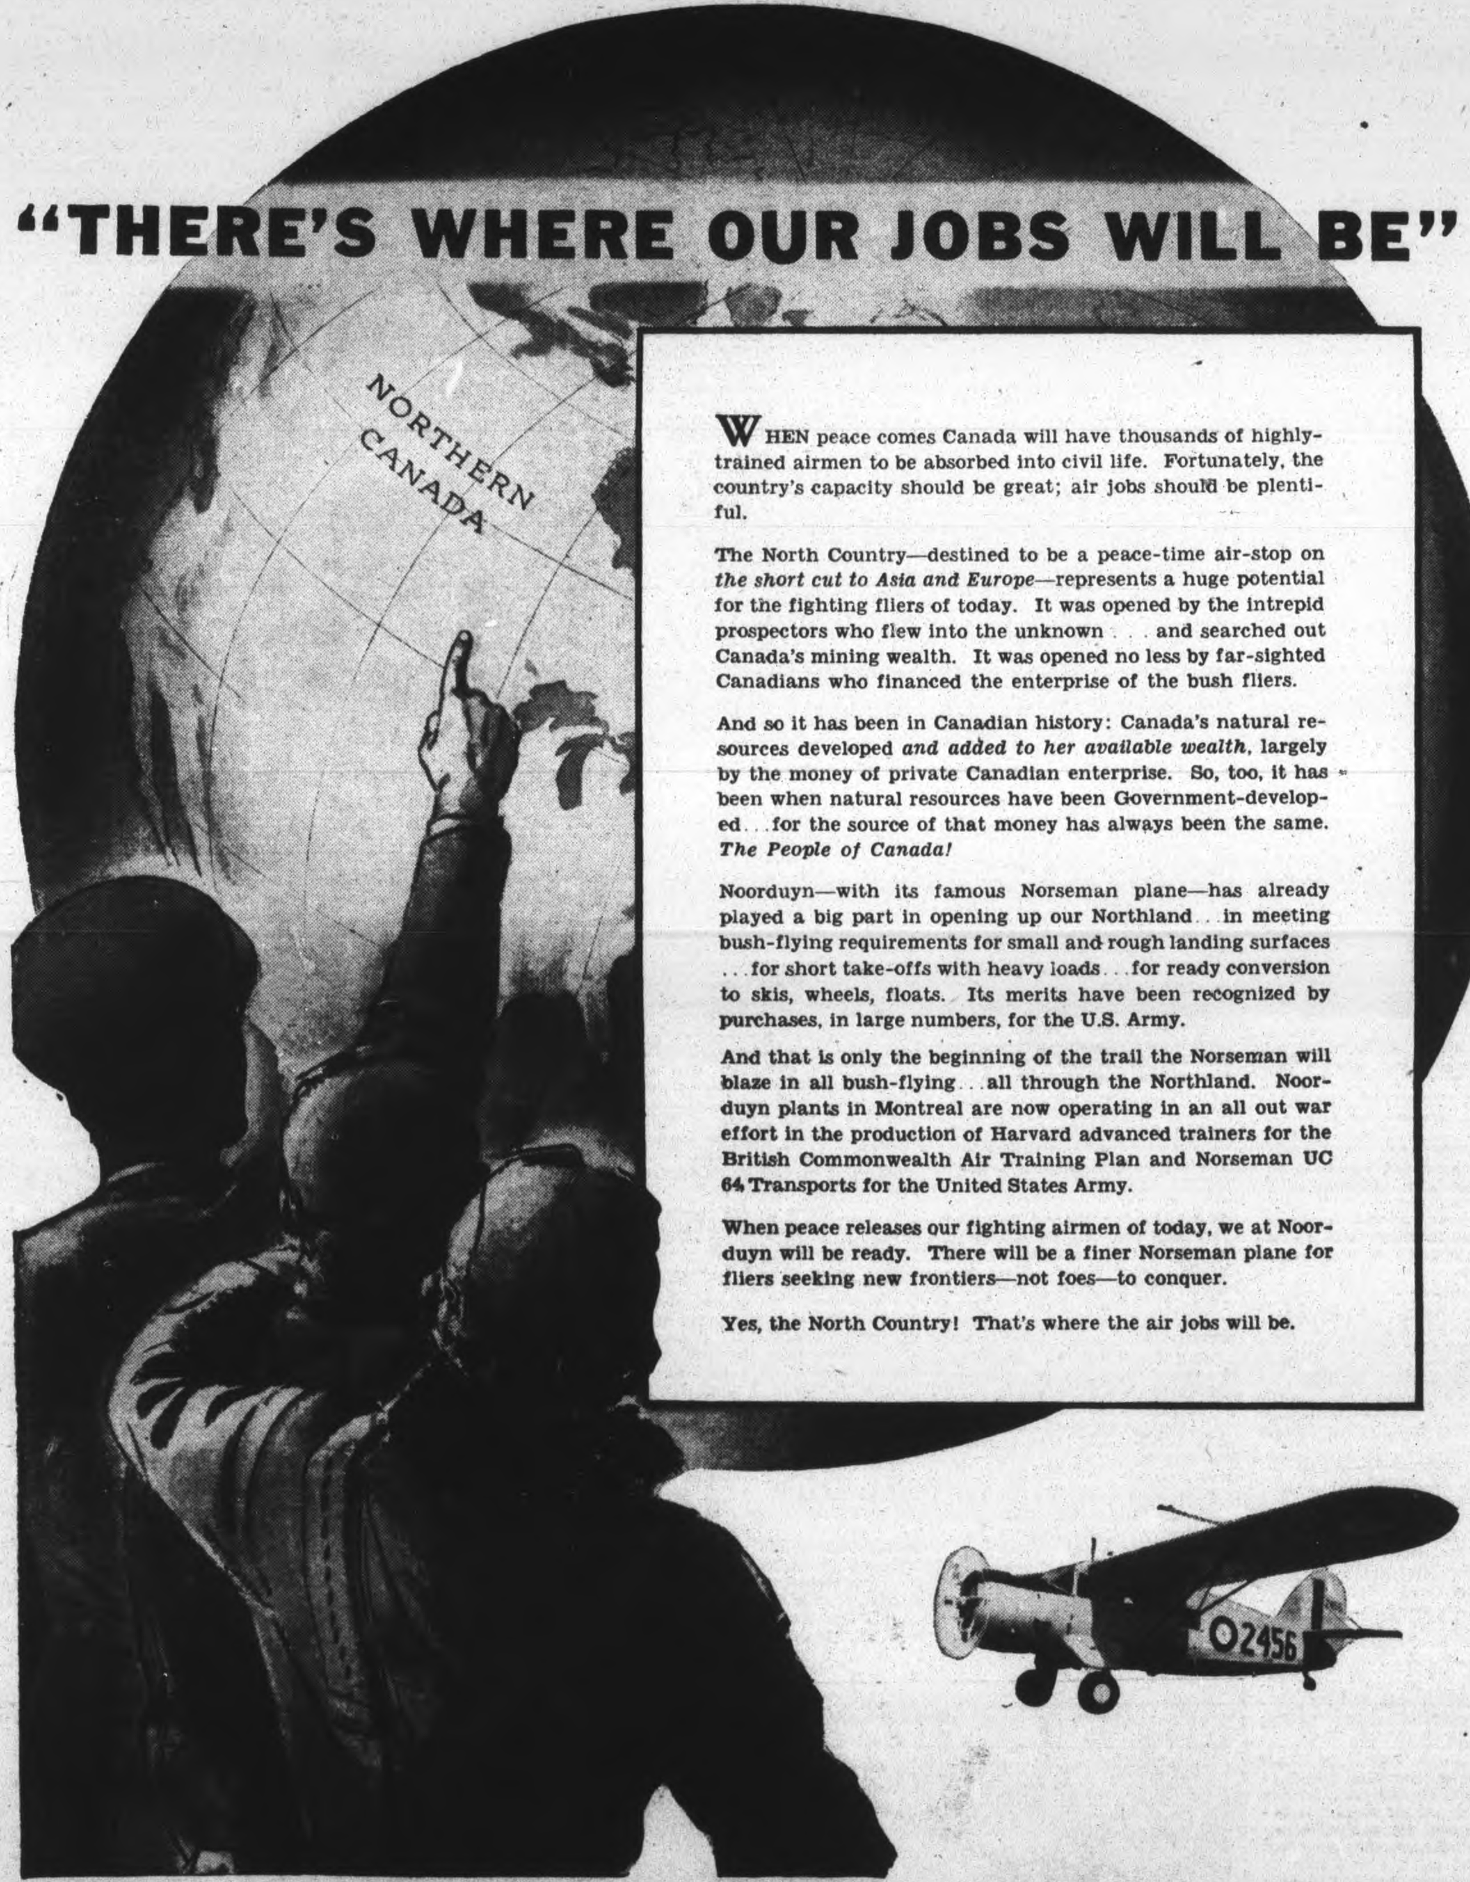
"THERE'S WHERE OUR JOBS WILL BE"



WHEN peace comes Canada will have thousands of highly-trained airmen to be absorbed into civil life. Fortunately, the country's capacity should be great; air jobs should be plentiful.

The North Country—destined to be a peace-time air-stop on the short cut to Asia and Europe—represents a huge potential for the fighting fliers of today. It was opened by the intrepid prospectors who flew into the unknown . . . and searched out Canada's mining wealth. It was opened no less by far-sighted Canadians who financed the enterprise of the bush fliers.

And so it has been in Canadian history: Canada's natural resources developed and added to her available wealth, largely by the money of private Canadian enterprise. So, too, it has been when natural resources have been Government-developed . . . for the source of that money has always been the same. The People of Canada!

Noorduyn—with its famous Norseman plane—has already played a big part in opening up our Northland . . . in meeting bush-flying requirements for small and rough landing surfaces . . . for short take-offs with heavy loads . . . for ready conversion to skis, wheels, floats. Its merits have been recognized by purchases, in large numbers, for the U.S. Army.

And that is only the beginning of the trail the Norseman will blaze in all bush-flying . . . all through the Northland. Noorduyn plants in Montreal are now operating in an all out war effort in the production of Harvard advanced trainers for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and Norseman UC 64 Transports for the United States Army.

When peace releases our fighting airmen of today, we at Noorduyn will be ready. There will be a finer Norseman plane for fliers seeking new frontiers—not foes—to conquer.

Yes, the North Country! That's where the air jobs will be.

Bogey That Women Talk Exploded by Air-Women

BEHIND locked doors, in classrooms which are forbidden ground to any but staff and trainees, specially-selected girls of the R.C.A.F. Women's Division are learning secrets of fighter control at Rockcliffe Air Station.

"Girls on fighter stations are actually in the front line of the war," explained the officer commanding, an R.A.F. veteran of the Battle of Britain. "They do their work close to, if not actually on the airfield where fighter 'planes are dispersed. No one in fighter 'ops' is allowed to discuss duties outside the operations room—and don't let anyone tell you that women can't keep a secret.

"We had girls in fighter 'ops' rooms when Jerry tried to knock us out from the air in the Battle of Britain. It was a surprise to the Hun to find out we were always there when he attacked. By means of our system of radio location, our fighters were able to dispense with standing patrols—yet they were always up in the air to greet Jerry when he arrived. That was one of the world's most important and best-kept secrets, for not one of our W.A.A.F.s ever let it out."

A Great Part

Girls play a greater role in defensive fighter operations than is generally known. When fighter pilots in the crew room get word to "scramble" — the command which sends them on the run for their 'planes—it comes from a woman in the "ops room" sitting beside the controller. He, in turn, bases his instructions on information supplied by girl "plotters."

"The girls do everything but fly the 'planes," observed an instructor.

"Girls have established their worth in fighter "ops" rooms," said R.A.F. instructors now at Rockcliffe, who worked side by side with them in the Battle of Britain. Fighter fields were bombed and strafed in an effort to knock out British 'planes on the ground, but the girls carried on. An R.A.F. instructor recalled that, when a Nazi bomb fell 25 yards away, blasting equipment off the walls and blowing out the windows, the girls kept at their tasks with such coolness and accuracy that the fighter 'planes they helped to direct knocked down six 'planes. Another night, girls who had been on duty more than 12 hours plotted incoming Heinkels so accurately that five of them were destroyed as they reached the coast.

Cream of Talent

To learn fighter control work, girls muster into the R.C.A.F. Women's Division as "clerks operational." They must be quick, accurate, intelligent, and between the ages of 18 to "approximately 32." A hard and fast line is not drawn as to age, for many a woman of 35 has the mental agility and the elastic temperament of a girl of 25. Matriculation standing is desirable, but not essential, since a bright girl can master the technical knowledge required. Nor are technical qualifications required, although mathematical training is of assistance.

The fighter control course lasts only a month after the girls complete their basic training. They then are posted to Home war units in Canada, whether their duties may be in group "ops" rooms, sector "ops" or "filter" rooms. Group "ops" deals with the disposition of fighter forces. Sector "ops" directs them into the air and in the path of the enemy. In "filter" rooms, the information coming from many sources is boiled down for use in the "ops" room. All trainees must know how to handle all jobs, however.

"It's considered one of the most attractive trades in the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F." said the officer commanding the school. He said the trade also was one of the most valuable, for the efficiency of the controller hinged on the efficiency of his crew.

Under the British system of interception, fighter squadrons detailed for daylight defence duties do not normally fly patrols on the off chance of meeting the enemy. Because the range of fighting aircraft is so short, it is neither practicable or tactically sound. For daylight defensive purposes fighter squadrons do not leave the ground until it is known that there are enemy aircraft on the way. As the defending fighters must climb to the height at which the raiders are flying, the warning must be adequate. There must also be accurate advance information on the strength of the raiding formation, its course, and approximate speed, so that the officer in charge of the sector "ops" room—the controller—may send aloft a suitable force and direct it to the point of interception.

While this information is obtained in a number of ways, the chief sources are radio-location stations and, in Canada, the Aircraft Detection Corps, whose members watch the skies from hundreds of coastal posts, record the movement of all suspicious aircraft, and flash word to centres controlling fighter operations.

Plot Courses

In these centres the information is co-related, sifted, and recorded by symbols on a table map, which show the "tracks" of the hostile 'planes and the approximate strength and height of the raiding force. From the information on the table, the controller makes his decisions. He knows at a glance whether the fighter strength at his field is sufficient to turn back the enemy or whether he must call for immediate reinforcement from neighboring fields.

Before the controller of each sector is a table map recording the changing progress of the enemy formation. By radio-telephone, he converses with his fighter squadrons, bringing them within sight of the enemy and in a position which will give them the strategic advantage when interception is made. For example, he will so manoeuvre them that they can launch their attack out of the sun, or from above and behind the enemy formation. Once the enemy is sighted, the leader of the fighter formation takes over.

Often the controller is a friend in need to pilots. One British night-fighter reported by telephone that his oil pressure had failed, that he was losing height rapidly, and would have to bail out. Had he taken to his 'chute at that moment, he would have landed in the sea and his heavy aircraft would have roared on to crash in a busy seaport town. "Take it easy, old man," said the controller. "I know just where you are. Stick with the ship for a few minutes and bail out when I tell you. Now, here's your new course . . . " The pilot parachuted down, making a perfect landing, and his 'plane landed in an open field.

A Thrilling Job

Speed of communication applies equally well to liaison with naval and military forces. A night fighter noticed that an army convoy moving along a road was showing more light than was desirable He told his sector controller, who informed fighter command headquarters, which passed it on to its army liaison officer, who in turn relayed it to the army commander of the area. The leader of the convoy was warned by radio and, within 10 minutes of sending out his original message, the night fighter pilot was able to report that the convoy lights had been dimmed.

In its major tests, Fighter Command of the R.A.F. has established the soundness of its interception methods. In May and June of 1940, the days of Dunkirk, it destroyed 500 enemy aircraft and lost 205 British pilots. In the Battle of Britain, 2,375 German 'planes were destroyed. Losses of R.A.F. fighter pilots were 375 killed and 358 wounded. On Aug. 15, 180 German 'planes were brought down. On September 15th, 185 were destroyed—this with the loss of only 25 British aircraft and 14 of their pilots.

The offensive phase which British fighter command entered upon in June, 1942, has called for tactics different to those employed in the Battle of Britain. As a result of experience, two principal methods of daylight attack have been evolved — high-level attacks with the uppermost squadrons flying at TRAFALGAR SQUARE in London, England, meeting place of every Canadian soldier and airman. "I'll see you at Trafalgar Square" is a well-known saying. Even Air Marshal H. Edwards, air officer commanding-in-chief R.C.A.F. overseas, and Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, in command of the Canadian Army Overseas were caught by the camera as they chatted on this famous square.

HALIFAX BOMBER, gassed and with loaded bomb racks, awaits the orders that will send it skimming beneath the stars for another jaunt over Berlin or the Ruhr. This dramatic picture gives some idea of the immensity of these planes. Note the twin guns protruding from the nose gun turret, two of the four motors are visible on the low wing.

Trenton Port Rare Sight

TRENTON Air Station is the largest and most diversified flying station in the R.C.A.F. Situated on the Bay of Quinte, near the City of Belleville in Eastern Ontario, it presents an impressive sight to those who view it from the highway or from the air.

A permanent R.C.A.F. station which was established long before the present war, it is comprised of several units within itself, such as the Central Flying School, Flying Instructors' School, No. 2 Air Gunners Ground Training School and No. 1 Composite Training School.

The Central Flying School supervises all flying training in Canada and keeps all training stations up-to-date on flying technique. It is staffed by qualified instrutcors who have made a special study of flying technique

Five "visiting" flights are situated on the station. Their duties are to test flying instructors on their abilities. One flight tests elementary flying insructors from elementary flying schools and grades them. Three flights test all instructors from service flying training school, while the fifth flight tests staff pilots. Staff pilots are the pilots who fly aircraft for the training of Air Observers, Bombardiers, Wireless Navigators, Air Gunners, and the other members of aircrew.

Fly Them All.

There is a special flight to keep Chief Flying Instructors of the many training stations in Canada acquainted with the latest flying teachnique. These chief instructors are required to take a periodic course flying Hudsons, Hurricanes, Cessnas, Harvards and Cornells. The course is administered by the Central Flying School under the command of Wing Commander J. G. Stephenson, while the Instructional Flight Commander is Wing Commander "Pat" Twist.

The Flying Instructors' School, commanded by Wing Commander M. Lipton, who has recently returned from operations on night-fighters overseas, is engaged in turning out trained instructors on twin and single engine aircraft. Wing Commander Lipton is ably assisted by Squadron Leader G. Wonnacott and Squadron Leader "Whitey" Dahl.

No. 1 Composite Training School, is anoher branch of the station. While it deals mainly with ground duties, it is by no means the least important of the units. At No. 1 K.T.S. are trained R.C.A.F. Women's Divisional Administrative Officers, Equipment Officers, Accounts Officers, Physical Training Officers, Provosts and Security Officers. It also presents near a score of different ground courses for airmen. The most important of these are the senior N. C. O.'s Administrative course, courses for P.T.I. and Drill Instructors, Service Police, Fire Fighters, airmen Hospital Assistants, Equipment Assistants, Flying Control, Motor Transport Mechanics and Drivers. Here also airwomen are trained as Hospital Assistants, in the up-to-date hospital, as Equipment Assistants, and as Clerk Accounts. The courses are all of different magnitude and duration as the needs of the service change. In many respects the operation of this unit is much the same as that of a good sized university or Technical Training School.

Covers Many Acres.

The whole station is a combination of permanent and temporary buildings, and covers a huge area. It has very extensive recreational facilities. A huge swimming pool, sports field, large indoor sports arena, large lounges, two motion picture theatres and well equipped stage are at the disposal of the personnel. Commanding Officer of this tremendous station is Group Captain R. E. McBurney, of the Permanent Force. Well qualified for his position of responsibility, he is a graduate of the University of Manitoba as an electrical engineer. A signals expert, he came to Trenton after serving at Air Force Headquarters as Director of Signals. The job of the Senior Administrative Officer is also a gigantic task on a station the size of Trenton. The officer filling this position at present is Wing Commander H. D. McKeen, who comes from Toronto, Ont.

OVER A MILLION MILES A DAY...

JACOBS AIRCRAFT Engines

Each day the future Bomber Pilots of the United Nations are flying Jacobs-powered twin-engine Trainers more than 1,000,000 miles, from Canadian and United States training fields, acquiring the skill and precision that will devastate the factories and ship-yards, the railroads and power lines of the Axis — and that soon will blast the way for our Armies to Berlin and Tokyo.

Day-in and day-out these sturdy engines are ready to go — from dawn to dusk and into the night — on their essential mission of qualifying the Bomber Pilots for their job of freeing the World from the ruthless selfishness of Hitler and Tojo.

And it was the initial demands of the R.C.A.F. in 1940, for engines for the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, that started the great expansion of Jacobs plant and production, and prepared the Company to meet the ever-growing needs of the United Nations that followed.

Apart from the Queonset huts that house twelve men, each with his own single bed, the rest of the buildings are tents and corrugated iron shacks sunk from four feet in the ground to protect them from bomb blasts or the more imminent threat of the williwaw.

When one learns that the williwaw once blew the whirling cups off an anenometer at 118 miles per hour, blew a metal-stripped windsock into oblivion and flipped a heavy bomber over on its back with the ease of a cook turning a hotcake, he learns to respect the scourge of the Aleutians.

The best answer to the all important question of 'What about the food?" can probably be found in the general health of the Alaskan personnel. Every officer and man has put on from five to thirty pounds from the predominantly starchy diet.

All Gain Weight.

"I wonder if I can hold my breath long enough to make the tunic look as though it once fitted me," one officer sadly said as he made ready for one of the regular dress parades. He couldn't hold his breath but the buttons held officer, wastline and tunic together long enough to pass through the trying period.

R.C.A.F. cooks have full use of all the highly developed scientific food of the American forces. Almost everything is in cans or dehydrated although many articles of the "fresh frozen" variety make their appearance.

American menus on which the Canadian ration is based are made up at Washington, D.C. When the quartermasters run out of a staple vegetable they almost invariably substitute beans of one sort or another. At one meal five types of beans were served—string beans, lima beans, navy beans, kidney beans. The main dish was pork and beans.

But regardless of personal opinion and the invariable monotony, the gain in weight and healthy bodies of the Canadians provided their own argument.

The morale of the R.C.A.F. is high indeed. In the Aleutians many admit they were homesick at first, but the prospect of getting into action has made them keen and eager. Pilots of fighter units had been getting into action against the Japs at Kiska.

Camaradie between officers and men is of the highest order. In the stress of very close contact necessitated by shortage of buildings, fighter action and sudden alerts, the artificialities of training life are washed out. There is no lack of respect for rank.

Officers laugh at the story of the airman (and kid him unmercifully from day to day) who had to dash out of his hut one night for personal emergency and lost his way in the thick fog, although the haven he was seeking was a short 100 yards away. They found him in the early dawn crouching forlornly in his parka on the edge of a creek. He was afraid to wander any further in case he wandered into the ocean.

Fox Wins Round.

Airmen in their turn can remember the brave setter belonging to one officer who went hunting on the tundra. Everyone in camp turned out when shrill cries were heard. Into their startled view burst the spectacle of the setter with his belly to the ground while taking evasive action from a small red fox snarling at his rear. The name of the setter was changed overnight from "Pilot" to "Renard."

On or off duty every officer and airman is doing his job with the feeling that his trade ability and way he carries out his job is the standard by which to set his fellow respect. Slackers are not tolerated.

It is the boast of one squadron leader that his men keep their clothing and equipment in sucth good shape that he could call a full-dress parade on an hour's notice and have every officer and man turn out in No. 1 blues complete with full marching order, rifle and respirator.

Employees of the Cockshutt Plow Co. Ltd., which play an important part in Canada's aircraft program through manufacture of wings and parts for planes, have planned a fishing contest for this summer. Prizes for the biggest fish caught during the season are to be awarded.

U.S. Army Air Corps Needs Girl Ferry Pilots

OTTAWA, Sept. — Visiting Ottawa recently on the final leg of a personal inspection of North America's growing aerial might with Air Chief Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney of the R.A.F., Major-General Barney Giles, newly-promoted chief of the operations staff of the U.S. Army Air Corps, issued a blanket invitation to air-minded Canadian girls to enlist in the U.S. Army Air Corps as ferry pilots.

"We need hundreds of girl pilots for the job of delivering aircraft to training and operational centres," said General Giles. "We have found that they do the job better than men pilots and moreover, they release men for the more active role they are anxious to assume, combat against the enemy. There is no question of losing their Canadian citizenship. By joint agreement, citizens of any of the allied nations can enlist in the armed forces of any ally without forfeiting their right of citizenship."

General Giles said that Canadian girls with flying experience or desirous of taking the U.S. army air training for girls were welcome to address further inquiries to him at Washington, D.C. The girl ferry unit, under Jacqueline Cochran, famous U.S. woman pilot, already was 800 strong. Of these, 300 were flying. The other 500 were in training. Plans were drawn to swell this number at a rapidly expanding rate, he stated.

Women Are Tops

The U.S. chief of operations recalled that a test had demonstrated the qualities of women as ferry pilots in comparison with their male colleagues. Flying aircraft from a west coast factory to bases on the east coast, 20 girl pilots had delivered their charges safely and arrived back on the west coast two days less, on an average, than men pilots. The men's chief interest lay in combat flying, he pointed out, and the task of ferrying planes soon palled for them.

"They dropped off for a day at air stations where they had friends, or slipped across the border at El Paso for a day's fun. It's natural for men pilots to regard combat flying as the real task for which they joined and to be a bit impatient at less active roles, but I'm sold on the worth of women as ferry pilots," he explained.

University degrees were not essential, he stated. With the necessary physical and mental keeness, co-ordination, and the Canadian equivalent of a U.S. high school education, applicants might embark on the training course which would qualify them as ferry pilots, he indicated.

Women had demonstrated their worth in the giant aircraft factories across the United States and Canada, said General Giles In both countries, they did specialized types of work with greater precision than did men, fitting in particularly well with assembly-line methods of aircraft manufacture. In some Canadian plants, 53 per cent of the staffs were women. In the U.S., the highest percentage was 47 per cent. He expected this proportion to rise rapidly. In a Detroit bomber plant, the superintendent had told him he could use 20,000 more hands—all women."

Laud Canada's Effort

General Giles and Sir Christopher Courtney both indicated their enthusiasm at the tremendous strides in aircraft production and air training which they saw in their two-week sweep across the continent and back. From Washington they had flown to the west coast of the United States, visiting major aircraft plants and training centres en route. Travelling north up the Pacific Coast to British Columbia, they had come back east across Canada, inspecting plants and the R.C.A.F. stations operating under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. General Giles recalled with a smile that this time he had not visited Alaska, where, on his last visit, he personally had led a formation of U.S. bombers against a Jap-held base in the Aleutians.

By next year, the output of trained U.S. air crew will keep pace with the greatly-augmented flow of aircraft off the production lines, said General Giles. "Production has increased and is increasing," he declared. "We are carrying out a program of air crew training which includes provision for absorbing the losses which inevitably must come with an unremitting air offensive against the enemy. Within a year, U.S. aircraft production will be adequate, not only to provide aircraft for all our trained airmen, but to take care as well of Lend-Lease transfers of aircraft to Britain and Russia."

Women Needed At Once For Airforce to Release Men

the men and women could meet in nice surroundings. A great deal is also done through sports, and combined discussion groups and lectures on current events, etc., in the same way as in the recreational facilities extended by any large business or company where you have men and women working together.

Make Better Wives

I have sketched the training and life of an airwoman so that Canadians realize more fully why it is an absolute necessity to have more women in uniform. Qualifications require that they be between the ages of 18 and 45, physically fit, and without dependent children. Citizens consider it the right thing for their sons to enlist, and they should also feel that it is the right course for their daughters. I would like to add that service in the Women's Division is most excellent training for wives. We have learned discipline, and that is an admirable quality in a wife. We have learned to make sacrifices, to be adaptable, to accept change and separation, to take the knocks, and working in a man's world. I think we have learned to understand men better.

We are not in it because of the adventure, or because, as some people like to think, because it is glamorous to be in uniform. We are in it because we want to sacrifice something because it is hard work and difficult work and because we want to feel that we are helping OUR men to win this war.

Plan For Future

When you consider that the women of the Services are the future wives and mothers of the country, they come from all walks of life and from all parts of Canada, and altogether in the Services we are learning to understand each other and are thus building for the future by breaking down narrow-mindedness and provincialism. I am absolutely certain that every woman in the Service will go back to civilian life better - trained and better - equipped to either marry and settle down or to earn her own living. I feel also that there is something so much bigger than just training all these women for service during the war. By vision and clear thinking we can be planning now for the future, for the days that will come after this war. We demand high standards of conduct from our women, and I feel that by maintaining those standards, that they can have a tremendous influence on the attitude of the men in the services, and the outlook that these lads will have in the future.

Because many of their employees hail from Western Canada, a number of Eastern aricraft plants have established a "Western Canada Club" for social and recreational purposes.

During a battle between British and Jap pilots, this Thompson sodium-cooled aircraft valve was pierced by a 25-calibre enemy machine gun bullet. The sodium which is the coolant for the valve, drained from valve head and stem, through the bullet hole—and was blown through the engine exhaust. The tough metal held intact! Had the valve head broken off, it would have wrecked the engine and perhaps cost the life of the brave young pilot. But the Thompson valve, without the sodium coolant and with weakened stem, carried on for approximately 30,000 more air miles before its condition was discovered during a routine engine overhaul.

Nineteen thousand war workers in all Thompson plants take pride in this story of a battle-scarred valve. It is graphic proof that their energy and craftsmanship are contributing much to the cause of freedom.

Big Canadian Lancasters Thorn In Side Of Huns

AERIAL spearhead of the air armada against Nazi Germany is the Avro Lancaster four-motored heavy bomber. One of the largest airplanes in the world this 5,000 horse power armoury of the air has all the desirable features of a bombing-fighting machine and then some extensive fire power, a tremendous bomb load, speed, and for its giant size, manoeuverability on a par with far smaller planes. In the process of manufacture in Canada at Victory Aircraft Limited, Malton, Ont., the leviathan will soon be zooming through the skies in legion.

A short biography of the 30-ton British Avro Lancaster starts Dec. 17, 1942 with its conception in 1936 when the English firm received a note from the British Air Ministry, requesting designs, specifications and prices for a new bomber. Similar notes were sent to other aircraft manufacturers. The designs and specifications asked for were far ahead of what had been done up to that time. The British Air Ministry's intuition of "the shape of things to come" proved to be uncanny. The advanced design of the airplane proved to be a salient factor in the blasting of Nazi cities to-day. The Lancaster that was recently flown from England to Canada will be the working model for Canadian craftsmen to guide them in their feverish activity in producing the big bombers.

Tribute to Workers.

It can be safely considered that Canadian workmen and the Canadian aircraft industry have won their spurs by the very fact that the manufacture of this plane is being entrusted to them. Prior to this aircraft, there was the Bolingbroke, a twin-engined reconnaissance bomber made in Canada by Fairchild Aircraft in Montreal, the famed Hawker Hurricane manufactured by the Canadian Car and Foundry at Fort William and the twin-engined Hampden bomber manufactured by Canadian Associated Aircraft Ltd. These three British planes demonstrated the faith that the English had in Canadian ingenuity and work. The Lancaster contract is the vindication of that faith.

There is in some quarters, an impression that the Lancaster is a re-designed Manchester— the twin-engine bomber created by A. V. Roe & Son. Certain structural designs of the Manchester have been incorporated in the making of the Lancaster, but there the similarity ends.

A brief idea of the size of the Lancaster can be gained from the following specifications: Length overall, 69 feet 6 inches; wing span, 102 feet height (tail up), 20 feet 6 inches; wheel track, 23 feet 9 inches; total wing area, 1,300 square feet. It carries a crew of six: Captain, second pilot, air observer (navigator bomb aimer), two wireless air gunners, and an air gunner.

Making the reception of Messerschmidts and Heinkels a warm one are: Two Browning .303 machine guns in nose turret; two Brownings in dorsal turret; two more in the ventral turret (in the belly of the plane, just aft of the trailing edge of the wing) and four Browning machine guns of the same caliber in the tail turret. All turrets are hydraulically operated.

Single Controls.

A novel feature of the Lancaster is that there are no dual controls. It has been found that pilots changing positions can do so with such rapidity that the installation of dual controls would be superflous. This too has contributed to a saving in space and weight.

Another feature found in the Lancaster is the mounting of the four Rolls-Royce Merlin XX engines. These 1,175 horse-power motors are under slung on the wings; engine bearers being attached to the wing and not actually built into the wing structure as is the usual custom of design. An American plane, the Martin "Marauder" follows this design with under-slung radial engines. An advantage of attaching engines as in the Lancaster, is that, if so desired, other power plants can be installed with a minimum of difficulty. Another aero-dynamic advantage of this system of engine installation is claimed by Roy Chadwick, chief designed for the Lancaster. Aeronautical engineers maintain that the airscrew, in line with the landing edge of the wing offers the least drag. Mr. Chadwick agrees with this for top speeds, but he points out that in climbing, where the angle of incidence is changed, there occurs an earlier break-away in the wake of such obstruction that tends to increase the drag even to an ultimate stalling point. The Lancaster is easily distinguishable by these engine mountings; uncommon to most nancelle mountings, on the Lancaster they barely extend over the air foil.

Big Fuel Load

For those that have a gasoline rating of "AA" it should prove interesting to learn the fuel capacity of the Lancaster's six gasoline tanks. A total of 2,154 gallons of fuel is carried. This gasoline ultimately drives the giant of the skyways through the air at around 300 miles an hour. It is the fastest heavy bomber in the world and one of the most effective. It is claimed to have the longest range of any similar type now in production. Its armament deals with enemy interceptors and even fighters with despatch. It carries a bomb load equal to three or four Wellingtons and in fact is one of the few planes capable of bearing the new R. A. F.'s 8,000 pound bombs, the big brothers of the "block busters."

30,000 feet or more, and low-level attacks relying mainly on the element of surprise, using cloud-cover or sea-level approach.

No Small Task

Some idea of the complex character of modern fighter tasks may be gained from an outline of large-scale combined fighter and bomber operations. Several hundred fighters, with squadrons of high-speed bombers, may be engaged in one operation. For this, the program has been worked out in advance to the last detail. A time schedule for each squadron has been set, calling for split-second punctuality. All pilots, both fighter and bomber, have been carefully briefed on the part they are to play and the route and heights to which they must adhere. Fighters and bombers take off from their respective airfields, attain their allotted heights, and converge upon a given rendezvous to take up their predetermined places in the formation.

With bombers in the centre and the fighter squadrons stepped up in tiers, the "beehive" may have a sky depth of 10,000 feet and extend more than a mile horizontally. Each fighter formation high cover, rear support, close escort, etc.. — has a specific role and a duty which it will perform until the bombers have gained their objective, returned, and dispersed to their bases.

You can't expect the new after-the-war-world to change everything! But—on the day the Axis surrenders, hundreds of thousands of our young men will be expert pilots with a deep love of flying.

And plane manufacturers have plans to satisfy the demands of a new, airminded generation. The aviation division of B. F. Goodrich is working hand-in-glove with them.

It will be our job—parents, please note—to concentrate on flight safety. So far we've made some pretty important contributions.

Countless three-point landings are safely made today on B. F. Goodrich Silvertown Tires. Experienced pilots say the Silvertown cushioning tread, and all-around performance can't be beat.

Equally many turns and stops are made with B. F. Goodrich E.T. Brakes. They really offer outstanding ground control.

When that youngster of yours is up in his plane on a day that clouds over and snows, don't worry, mothers. He'll have B. F. Goodrich De Icers to see him through. They protect his wings. (For the propeller, he'll have B. F. Goodrich Feed Shoes.)

And when Junior or Dad is puttering around in the hangar back of the house, they'll be making patches and repairs on their plane with a new kind of easy-to-apply rivet, made by B. F. Goodrich. It's called a Rivnut.

All this peacetime products are vital wartime products, too. Because safety helps our pilots get to the destination safely—and back. That's what more than 80 B. F. Goodrich products for aircraft are doing right now. And they'll be doing this job afterwards, too.

Glider Fans Yearn To Build Ships

WHISPER ships is what they call gliders.

Practically every aircraft plant in Canada has its quota of glider experts and enthusiasts. Many of them are refugees from Europe where the sport—and a great postwar sport it will be in Canada — has been tops for 20 years. Today these men many of them outstanding in aviation, are helping Canada to make planes to beat the Axis. In their spare time they form gliding groups and they even build them.

Gliding in Canada, hitherto practically unknown, has received a big boost by the formation of the extension course on the subject now underway at the University of Toronto. It is a lecture course, beginning January 27 continuing for 13 weeks. Even women, some from the R.C.A.F. applied. The subjects include the history of gliding, aerodynamics and mechanics of flight, design, meteorology, instruments, training, technique and the future and legislation of gliding. In the summer the students, it is hoped, can realize their dream of soaring silently through the skies like a bird.

Among those who will give instruction are Dr. E. W. Hewson of the Department of Transport at Ottawa, W. J. Jakimiuk, chief designer of De Havilland Aircraft; W. Stepniewski, De Havilland Aircraft; T. Tarczynski and Waclaw Czerwinski, Canadian Wooden Aircraft Ltd.

Central Glider Shows.

Last September at Central Aircraft Ltd., London, Ont., government-owned aviation "hospital," was given one of the first public glider demonstrations in Canada, using a glider made in their spare time by enthusiasts at De Havilland, Toronto.

After the last war the Germans, debarred from powered aircraft, took up gliding in a big way. Many Luftwaffe pilots were glider-trained. They estimated that an experienced glider pilot could fly a battle plane after 10 hours' instruction. As a military tactic gliding was used to advantage in the invasion of Crete. It is now known that gliders are extensively used in air-borne plans of Britain and the United States.

Actually the first glider club in the world was formed in Schnectady, N.Y., in 1894. Most people have always thought the sport an expensive one. It's not. A group of 15 or 20 can get started for an initial expense of $50 to $75 each, with a small continuing monthly expense. Here's the equipment a new club would need, based on the 1941 estimates in the U.S.:

Training ship and trailer	$650
Instruments	50
Tow car (second hand)	150
Car and trailer licenses	25
Airport storage ($10 monthly)	120
	$995

NOTE THE WHEEL, it's gigantic and it is part of the huge Lancaster bombers now being built in Canada. These planes are powered by four famed Rolls-Royce Merlin engines, the only parts of the plane not made in Canada. The picture gives a good idea of the intricacy of manufacture which is involved in assembling such big craft.

Prairie Shop Produced 10,000 Props

THE largest plant in Canada manufacturing wooden aeroplane propellers has turned out its 10,000th air screw. The plant is the S. and S. Aircraft Ltd., Elmwood, Winnipeg.

Not many months ago the plant was a one-storey workshop turning out about three props a day. Today it is one of the finest plants of its type on the continent and is turning out up to 50 daily. The manufacturing technique and some of the machinery used in the plant was developed by the workers themselves.

The 10,000th propeller was gaily decorated with red, white and blue ribbon as it moved through the plant to emerge sleek and glossy and balanced to a hair's weight. It took 40 man hours, passed through the hands of 40 employees.

The wooden propellers are made from carefully selected yellow birch shipped in from Eastern Canada. Under close supervision and according to a strict formula they are seasoned in an up-to-date kiln. J. R. B. Coleman vice - president and managing director, is a forest engineer and specialist in wood utilization.

Albert Hagman, plant superintendent, has been responsible for developing some of the methods and some of the machinery used to whittle the big screws out of the rough forms.

The propellers start along the production line as rough boards. These are guled together into the general shape of the propellers. Then, gradually, they are shaped and polished. Even the paint has to be put on with extreme care to prevent throwing the props off balance.

Bomb-Aimer Holds Important Position

LONDON (R.C.A.F. News Service)—One of the most important jobs in a bomber, flying through hostile skies is that of the air bomber. He's the one you so often read about, who "dropped the 4,000 pound block-buster" on such-and-such a target. And to many dozens of young Canadian men in England, this is their task. "The Pilot," they say, "is the one who takes you there and brings you back, while you tackle the truly major assignment of the flight, the destruction of the enemy." They wouldn't swap their job.

It wasn't always thus. In the early days of the present training program in Canada, everybody wanted to be a pilot. The lads who ended up in other types of training schools were those who, for one reason or another, had "washed out" as pilots. In other words, they were disappointed boys, making the best of a second-choice job.

Then the system changed. Recruits to the Royal Canadian Air Force are put through an aptitude test, during basic training at Initial Training Schools, and immediately ear-marked for pilot, air bomber, navigator, wireless operator or air gunner. No longer does their lot fall to second-choice position in the aircraft. The test has shown that the air bomber has a valuable combination: manual dexterity and the intelligence to learn the intricate workings of that most complicated, but effective weapon, the bombsight.

Take Pride in Job

Graduates selected in this manner are turning in a much higher percentage of "better scores" than those that preceded them. Pride in their job is the answer, Air Force officials believe, and the boys have every reason to take pride in their work. After all, they're the men who do the damage; "the most dangerous men in the world." The very best pilot and navigator can't do the least bit of harm to an enemy battleship, or munitions factory, or troop concentration or submarine base. All they can do is get the air bomber into position to drop his bombs.

The air bomber is in supreme command of the aircraft, once the target is sighted. The pilot takes orders from him from then on. It is the air bomber, squinting down through his bombsight, who sees the target line up in his instrument. It's he who pushes the release and sends down a ton of death and destruction hurtling down on the enemy. It's a soul-satisfying sort of a job, and many young Canadians go out and "do their stuff" in R.C.A.F. bombers.

This new sense of responsibility has changed the attitude of recruits. An increasing number indicate "air bomber" as their first choice.

Fliers' Slang Confuses Most Civilians

By Flight Lieut. T. C. McCall, R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer, Overseas.

"Dreadful flap at Ops: Three kites missing. See if you can get me some gen on it."

This command, addressed to a newly-arrived airman would probably throw him into confusion until such time as he had succeeded in mastering the intricacies of "Rafl"—the universal language of all who fly with the R.A.F.

Translated, the request means that the operations room—nerve centre of the squadron—is concerned over the absence of three aircraft and the speaker would like some information on the matter. "Gen" is a short term used for inside information; "flap" means almost any kind of commotion or to-do, and "kites" of course, refers to aircraft.

With many Canadian fliers returning to Canada, such terms as the above are likely to find their way into the language of the younger generation. For instance, there's the expression, "Good show" which is a comment designed to cover almost any situation from shooting down three enemy aircraft to buying a new necktie. Overseas, a chap is a "type"—either good or bad. If you see a pilot with the top button of his tunic unfastened, don't chide him for sloppiness; he's a fighter pilot and as a ruggedly individualistic fellow, demands the right to express himself thus. If his cap badge, instead of glistening, is heavily tarnished and covered with verdigris, it isn't that he doesn't take pride in his uniform. Not at all. He's proud to be a coastal command or flying boat chappie whose exposure to salt water is emblazoned on his cap badge as a testimonial for all to see.

Employees of Aircraft Repair, Ltd., Edmonton, Alta., a big repair plant on the threshold to the Mackenzie Valley and the northern route to Russia via Alaska, organised their own dance orchestras.

Said to be the only one of its kind in Canada, a big bomber plant has a flood-lit production chart hanging over the main exit so that, by the steady blacking out of enemy swastikas, the workers will see the increasing effect of their mounting production. The chart was designed by the workers themselves.

One of Canada's big aircraft factories, MacDonald Brothers Aircraft Ltd., Winnipeg, has won fame all over the world for its floats which are used in Canada, Alaska, United States, New Guinea, South America and Australia. Specializing also in aircraft supplies boosts MacDonald's export business.

HugeAmphibiousCatalinas Patrol Canadian Shores

GUARDIAN of Canada's coasts and gnarled veteran of 100 flights, the great amphibian, Catalina, designated in Canada as Canso, is still unrivalled in its own class of fighting ship. The story of the part played by the Catalina in the spotting and running down of the German super battleship Bismark, in the spring of 1941 is a familiar story the world over. Not so well known however are other feats of this husky bomber.

In the early days of ferrying bombers to Britain air history was written on a flight from Bermuda to England when the sturdy Catalina displayed the ability to "take it" which has since made her famous. With both ailerons blown away by a Mid-Atlantic gale, the plane fell 17,000 feet before the pilot righted it and hurdled the white caps for the rest of the long flight to England.

The Catalina again came to the fore during one of the meetings between Churchill and Roosevelt in Washington. Important papers were required from England. The pilot, Newt Collins selected a Catalina, weather was frightful and bucking the heavy gales the whole way he delivered the documents after a sensational and thrilling crossing.

At Midway, in the Aleutians, and in other theatres of war, the Catalina has proved itself time and again and taken an almost unbelievable amount of punishment.

The first of the type built in Canada was turned out at the Boeing plant on the west coast months ago, and quite recently gained distinction by rescuing a Canadian bomber crew forced down in the Lake St. John area.

It is fitting that this great craft with is 104 foot wingspan should be the watchdog of Canada's sea lanes. It was designed by I. M. Laddon, Chief Executive Officer of Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, a graduate of McGill University.

The plane is powered by two twin wasp engines of 1,200 horsepower which can lift the 14 tons from the harbor of Halifax and send it flying across the continent

Veteran of 85 Swoops Gerry Wooll Tests Planes

A MAN who has made 85 flights over Axis territory, veteran Canadian bush pilots, a former insurance man and an Englishman who knows what it is to run from the Germans while piloting an unarmed plane — these are the men who test fly those world's fastest, Canadian-built Mosquito fighter-bombers.

Flight-Lieut. Jerry Wooll, 28, of Peterborough, is one of the service men assigned to test fly Mosquitoes. More than once in days gone by he's been forced to use his parachute and jump for his life. The first time was on an operational flight over enemy territory, but he had the good luck to land in Switzerland. He was interned there four months, after which he was exchanged. He arrived back in England last Christmas Eve. Wooll is a veteran of 85 operational flights—650 hours—over enemy territory.

He Had the Speed.

Then there is W.P.I. Fillingham, test pilot on loan from the British manufacturers of Mosquitos. On one occasion he was testing an unarmed Mosquito when a Junkers 88 came roaring down on him. "I was in a tough spot," he recalls. "That Nazi pilot had me cold. No guns. No ammunition. Just speed was all I could count on to get away. I threw the aircraft into some steep turns, then raced for a cloud at top speed. I got away safely, thanks to the Mosquito. It's a great plane."

Manager of the de Havilland test flight section is Capt. Frank Baillie, on loan from R.A.F. Ferry Command. As a bush flier he had one of the strangest jobs in Canadas' northland history—supplying caviar for the palate o fthe nation. He was co-partner in a firm which made that its business, operating from a base at Nakina to the Albany River.

Chief Test Pilot Ralph Spradbrow, a wavy-haired pilot of bush flying renown, knows Canada inch by inch after a flying career which goes back to 1916 with the Royal Flying Corps. He took his ground course at the University of Toronto.

Packing more qualities than were ever before thought possible in one aircraft—the de Havilland Mosquito has dazzling speed, exceptional range and can be used on day or night operations as a bomber, a fighter, or for reconnaissance. Only recently, the first Canadian-built Mosquitos spanned the Atlantic to fight in the Allied cause.

Lift up your eyes to the skies above Canada these days. . . . You'll see something swifter and deadlier than has ever roared into action before—the amazing de Havilland Mosquito, fastest, most manoeuvrable bomber in the world!

You, as a Canadian, can feel mighty proud that Canadian organization and engineering skill can turn out such an astonishing plane. We, of General Motors, are privileged to be taking an important hand in its production.

From GM workshops in Canada, sleek, stream-lined Mosquito fuselages and nacelles are being rolled out, in ever-increasing quantities. Alone among automobile manufacturers in the Dominion, GM is being entrusted with this precise and exacting job.

General Motors' "know-how," adaptability, and fine craftsmanship are speeding the production of many kinds of vital war equipment—trucks, tractors, guns, shells, as well as Mosquito fuselages. And GM will continue to produce these urgently-needed supplies in overwhelming numbers—knowing it takes Volume for Victory—and that "Victory is Our Business."

Cost of Financing R.C.A.F. Soars From 603 Millions To 1129 Millions In 1943

By Major the Hon. C. G. Power, P.C., M.C. Minister of National Defence for Air.

MORE than 50,000 aircrew—sufficient to man more than 15,000 combat aircraft—have been trained in Canada since the inception of the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme.

The Royal Canadian Air Force, which in four short years has expanded to a point where it is now a decisive, hard-hitting member of the Allied air forces, has taken Hitler's formula for aerial combat and hurled it back at him with a vigour that has helped turn the tide of battle.

At the session just completed, Parliament was asked for $1,129 millions to carry on R.C.A.F. operations and training in 1943-44, nearly double the $603 millions cost of the previous year, and more than the total objective of Canada's last Victory Loan, $1,100 millions.

Greatest increase was for overseas war establishment, which soared from $20 millions to an estimated $383 millions. This tremendous new undertaking was for the purpose of shouldering the capital cost of 35 overseas squadrons and ancillary units, and to assume the added responsibility of pay, allowances, clothing, and necessaries for all R.C.A.F. personnel overseas in Royal Air Force or Royal Canadian Air Force units. More than 40,000 Canadians are serving in the R.C.A.F. outside Canada at the present time.

Doubled Personnel

Reflection of the tremendous expansion of Western Hemisphere war operations is seen in the increase from $172 millions to $300 millions estimated for home war needs in 1943-44. These operations, begun in the middle of 1942, have nearly doubled the number of R.C.A.F. personnel engaged in operations in Canada.

In May, the latest figures showed that the Royal Canadian Air Force, all ranks, numbers 180,172. When this figure is coupled with United Kingdom, New Zealand, and Australian personnel in Canada, and civilians employed under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the total manpower employed by Canada in developing aerial might for the Dominion reaches more than a quarter of a million.

The air training plan in Canada has not yet reached peak production and won't for several months. When it is attained, it will continue to produce trained aircrew for the duration of the war. The Royal Canadian Air Force requires 53,000 recruits this year, exclusive of girls for the Women's Division.

Small Beginning

Under the original plan, it was intended that 74 units be put into operation. At the present time, there are 154 units with twice the capacity originally intended. Royal Canadian Air Force aircraft are flying two million miles per day under the Plan, and since the inception, they have flown nearly seven billion miles.

The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan is in its fourth year—its third birthday was December 16th, 1942—and from its schools across the Dominion are pouring Canadian Commonwealth and Allied airmen who are swelling the ranks of our sky fighting teams overseas.

The Canadian organization overseas grows day by day as the graduates pass through schools operating under the Plan. Today there are more than 30 R.C.A.F. squadrons operating in Britain, North Africa and Ceylon—before the end of the year, they will number 38. But this is not the entire picture. In addition to these Canadian squadrons, there are Canadians in 90 percent of the hundreds of R.A.F. squadrons scattered over the world's fighting fronts. In the Middle East, for instance, one complete R.C.A.F. fighter squadron operates, but R.C.A.F. men in that area number many times more than the number required to man a squadron.

HON. C. G. POWER
Minister for Air

Graduates Win Honors

In Ceylon, an R.C.A.F. squadron, operating Cataline flying boats, won the admiration and gratitude of that little island when it spotted the approach of the Jap fleet and enabled the defenders to route the attackers. In the air battle that followed, Canadian pilots attached to an R.A.F. Hurricane fighter squadron played a major role in knocking the Jap air fleet out of the skies.

In the blazing 1,000 plane raids on Germany, 1,000 members of the R.C.A.F. took part—approximately one-fifth of the raiding forces.

The blue tunic of the R.C.A.F. has become a familiar sight in every niche in the globe from frigid Alaska to sweltering Africa. They've seen action in Australia, on the battered Isle of Malta, where Canadians did their part in winning the George Cross for the people of that brave bastion in the Mediterranean. In Russia, Canadians attached to R.A.F. units helped familiarize her pilots with British war planes. Still more are with R.A.F. units in Northern Ireland.

At the top of the world, in Alaska, the R.C.A.F. has joined hands with the American forces there, taking part in many shattering raids on Japanese bases at Kiska and Attu. Canadians have been decorated for their gallantry while serving with U.S. Army Air Corps units, there.

Fly Anything

B.C.A.T.P. trained pilots, air gunners, air observers, navigators, wireless operators and flight engineers man Britain's biggest battle planes and swiftest fighters. Block-busting Lancasters, Manchesters, Halifaxes, Stirlings and Wellingtons (Wimpies the Canadians call them) daily and nightly take to the skies with R.C.A.F. crews in control; deadly Spitfires, Hurricanes, Kittyhawks, Whirlwinds and Mustangs wing into battle with R.C.A.F. pilots at the stick.

R.C.A.F. night fighters soar over Britain, knocking out with deadly accuracy enemy prowlers which venture an approach. Swift Hurribombers, in lightning low-level attacks, loose their lethal loads on Nazi industrial centres, military positions, and railways. R.C.A.F. pilots have won fame for their "trainbusting" tactics which cripple Nazi transportation facilities.

Day in and day out, R.C.A.F. crews in Hudsons, Sunderlands and Catalinas carry out endless warfare on Nazi U-boats, guard priceless convoys and batter enemy shipping.

400 Citations

The gallantry and heroism of R.C.A.F. personnel is written into the more than 400 citations accompanying decorations which have been awarded since the outbreak of the war. And with every week the list grows as more Canadians earn recognition for their valor and service.

Although a Canadian fighter squadron took part in the Battle of Britain, it was not until 1942, two years after the first R.C.A.F. squadron went into action overseas, that the R.C.A.F. issued the first official communique of its own, when R.C.A.F. activities had reached a scale that justified its own communiques.

First Bomber

A new page was added to the R.C.A.F. story on January 1st, 1943, when the first Royal Canadian Air Force Bomber Group overseas was officially formed. Under the command of Air Vice Marshal G. E. Brookes, O.B.E., its headquarters are situated in an old English country mansion in the heart of a group of Bomber Stations, from which great four and two-engined bombers wage their warfare against the enemy.

A bomber group is one of the most highly complex fighting units and Canada's own bomber group had been building up operationally during the previous two months. At one minute past midnight, January 1st, bomber stations which come under it, and had been operating under R.A.F. command, were instructed that they would take their orders from the new group headquarters.

No fanfare or ceremony accompanied the opening of the new group—it was mute testimony to the growing importance of the R.C.A.F. in World War II.

New Unit

Soon after the turn of the New Year, a further milestone in the history of Canada's junior service was laid. The Royal Canadian Air Force Army Cooperation Wing was formed. Composed of three squadrons, it had as its nucleus two of the squadrons that participated in the epic battle at Dieppe, where the air support had been described as "faultless."

The formation of the wing opened a new phase in operational flying for R.C.A.F. pilots. Flying speedy Mustangs, they carry out low-level reconnaissance patrols over enemy territory. They must be half airmen, half soldiers, and expert map readers. Each pilot spends a month with various army units—infantry, tanks and armored cars — to better understand the work of the men on the ground.

Thus displaying versatility and ingenuity for which it has justly won acclaim, the R.C.A.F. prepared itself to play another important part in the final drive for victory. When Europe proper is invaded,

R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer.

WHEN peace comes again to Canada, it will be graduation day for 125,000 members of the nation's largest vocational training school — men and women of the Royal Canadian Air Force ground crew.

Some will remain in the R.C.A.F., in numbers commensurate with the peacetime needs of the services. Others will transfer their skill and experience to the development of post-war civil aviation. Still others will return to the jobs they held in civil life.

It would seem probable, however, that the largest number will step into new posts in industry, commerce and business. Their diploma will be their honorable discharge from the R.C.A.F. ground crew, the "men without wings" who through the long years of war kept Canada's fighting aircraft flying and air force equipment in first-class condition.

Have Edge on Others

In the keen competition of civilian life, that diploma will rank high. It will be proof to prospective employers that the possessor had achieved a high degree of skill in one of the 73 Air Force trades. Rarely in pre-war Canada have employers had the opportunity of hiring men whose lives have been disciplined, and who, by the very nature of their system of training and promotion, have constantly increased their skill from the very moment of enlistment. The time will come, be it soon or late, when demobilization from the R.C.A.F. will be accepted by alert employers as evidence of ability to make good.

When Canada's youth joined the R.C.A.F., many came fresh from school. They found themselves in a new world. They belonged to a company made of the finest in Canada's manhood..... physically and mentally alert. They were men to live and laugh with. They were men to fight with and work with. When the test came, they were great companions to have along. They had what it takes. They knew their jobs.

The fact that they "knew their jobs" will make them of particular value in the post-war world.

For aircrew, of course, there will be many openings in civil aviation, which assuredly will leap ahead after the war. For aero engine mechanics and airframe fitters there will be lots of jobs maintaining the giant passenger planes aloft. In the R.C.A.F. it takes ten men on the ground to keep one man in the air, and even in peacetime this proportion is not likely to be greatly lowered.

Their training in the R.C.A.F. will help many who were skilled tradesmen before the war in their return to similar roles in civil life. Stationary engineers, stoker firemen, Diesel engine operators, journeymen plumbers and pipe fitters, entered the R.C.A.F. at trades pay. After the war they will emerge with a background of discipline, experience and standardized technique which will pay them heavy dividends in wages and advancement.

Diversified Jobs

Men who knew how to operate crawler and caterpillar type tractors; pumpmen who knew how to operate automatic water and gasoline controls, electric motors and gasoline engines added to their lore. They'll be mighty handy to have on the giant farms of the Canadian west and the orchards of the Pacific Coast, with the tremendous increase in farm machinery which the future will bring.

In the white collar classes, the R.C.A.F. will be releasing back into the channels of commerce men with exact and scientific training in stores accounting, payroll compilation, office routine, and blue print reading. There are 14 kinds of clerks in the air force, each requiring its own specialized knowledge.

In the post-war development of commercial aviation, it's obvious that aero engine mechanics will be greatly in demand. And where will better ones be found than in the R.C.A.F.? When they enlist they must have a basic knowledge of their craft. They should be well acquainted with practical problems of operating and maintaining internal combustion engines and have passable skill in working metals by hand. Preference is given those with technical school training but any eager young man, eligible for aircrew, can be mustered as an "A.E.M.-standard" if he has two years of high school or its technical school equivalent and, most important consideration of all, is keen to receive aero engine training.

His education is just beginning though. At the end of three months, he takes a trade test. If he attains over 40 per cent, he becomes a Class C "A.E.M." at higher pay. Failures are remustered to another trade at which they are likely to be more successful. After a further period of training, he takes another test. This time he must achieve 60 per cent before being placed in Class B. Again his pay is boosted. After another period he takes his third trade test. This time he must get a mark of 80 per cent before he can be placed in Class A. He is now an LAC and is elegible for promotion. Trade tests may be oral, practical, or written—usually a combination of all three. Trade test boards maintain a uniform standard of proficiency. For all airmen and airwomen who have not reached the highest grouping in their trade there are compulsory night classes at which they improve their standings.

Industry Needs Them

It should be borne in mind that

Planning Today for TO-MORROW'S AIRWAYS

Back of the Victory Drive that sparked a record output of Hawker Hurricanes, sends Avro-Ansons winging into the skies and now is concentrating on Curtiss Dive Bomber production, is a clear-eyed vision of the future ; ; ; an airways future of global dimensions with Canada as hub of inter-continental flying ; ; ; a future for which Cancar is planning and preparing so that when Victory comes, its immense accumulated resources of plant, equipment and personnel will swing without pause, into production of aircraft for world-wide passenger and cargo operation. Designs and materials are being studied, models built, tests made on a scale full worthy of the objective. For it is recognized that to-morrow's Wings over Canada will be revolutionary. Commercial flying must step in one stride from swaddling clothes to maturity. Air-minded and air-staffed, Cancar is working to that end.

WOMEN AT WAR has become a common term as the battle for life and liberty demands an all-out effort from both sexes. Corp. Doris K. Canada's airmen will be ready to spread a protective umbrella over their comrades in khaki. With a full understanding of the Army's problems, the newly-formed wing will contribute much to the ultimate success and victory.

R.C.A.F. weekly communiques give terse, concise review of their activity overseas. A typical page reads like this: "Many of our Halifax and Wellington squadrons took part in one of the heaviest attacks yet made on Germany when aircraft of Bomber Command were over Duisburg in great strength . . . a very great weight of bombs was dropped. Many fires were started and large explosions were reported . . . heavy flak was intense but weakened as the attack progressed . . . R.C.A.F. squadrons took part in large scale mining operations by Bomber Command. R.C.A.F. squadrons of Fighter Command have carried out patrols both by day and night. Army Cooperation squadrons have operated during the week. Beaufighters of an R.C.A.F. Coastal Command squadron escorted torpedo-carrying aircraft in an attack on enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast. Our Beaufighters scored many hits on escort vessels with cannon and machine-gun fire." This is but one fraction of the work done daily by R.C.A.F. personnel. The stories of their courage, resourcefulness and initiative are legend.

The story behind these achievements of the R.C.A.F. is the story of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, under which the growth and development has been made possible.

The B.C.A.T.P., born December 16th, 1939, had for a nucleus the slim frame of the peace-time R.C.A.F. The Plan called for sufficient trained men annually, for the duration of the war, "to achieve overwhelming air strength"—a stupendous job for a country unprepared for such an undertaking.

The original agreement, signed by the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, was to continue until March 31st, 1943. Almost a year before that agreement expired, the Ottawa Air Training Conference decided to extend the Plan to March 31st, 1945.

From July 1st, 1942, to March 31st, 1945, it is estimated that operation of the Plan will cost $1,500,000,000. Canada will pay 50 percent of the cost, and will continue to be the administrator, through the R.C.A.F.

The United Kingdom will pay the remaining half of the bill assisted by payments from Australia and New Zealand covering the cost of training airmen from those two countries. A large part of Britain's share of the cost will be offset by her provision of aircraft and equipment for use in training. Not only was the plan extended, but it was expanded to provide for the training of even greater numbers of

Gallant Canadian Youths Flock to Join Air Force

By FLYING OFFICER H. W. EGGLESTON

R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer

YOUNG Canadians instilled with the same courage and tenacity displayed by their fathers in the last war, are writing history in the skies as members of air crew in the R.C.A.F.

To prepare them, the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan offers today's youth training which not only fits them for duty with the R.C.A.F. in the present war, but also prepares them to take their place as useful citizens in civilian life after the war.

From the time these youths enter one of the 18 recruiting centres across Canada to apply for enlistment their service training starts. The first important step is at an R.C.A.F. recruiting centre. Here the applicant fills out the application form, outlining his qualifications receives his medical examination. If found fit for flying duties, he is then on his way to take his place in one of the air crew battling in the skies against the Axis. The next step at the recruiting centre finds the applicant taking the general classification test and code aptitude test. These tests are given to give the interviewing officer a line on the applicant's ability to absorb air training.

Where Best-Suited

If successful in hurdling this stage, the applicant is then moved on to the air crew interviewing officer, whose special duty it is to determine if the prospective recruit is fitted for air crew training from a personal angle. The officer in his interview stresses necessity of teamwork in the air crew and at the same time advises the applicant that he must be willing to serve in any capacity of air crew, whether it be one of the five categories; pilot, navigator, bomb aimer, wireless operator-air gunner, or air gunner. Providing the applicant is prepared to meet all these conditions, the interviewing officer then advises him he will be enlisted as "Standard Air Crew,' and gives him an enlistment date.

Following the necessary documentation, the applicant is ready for enlistment. This important ceremony is performed by the attestation officer, who explains conditions laid down for service with the R.C.A.F., and also administers the oath of allegiance.

Following this he is provided with transportation to one of the five manning depots located across Canada, where he begins his basic training. At these manning depots, the recruit is met at the railway depot by an R.C.A.F. non-commissioned officer and escorted to the depot, his first air force station. There the recruit finds arrangements have been made for his arrival. Within an hour of his arrival, he goes before a medical officer for a physical examination. This precaution is taken in order to determine whether or not the recruit has any communicable diseases. He is then paraded to the barracks officer, where he is issued with sheets and blankets and assigned to his particular bed in one of the huts. The recruit is now a member of Reception Wing. Generally his stay here lasts from eight to ten days. During this time his documents are checked; he is paraded to the equipment section to be outfitted, attends a series of lectures on what is expected of him in the service; takes his inoculations; receives a check at the dental clinic, and is fingerprinted and photographed.

Final Tests

The last two days in Reception Wing sees the recruit undergoing further tests. Administered by a manning personnel officer, these tests are given under ideal conditions, and the scores tabulated for the information of the air crew selection board at the manning depot. From these scores and the general qualifications of the recruit, the Air Crew Selection Board makes every attempt to fit the recruit into the category which the members agree he is best suited.

Once the recruit has been selected for a certain category in air crew, he is then transferred to Training Wing where he gets into the swing of things. Each day certain hours are allotted as drill periods to fit the recruit to take his place in the R.C.A.F., and no stone is left unturned to assure physical fitness. Capable instructors conduct these physical drill periods daily.

Once the recruit has completed this training, he is transferred to what is known as Disposal Wing. In this wing he is placed on detached duties until advice is received on his posting to an air force station for tarmac duty for a short period, or to one of the War Emergency Training Schools for a period from eight to twelve weeks to brush up on his educational subjects.

Depending on the category in air crew for which the recruit has been selected, he is now ready to start intensive training in R.C.A.F. schools located across the Dominion. If he is included in the group picked to attend an initial training school (I.T.S.) he has the opportunity of being selected as a pilot, navigator, or air bomber. At the completion of this course, he again appears before a selection board composed of high-ranking officers on the station, who place him in the category to which they think he is best suited. Through this checking system by the selection boards, the R.C.A.F. makes every effort to place each recruit in his particular spot, with the idea in mind that teamwork is the most important single requisite in air crew.

To Advanced Training

Those selected as pilots at the initial training school move on to the elementary flying school, or E.F.T.S., where they get first taste of flying and continue their ground duties, then on to the Service Flying Training School (S.F.T.S.) where their flying training is completed up to the day they complete the course and receive their Wings.

The navigators are sent to navigation school to complete their training and the air bombers go direct to the bombing and gunnery school.

at 200 miles per hour, letting down at Vancouver without a refueling stop on the way.

Now being turned out in increasing numbers the big ship can take its position five miles above the sea and cruise far over Hitler's watching sea wolves.

Not all the romance of the Catalina-Canso is tied up with its performance however. Back in the big factories in Eastern nad Western Canada thousands of earnest men and women are daily turning out the 100,000 parts which go into the craft, and assembling them into one complete job.

When one of the graceful ships lifts lightly from the ground or water, it leaves behind it a magnificent story of co-operation and industry. Approximately 100,000 man-hours of intensive work are required to build the plane and send it off. Victory loans and War Savings Certificates assume a new importance when it is realized that each of the many planes of this type required to defend Canada's shores costs approximately $250,-000.

When production of the plane started in Canada, the Dominion advanced another step on its march to a leading place among the aircraft-producing countries of the world. Officials from the United States on visits to this country have expressed amazement that such rapid strides could have been made.

by to business, and decided to become a pilot." That's about all Toronto's Captain Follett would like to have said about his flying. Pressed for taking up flying: I knew a war was coming, and I knew Canada would one day have a trans-continental air system." He says he went "several thousands of dollars in debt" before he was made a T.C.A. captain. He resigned to join the ferry command; got side-tracked to testing Mosquitos, of which he says: "There's nothing in the world to top it—just now." He considers it an honor to have been the first Canadian pilot to fly a Canadian-built Mosquito.

Ian G. Ross is de Havilland's experimental test pilot, a veteran with 14 years' experience on 55 different types of ships. He organized the war's first Atlantic delivery flight for what is now R. A.F Ferry Command.

This historic flight was in a PBY Catalina Flying Boat, the type which when made in Canada is called the Canso.

Mr. Ross was also in charge of surveying, planning and supervising the building of the seaplane base at Gander Airport, Newfoundland, and was base manager for Ferry Command.

His other experiences include bush flying in Canada and a session from 1932 to 1934 with a flying boat squadron at Singapore.

Important Man.

Important to all the Mosquito test pilots is Fred M. Staines, test flight superintendent. Born in Calgary, he joined the R.F.C. in 1916 as a mechanic, and, although he has been around aircraft most of his life, he only got as far as taking out a private licence four years ago. "Servicing planes is a lot different in this war," he says. "We used to overhaul planes in about 10 hours. We think nothing of spending 250 hours on a Mosquito, and some jobs run to 600 hours. Mosquitos are the finest aircraft we've had yet. It's tops on performance, and from my point of view requires a minimum of servicing."

They Thrilled CHICAGO

R.C.A.F. Precision Drill Squad at the recent 14th Annual Chicago Tribune Musical Festival, Chicago.

"THEY THRILLED CHICAGO, and Chicago thrilled them." So said an American who witnessed the inspiring show the Royal Canadian Air Force contingent and precision drill squad put on recently at the Chicago Tribune Musical Festival and the Air Power Show sponsored jointly by the U.S. Army Air Force Materiel Command and the Chicago Tribune.

The boys did a grand job of publicizing Canada's war effort to the United States and the Americans took them to their heart and gave them a right royal good time, too.

This visit is just another illustration of how men who join the Air Force get around and see places and people.

THE LANCASTER FLIES FOR VICTORY . .

Thanks

TO CANADIAN WORKERS

Power to dive in fast—unload—and streak out again, are amongst the Lancaster's greatest assets. These men make sure the engines are properly installed.

It's an interesting job, working on the great landing gear of the world's heaviest bomber.

Every rivet is as much a stroke for victory as is a bullet fired in battle. Look at these young girls team uo on the line . . . interested and happy.

A month ago we christened the first Canadian-built Lancaster . . . one of the world's mightiest bombers. Many others will follow in the weeks to come.

This Lancaster was in the air, ready for action, sixteen months after the arrival of the first blueprints. In terms of planning engineering, tooling and training manpower, that is equivalent to the construction of a cruiser fully equipped and ready to fight — by a shipyard formerly building corvettes.

This accomplishment is a glowing tribute to the energy, versatility, and determination of Canadian men and women. Almost 90 per cent of our workers were new to aircraft production. The majority had never done any kind of factory work. They came from all parts of Canada; eager to study and master new and exacting jobs. Engineers, draughtsmen, toolmakers and other specialists, devoted long hours and unbounded energy to their tasks.

We thank our workers for their co-operation . . . knowing this same spirit will produce a rapidly-growing stream of Lancasters, and hasten the day of victory.

Goodyear Engineers Turn Their Aeronautical Experience Into Many Worthy Products For Aviation

SOFT GROUND TIRE

A revolutionary new "Channel-Tread" tire was recently introduced by Goodyear as a result of advanced research and engineering to meet the air force need for a tire that would prevent bogging down on soft, small operational fields. This unique tire is now being applied to some types of aircraft to insure safe landings and take-offs under heavy loads.

ANTI-ICE TIRE

Goodyear's amazing "Ice-Grip" tire is utterly new in conception and design, with thousands of tiny, high-tensile steel springs imbedded in the tough rubber tread to provide "teeth" to bite into smooth, slippery ice. These tires are being widely used in the Arctic regions to insure quick-stopping, non-skid braking action. Goodyear research tests of the ice-grip tire reveal an important advantage of this new type of construction in providing "sure grip" traction on wet, slippery concrete runways. Goodyear's ice-tire is being made in standard sizes for many types of planes.

RUBBER LIFE RAFTS

Goodyear life-rafts are saving lives in the seven seas of the world. No longer is "over water" flying the tremendous hazard it once was. Sixty seconds after pilot and crew hit the water, they are safely afloat on their rubber raft, which provides an "island of safety" until rescue comes. Goodyear life-rafts are standard equipment on war-planes all over the world.

SELF-SEALING GAS TANKS

Right after the last war, an award was offered for the best means of preventing fires caused by bullet-punctured gasoline tanks. Goodyear engineering won the award with a self-sealing tank that was hailed as a miracle by old-time pilots and which set the standard for this type of equipment on present-day war-planes. Goodyear Canada produces a steady stream of these life-saving, bullet-seal tanks, for planes which go to battlefronts around the world.

WHEEL BRAKE ASSEMBLIES

Goodyear has a background of more than thirty years' experience in developing tires, tubes, wheels, brakes, and many other aircraft assemblies. Many baffling problems in plane construction have been solved through Goodyear's research in natural and synthetic rubbers — resulting in operational advantages that have enabled aviation to spread its wings ever wider and wider with each new development.

DEPENDABILITY ALWAYS!

Before any new Goodyear aeroplane product, design or innovation goes into actual use, it must be worthy in every respect to bear the "greatest name in rubber." Rigid laboratory and field tests, more rigorous than the unit would face under actual flying conditions, measure the ability of the product to perform its function in terms of utility, safety—and dependability.

Ground Jobs Key Positions

n virtually all air force trades here must be a firm ground work of previous experience on which to uild. An air frame mechanic, for xample, must possess an elemenary knowldge of metal work or ine carpentry, depending on wheher he is to work in metal or ood. A carpenter should be exerienced in commercial joinery ine trim work, and hand cabinet ha... A hospital cook must be bl... compile weekly diet sheets nd be able to cook meats, vegebles, and six desserts on enlistent. He must also know how to one meats and fish. And so it oes down the trades list.

An aero engine draughtsman ould be acquainted with comercial drawing, office routine, production of engineering drawgs, and elementary applied meanics. A works and buildings aughtsman must have been emoyed five years in a recognized afting office.

On enlistment, an R.C.A.F. eleccian should have a working owledge of electric motors, geneors, an... batteries. He must be e to r...d diagrams and be cape of ...iagnosing faults in cirts an... electrical apparatus. Any ing and intelligent man will be nsidered, however, if in the view t... conducting the trade tests ... the capacity to master the ricacies of volts and ohms and nsformers. The system of air ce instruction will do the rest.

For machinists, it is essential have a thorough knowledge of chine shop practice and to be ficient in the handling of es, milling machines and shas; to be able to read working wings and to understand the of micrometers, surface and th gauges. Metal workers ree two years' experience in orative metals, plus a knowe of the properties of metals. t's just the beginning of their cation as an Air Force crafts, too.

o be mustered as a photogra, the applicant must have more in the realm of photophy than snap his best girl ng on her porch steps and the film to the corner drug to be developed. He must be liar with the history and the acteristics of lenses and fil- have wide experience with rent types of cameras and printing equipment. He also understand the handling and chemistry of film development.

Trades Galore.

There are six trades in the Air Force for telephone men, all of which will lead to re-employment or a new job with the telephone companies. Wireless operators, ground crew, are brought up under Air Force auspices from boyhood. They are enlisted direct from the youth training schools across Canada. When they join the R.C.A.F. they can already send and receive Morse code at 15 words per minute and have practical knowledge of the operation and maintenance of standard radio transmitters and receivers, in addition to a general knowledge of elementary electrical and radio principles. Postwar housewives will feel perfectly safe in calling them in to take the howl out of the family radio.

If the R.C.A.F. system of turning out skilled ground crew is the greatest apprenticing task ever undertaken, so, too, is the creation of their women's division a most important step towards fitting women for business and commerce after the war. Authorities on adult education declare that all will leave the service better equipped to earn a living.

Starting out almost as an experiment, the establishment of the women's division of the R.C.A.F. has proven that women can do scores of jobs which men heretofore regarded as solely their own. Daily they are releasing airmen to fly and fight.

In some trades, such as that of photographers and wireless operators, ground, their training is almost identical with that of their male colleagues. In others, their training is along more feminine lines. Here are some of the sample tasks Canadian girls have taken over in the air force, together with a brief outline of their training.

Stenographers: The girls are given a course in shorthand, typing, and business English at recognized business colleges. The airwomen are enlisted, put on pay and allowances, and attend the schools in civilian clothes, reporting at the Manning Depot on completion of this course to take basic training. This arrangement was made to preclude opening an R.C.A.F. secretarial school. At the end of the war they will have not only their training, but also the office experience that so many stenographers could not secure in the era of business stagnation.

Clerks, Accountant: These airwomen, on completion of basic training, go to the R.C.A.F. School of Accountancy at Trenton for a six weeks' course. Most of them, particularly girls who had worked in banks, have had previous accountancy or bookkeeping experience. Others, with a mathematical bent, also take the course.

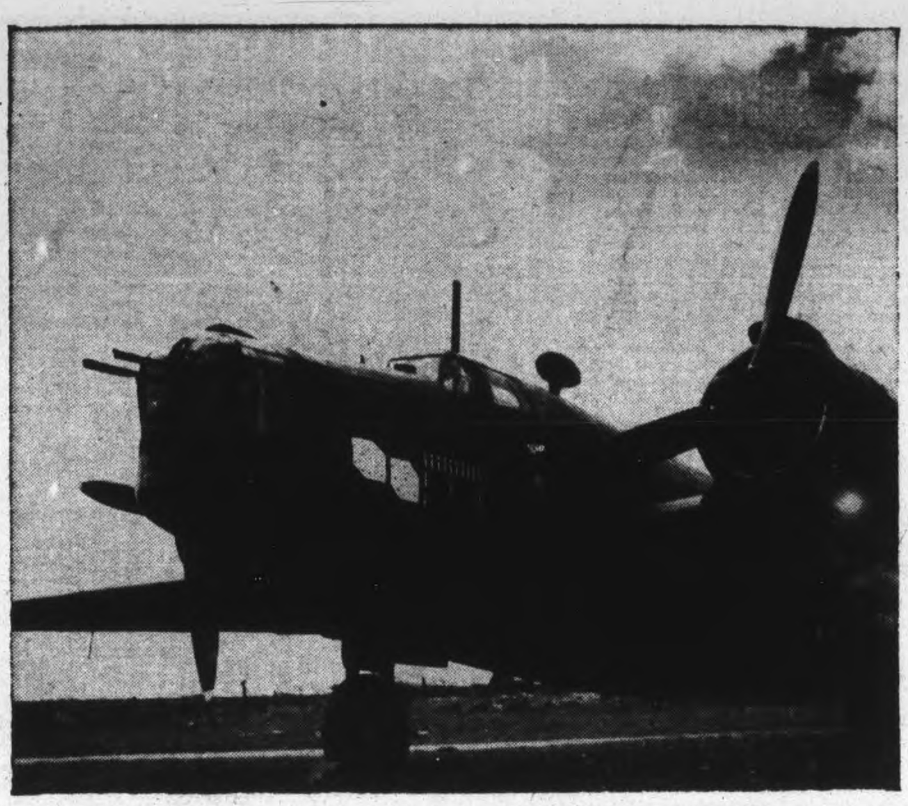
Hospital Assistants: Basic training incudes a course of six or seven weeks at the R.C.A.F. hospital in Crafts (St. Thomas). The prerequisite is practical nursing experience or St. John's Ambulance certificates. The assistants qualify as practical nurses.

Meteorological Observers: These study at the University of Toronto. It seems likely that there will be opportunity for them to continue in the work after the war, as weather reports are of great importance to fliers.

Cooks: Seven weeks at the R.C.A.F. School of Cookery, Guelph. This was formerly Macdonald Institute, and airwomen have the same instructors and classrooms as peacetime students used Meat cutting, baking, food preservation, kitchen sanitation and dietetics are included. These subjects plus experience in mass cooking, should give women with an interest in the subject excellent background for civilian jobs. As one observed: "I've never seen a good cook who couldn't get a job, and if you're good at it, it's a cinch."

Equipment Assistants: Six weeks at Trenton. This job is hard to translate into civilian terms, but the stockroom training should be useful in shops or factories.

Teleprinters: Typists with a touch suitable for teleprinting are given "contact" training at air force headquarters in Ottawa.



LUCKY SEVEN showing on the dice is the good luck charm of the crew who man this big Wellington, better known as a "Wimpy" and dubbed the workhorses of the air. The fifteen bombs painted on the front fuselage indicate the number of hops the bomber has made over enemy terrain. Most of the bombers which bring nightmares to the Germans sport some design, be it Mickey Mouse, dice or an Indian Head.

airmen. It was found that the stepped-up schedule of training could be carried out within the existing set-up, with no great new and expensive building programme necessary, except for extra living quarters and more aircraft.

More From Overseas

Under the original B.C.A.T.P., Canada provided about 80 percent of the men to be trained. Under the revised Plan, the United Kingdom will supply 40 percent, some of them from other United Nations, and the remaining 60 percent will come from Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Another development that has affected every aircrew member of the R.C.A.F. is the new policy regarding the granting of commissions, which discarded the old ratio system. As a result, there is even greater opportunity for winning a commission in the field and all those recommended and found suitable, will be commissioned. Further, it is now possible for an airman himself to apply for a commission.

Specialization

One of the important features of the revised B.C.A.T.P. is the new emphasis on specialization. Formerly, the observer was navigator, bomb aimer, aerial photographer and observer all at once Now, larger aircraft permit larger crews, and aircrew trades now include navigator, air bomber, wireless air gunner, observer (wireless telephone), air gunner and air observer. In smaller aircraft, the observer will continue to fill a many-sided job.

In training and in battle, Canada has won a distinguished place This Dominion, with only 11,000,000 people, has become the fourth greatest air power among the United Nations.

Air Shorts

The first Canadian-made Tiger Moth was delivered by de Havilland to the R.C.A.F. two years before the war. With the last one completed the middle of last year the total stood at 1,500.

The Canadian-built Mosquito bomber-fighter, speediest and deadliest plane of its type, is built almost entirely of plywood and requires fewer man hours than any other bomber to build.

GUNS LOADED AND TAPED ready for another brush with the enemy, this Canadian-built Hurricane is being refuelled and checked before take-off. These trim fighters take part in the Battle of the Atlantic, even in winter, sharing with the big bombers the hazardous task of keeping the Nazi U-boats in check. The word loaded on the wing designates the location of the machine guns.

J. McCurdy, Flight Pioneer Forty Years Ago Keeps Abreast Of Flying

IT was February 23, 1909, 32 years ago, the dour Scottish folk of Baddeck, N.S., forgot the chill in their bones as a strange contrivance of wood, cotton, and bits of metal skittered over the gleaming ice of Bras d'Or Lake and gradually lifted from the surface to hover above their heads. With vagrant shafts of sunlight glinting upon its silvery wings, the fragile machine mounted higher and higher. Soon it was above the trees that lined the shore, even above the towering tip of a lone pine that stood like a sentinel upon a rocky projection. They watched as it sped out over the lake, then turned in a graceful circle to glide to a bumpy landing not far from where they stood.

These people of an isolated Cape Breton village, to whom a sailing boat had seemed to offer the ultimate in speed and grace, had witnessed an historic event, a new and almost miraculous proof of man's ingenuity, the first flight of a heavier-than-air machine over the soil of the British Empire. But the significance of what they had seen did not strike home immediately. There was but a feeble cheer as a fur-clad man climbed down from his seat amid the maze of wires, struts, and flaps.

Led the World.

The man was John Alexander Douglas McCurdy, native son of Baddeck, the first citizen of the British Empire to make a controlled flight in an airplane. The men who gathered about him as he alighted were his companions in the Aerial Experiment Association which had been organized by Alexander Graham Bell, famed inventor of the telephone. Their names—Glen M. Curtiss F. W. "Casey" Baldwin, Lieutenant Thomas Selfridge, and Bell — go down in aviation history with that of McCurdy.

The flying machine in which McCurdy had flown was the Silver Dart, last and most notable of a series of airplanes built by the Aerial Experiment Association. Its crude engine, a mechanical marvel in that day and age, but a pitiful relic compared to the more than 1,000 horse-power monsters of to-day, now rests in a glass case in the storerooms of Canada's National Research Council laboratories.

Today John McCurdy is Supervisor, Purchasing Division, Air Craft Production Branch, Department of Munitions and Supply. Working shoulder to shoulder with Ralph P. Bell, dynamic Director General, McCurdy is applying the accumulated knowledge and experience of forty years in aviation to the all-important task of giving wings to the thousands of eager young Canadian and Empire airmen.

John McCurdy long since has laid aside the pilot's goggles. Only rarely since 1916 has he taken the controls of an airplane but in every waking moment he has been absorbed by the science of aviation to which he and his colleagues contributed so much.

He has watched aircraft evolve from the motorless man-carrying kites to giant bombers capable of carrying eight tons of high-explosives in a single load. He has watched the development of aircraft engines from makeshift assemblies of motorcycle cylinders to mechanical masterpieces a hundred times more powerful. Through peace and war, he has kept abreast of every phase of aviation.

Had First Telephone

To trace the career of John McCurdy to its true beginning, one must go back to a sunny summer's afternoon in the Nineties. A tall, black-bearded man is standing before the window of the dingy office of the Cape Breton Island Reporter in Baddeck. Inside, Editor Arthur W. McCurdy is tinkering manfully with a telephone hanging on the wall beside his desk. It was, incidentally, the first telephone in Nova Scotia. Its counterpart in the two subscriber "exchange' was in the general store operated by Editor McCurdy's father, Hon. David McCurdy, member of the Nova Scotia Legislature and Upper House for more than 40 years.

The black - bearded stranger watches impatiently for a minute or two, then enters the office.

"Having trouble?" he asks. Editor McCurdy assents in no uncertain terms. All he can hear on the line is an intermittent buzz.

"Let me have a try at it," says the stranger. In a matter of seconds he unscrews the cap of the receiver and slips off the diaphragm. In so doing he release extremely irate and dishev fly. It is but a moment's wor reassemble the receiver, and telephone works perfectly.

"How do you come to kno much about the telephone?" the bewildered editor.

"Oh, I'm just the man wh vented it," is the reply.

Out of that incident ca close and lasting friendshi tween the Baddeck editor an

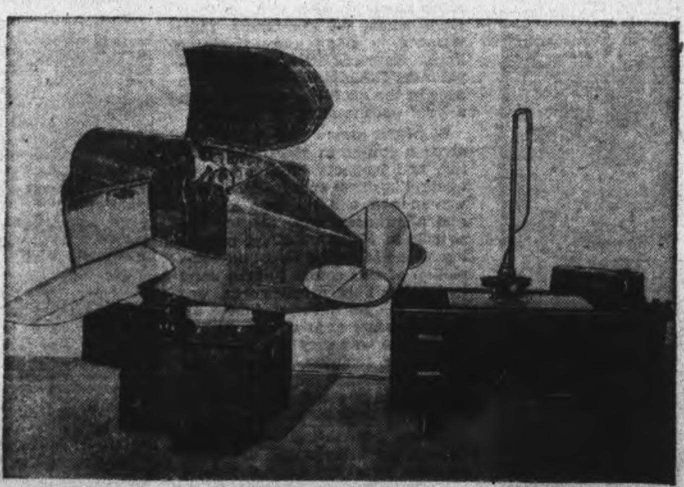
LINK AVIATION TRAINER

A mechanical device for training pilots to fly by instrument and to use radio ranges and othe modern aids to air navigation.

Instruction courses are speeded up, hazardous training flights with instructors are avoided by the use of this device by means of which the pupil is taught "blind flying" while remaining on the ground. The Link Trainer is today standard equipment wherever flying is taught.



Shown above are the trainer, a miniature aeroplane which the pilot operates in accordance with instruments on the panel, and the instructor's desk from which signals are given and the pilot's responses recorded and checked.

The Link Trainer is used by the Royal Air Force, the Royal Canadian Air Force, the United States Air Corps, the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps and by the United Nations generally. It is also standard equipment with all leading commercial airlines in training and checking their pilots.

The entire output of the Canadian and American factories making Link Trainers is now devoted to the cause of freedom for which the United Nations are fighting. The importance of air power is realized by everyone. By means of Link Trainers the United Nations are turning out more pilots and better trained pilots, who have already won air supremacy in most theatres of war and who will lead the way to final victory.

Tried Kites First

But of all those who had witnessed Langley's ill-fated attempt, at least one, Dr. Bell, was impressed. He returned to Baddeck determined to produce a man-carrying kite fitted with a motor. He needed an assistant in this work, and it was natural that he should call upon young McCurdy, whose studies in mechanical engineering were progressing. McCurdy spent his vacations in the Bell laboratory.

When he graduated in 1906, McCurdy took with him to Baddeck his college chum, F. W. "Casey" Baldwin, a grandson of Hon. Robert Baldwin, Premier of Canada before Confederation and one of the founders of the Dominion. Baldwin, too, had shown promise of great ability along engineering lines, and Bell soon availed himself of his services.

Bell found that the Canadian Government at that time was sceptical of the practicability of flying and could not be interested in his experiments, but he received more encouragement from the United States War Department. Young Lieutenant Thomas Selfridge of the First United States Field Artillery, was assigned to observe Dr. Bell's experiments and to give him every assistance. It was a natural assignment, for Selfridge had made an exhaustive study of aeronautics and was eager to play a part in Bell's work.

While his enthusiastic young assistants plunged into innumerab experiments, Dr. Bell cast abou for another man to complete his group, a man with a sound knowledge of gasoline engines. The automobile already had appeared upon the scene, and some progress had been made in development of gasoline engines, but most existing motors were too ponderous for use in aircraft.

Bell learned that there was in Hammondsport, N.Y., a young man who had achieved considerable success in the manufacture of motorcycle engines. He asked young Glen H. Curtiss to come to Baddeck, and Curtiss readily assented to contribute his talents. He retained his thriving factory at Hammondsport, where ninety workmen were engaged in turning out light, strong, motorcycle engines, but devoted most of his time and interest to the aeronautical problem.

Formed Association.

Mrs. Bell, who was overjoyed to have in her household four such fine young men as McCurdy, Baldwin, Selfridge and Curtiss, became keenly interested in their work. She suggested to her husband, "Why don't you form an association? I will put up the money to finance it."

Dr. Bell was well-to-do, but it pleased Mrs. Bell to hand to the little group a cheque for $20,000, which she derived from the sale of a parcel of land which had been left to her. With this sum as working capital, Bell and his four young associates formed themselves into the Aerial Experiment Association. It came into existence on October 1, 1907, with Dr. Bell as chairman, Curtiss as director of experiments, Baldwin as chief engineer, McCurdy as treasurer, and Selfridge as secretary.

The purpose of the association was simply to "get a man in the air." It was agreed that each member should design a machine to fly, but that all should co-operate in its construction.

In the early winter of 1907, the group realized part of their ambition. They succeeded in getting a man into the air. A huge tetrahedral kite, the "Cygnet," was built. Mounted on a flat boat, the "Cygnet" was towed over the surface of Bras d'Or Lake by a steamer. Finally sufficient speed was attained and the kite "took off," flying along a few feet above the surface of the water. Hanging through an opening in the bottom of the kite was Tommy Selfridge, first member of the group to "fly."

An Isolated Spot.

Because Baddeck was isolated, far from the railroad, and it was difficult to get the supplies and workmen they required, the group moved to Hammondsport, N.Y., making their headquarters in the Curtiss factory. For some weeks they experimented with gliders of various types. Most of these were double-decker kites, perhaps 22 to 24 feet in length and 3½ feet wide. A space was left open in the bottom surface and bamboo arm rests were built in. The pilot stood in this opening, grasping the arm rests, while his companions pushed the kite from the top of a hillside. The "pilot" ran at full speed downhill and momentum caused the glider to take off, sometimes to an elevation of 15 or 20 feet.

Landings, even in the deep snow on the hillside, were tricky and dangerous, but none of the young experimenters suffered injury more serious than sprains or bruises. The tests produced an important development. They found that a tail attached to the kite enabled the pilot to keep the glider from tipping backwards or forwards. Even with this development, the glider was controllable only by the sway and balance of the pilot's body.

Meanwhile the experimenters were constructing their first airplane, incorporating the results of their experiments to date. It was made of spruce, in the form of an oversized kite and the wings were covered with fine red silk. A horizontal rudder was added to the front of the plane to correspond with the tail. Curtiss had built a motor, ad ually a combination of several motorcycle engines, which was mounted in the approximate centre. A propeller made of steel tubing and sheet metal was attached.

The machine was christened the "Red Wing," because of its red silk wing-covering.

On March 12, 1908, the "Red Wing" took the air for the first time, with Casey Baldwin as pilot. It took off from the ice of Lake Keuka, near Hammondsport, and flew 319 feet in a straight line, about ten feet above the surface of the lake. Five days later a second flight was attempted, but the Red Wing tipped over on its side and was smashed beyond repair.

Accident a Blessing

That accident, however, was a blessing in disguise. From it came the development of ailerons, the basic principle of which made possible the whole future of aviation. The accident proved to the experimenters that while the tail and front rudder controlled the horizontal level of the plane, there was no control over lateral movement. They overcome this weakness by adding "little wings" to the tips of each wing. These were hinged, and wires leading to the pilot's seat enabled him to tip them as he desired. One small wing dipped down and the other up, providing the slight compensation of wing surface necessary to restore balance in the plane.

Two months later the group had completed the "White Wing," so named because its wings were covered with white nainsook. It was fitted with ailerons, but in other respects was much like the Red Wing. Up to this time Baldwin had made both flights, although Selfridge, Curtiss and McCurdy were equally familiar with operation of the flying machines. It fell to Baldwin's lot, also, to be the first to leave the ground in the White Wing. On May 18, 1908, he covered a distance of about 93 yards at an altitude of ten feet. Next day, Selfridge made a short flight. A little later, Curtiss set a world record by flying the White Wing 399 yards. It took him 19 seconds, so he flew at the rate of 37 miles per hour.

McCurdy's first flight was almost his last. He flew for a distance of 163 yards at a height of about 20 feet and crashed on landing. A puff of wind caused a wing of the plane to catch in the grass as the machine rolled to a stop, and the White Wing turned a complete somersault. Fortunately, McCurdy was thrown clear and was unhurt.

A Grand Success

The White Wing was succeeded by the "June Bug," designed by Curtiss. On the evening of June 25, 1908, Curtiss flew the June Bug 1,140 yards in 60 seconds. On July 4, 1908, before hundreds of spectators at Hammondsport, Curtiss flew the June Bug over a measured mile to win for the Aerial Experiment Association the Scientific American Trophy. The cup was offered under the condition that a plane must fly a distance of one mile in a straight line. It was the first official test of an airplane in the United States. There were only two other machines which had flown farther in public, Farman's and Delagrange's, although the Wrights undoubtedly had made longer flights in private.

Filled with pride over their brilliant feat, the group started work on their last airplane, the "Silver Dart." It was built on plans made by McCurdy and embodied all the best features of the earlier machines. It was made longer and narrower than the others and was designed to carry two men.

Simultaneously, the association tried a new experiment. They fitted pontoons to the June Bug converting it into the first seaplane in history. Re-christened "The Loon," the seaplane went through a score of trials, but never succeeded in lifting from the water. The pontoons were too heavy.

Killed Selfridge

While the Silver Dart was being constructed, Lieutenant Selfridge was assigned by the U.S. War Department to observe official flights by the Wright Brothers. He was a passenger in a plane piloted by Orville Wright as it took off for a flight at Washington. The machine nad attained an altitude of 80 to 100 feet when it went into a stall and crashed to earth, killing Selfridge and causing serious injury to Wright. Selfridge was the first man in the world to be killed in an airplane crash, and the tragedy had a dampening effect upon his colleagues. Incidentally, the United States military flying camp at Detroit was named Selfridge Field in memory of the young pioneer.

Perhaps McCurdy was made of unusual stuff. because he refused to permit the tragedy to hamper his desire to become a proficient pilot. He made countless flights in the June Bug and became the crack flier of the group. When the Silver Dart was completed he made a dozen test flights at Hammondsport, during which he achieved the distinction of being the first flier to make a figure eight in the air.

Flew at Petawawa

In the early winter of 1908-09, the Aerial Experiment Association moved back to Baddeck. There on February 23, 1909, McCurdy made the first airplane flight over the soil of the British Empire. Alone in the Silver Dart, he flew approximately three-quarters of a mile at an altitude of 80 feet. In his second trial, he flew about 4½ miles, making a complete circle of Baddeck Bay.

Having accomplished the original purpose of "getting a man into the air," the Aerial Experiment Association was dissolved on March 31, 1909. Dr. Bell was not interested in the commercial possibilities of aviation. Baldwin remained in the Bell laboratory to pursue hydroplane experiments. Curtiss returned to Hammondsport to concentrate upon aircraft engines.

McCurdy continued to fly in the Silver Dart. In the summer of 1909 he took the Silver Dart to Petawawa, Ontario, to demonstrate its military possibilities to officials of the Dominion Government. He made one successful flight in the Silver Dart, but the undercarriage was damaged in the landing on rough, rutted ground. A second plane was brought out. This one overturned on landing and was demolished. McCurdy considered himself fortunate to come through the smash-up with nothing worse than a broken nose.

Government officials apparently were unimpressed, and McCurdy returned to barnstorming. Alone for a time, and later in partnership with Glen Curtiss he barnstormed all over the continent for several years. He made the first airplane flight over Mexico. He was the central attraction at the first air meet ever held in Canada, at Valois, Que., in 1910. Later in the same year he went to New York to conduct experiments, during which he sent a wireless message from a plane flying over the city to the office of the New York World. In March, 1911, he piloted the plane from which were sent and received the first wireless messages. This was in Florida, this two-way plane-to-ground communication was the forerunner of the radio beam so important to modern aviation.

In February, 1914 McCurdy established a world record for long distance flight over water, when he flew from Key West, Florida, to Havana, Cuba. It was the first flight ever made over open sea on the North American continent, and was made for a $10,000 prize, which incidentally McCurdy never received.

From 1912 until early in 1914, McCurdy carried on flying experiments in and around New York. During this time he flew the first flying boat. Taking off from Long Island Sound, he made scores of flights, carrying prominent New Yorkers as passengers. It was in this period that the pusher type airplane gave way to the puller plane, with the engine and propeller mounted in front of the machine.

Back in 1909, Glen Curtiss and McCurdy had formed the Curtiss Aircraft Corp. When the Great War broke out, the Curtiss Airplane and Motors Limited was established and McCurdy set up a flying school and an airplane factory at Toronto. The British Government had shown keen interest in the development of aviation and had set up tw flying services in England, th Royal Naval Air Service and th Royal Flying Corps. McCurdy wa asked to train pilots in Canada fo the R.N.A.S.

Beginning in 1915, McCurd instructed budding pilots of th R.N.A.S. at a flying school o Toronto Bay and achieved suc success that he was asked to set u a similar school for the R.F.C When this was one, he aban doned the use of flying boa which had been used for the N.A.S. training, and combined h schools at Long Branch, west Toronto, using land planes exclu sively.

In 1916, McCurdy discove. th his eyesight was becoming sligh ly defective and that he no lon er was capable of the accura judgment necessary in take-of and landings. He gave up person instruction of pilots, but by th time had a host of capable you instructors who could carry on him. Up to the Spring of 19 when the R.N.A.S. and R.F.C. we merged by the British Governme into one organization, Royal A Force, more than 600 pilots we graduated from his schools. A ong them were such well kno Canadian fliers as Ray Collin shaw, Tom Cowley, A. K. Ty Douglas Joy, and W. S. R.C.A.F. Has 200,000 Men Fliers On Every Front

By FLYING OFFICER
J. F. HAWKEN
R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer

CANADA is an airp ower — the fourth greatest of the United Nations.

When, less than four years ago, Canada announced the plan for producing sufficient trained men annually for the duration of the war "to achieve overwhelming air strength," speculative glances were thrown in the direction of this country whose air force at that time numbered some 4,500 officers and men.

Today, with a strength of more than 200,000, the Royal Canadian Air Force fights the Axis on every battle-front. Nightly her airmen stream forth over Germany and Italy, pulverising the foundations of tyranny and totalitarianism. Daily, Canadians soar skyward against the Jap in Burma, the Italian in Italy, and the Hun over occupied Europe. Hour by hour, in all weather, coastal reconnaissance squadrons comb North Atlantic and Pacific sea-lanes, hunting down the U-boat and crippling Axis hopes for final ocean supremacy.

Behind these Canadian airmen who are carrying the Dominion's name with glory to the corners of the earth lies the organization that in itself is one of the most gigantic achievements of the entire war—the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Born Dec. 16, 1939

Born on December 16th, 1939, and shaped about the then-slender figure of the peace-time R.C.A.F., the plan was to continue until March 31st., 1943. Almost a year before that agreement expired, the Ottawa Air Training Conference decided to extend it until March 31st, 1945. During the time it has been in operation, more than 50,000 aircrew have been trained—a number sufficient to man more than 15,000 combat aircraft.

And this tremendous figure does not represent peak production. Under the original plan, it was intended that 74 units be put into operation. At present, there are 154 units operating, with twice the capacity originally intended. Across Canada, Royal Canadian Air Force aircraft are flying two million miles per day, and since the plan's inception, they have flown a total of nearly seven billion miles.

Injection of such a wealth of highly-trained personnel into the war effort of the United Nations has had tremendous effect in swinging the tide of battle in favour of the democracies. Canadians have found the air a war-medium to their liking and their deeds of fortitude and daring will emblazon the pages of history. Nearly 500 decorations for courage and devotion to duty have been conferred on R.C.A.F. personnel since the outbreak of hostilities and this figure is increasingly steadily.

Gradautes of the British Commonweath Training Plan are operating in every theatre of war. From the one fighter squadron operating abroad at the time of the Battle of Britain, the number of solely R.C.A.F. squadrons has been steadily swelling. Now there are 32 R.C.A.F. squadrons carrying the war from Britain. By 1944, the number will have increased to 38. But this represents only a fraction of R.C.A.F. strength in Britain at the present time. The majority of R.C A.F. personnel overseas are with R.A.F. squadrons, and it is very doubtful if a single operation originating in Britain against the enemy does not have Royal Canadian Air Force men numbered among its personnel.

In North Africa, a complete R. C.A.F. bomber wing smashed at the under-vitals of the Axis and a Canadian fighter squadron was with the first air forces fighting in Sicily. In addition, there are Canadians in 90 per cent. of the hundreds of R. A. F. squadrons scattered over the world's fighting fronts.

1,000 Men in Raid.

Canada proudly remembers her airmen's part in the blasting 1,000 plane raids on Germany. One thousand men, or roughly one-fifth of the attacking force, were Canadians.

Members of the R.C.A.F. are serving in Australia, many more in Malta helped that ba..ered, gallant island to win the George Cross. Still more are with R.A.F. units in Northern Ireland. Canadians fight side-by-side with the United States Air Force in Alaska, and Canadians helped the R.A.F. to make the Russians familiar with British war planes.

In Ceylon, an R.C.A.F. squadron earned the devotion and respect of all when its Catalina flying boats spotted the approaching Japanese fleet and gave the warning that resulted in its complete route.

From July 1st, 1942 to March 31st, 1945, it is estimated that operation of the Plan will cost one and a half billion dollars. Of this Canada will pay 50 per cent. and continues to be the administrator through the R.C.A.F The United Kingdom will pay the remaining half of the bill, assisted by payments from Australia and New Zealand, covering the cost of training airmen from those two countries. A large part of Britain's share of the cost is offset by her provision of aircraft and equipment used in training.

Not only has the plan extended, but it has been expanded to provide for the training of even greater numbers of airmen. It was found that the stepped-up schedule of training could be carried out within the existing set-up, with no great new and expensive building program necessary, except for extra living quarters and more aircraft.

At the outset, Canada was to

.. rapidly as he could find skilled workers. This was not the problem which confronts air craft manufacturer today because woodworkers were comparatively plentiful and few metal workers were needed. Some 600 machines were produced in McCurdy's factory during the Great War. In addition, he turned out the first two-motored plane in the history of aviation, a machine which made a tremendous impression upon the British War Office. In the latter days of the war, the plant made wings and other parts for bombing planes for the United States Navy.

Interest in aviation faltered after the Armistice in 1918. Effective as airplanes had proved to be in wartime, the public was not convinced of their practicability as a means of transportation in peacetime. In the mid-twenties, however, trans-ocean flights resulted in tremendous publicity and gave new impetus to aviation.

In 1928, McCurdy formed the Reed Aircraft Company and established a plant at Montreal for the manufacture of various types of aircraft. The company was merged with the Curtiss Co. in the following year, and continued as Curtiss-Reed Aircraft, Limited, with McCurdy as president. He held that position until the outbreak of war in September, 1939, when he resigned to again place his services at the disposal of the Government.

provide 80 percent of the men to be trained; however under the revised plan. 40 percent are supplied by the United Kingdom. some of them coming from other United Nations, and the remaining 60 percent will come from Canada. Australia and New Zealand. Canada's contribution amounts to considerably over 50 percent.

One of the newer features of the revised training schedule is a more pronounced emphasis on specialization Formerly the observer was navigator. bomb aimer. aerial photographer. and air gunner all at once Now. larger aircraft permit larger crews and aircrew trades now include navigator, bomb aimer. wireless air gunner, observer (wireless telephone). air gunner, and air observer. In smaller aircraft. however the observer will continue to fill a many-sided job.

Man British Bombers

Another recent development has affected aircrew members on every battle front. This is the policy of granting commissions which discarded the former ration system. As a result. there is now an even greater opportunity for winning a commission in the field, and all those found suitable, who are recommended, will be commissioned. Further, it is also possible for an airman himself to apply for a commission.

In every department of modern air war, B.C.A.T.P trained pilots, air gunners, observers, navigators, wireless operators and flight engineers are throwing their weight behind the United Nations. They man Britain's biggest and swiftest bombers: their hands control the guns of the most deadly air fighter-ships in the world; they fly night fighters over Britain, marking up a handsome score against Nazi night prowlers which venture an approach. Canadians, too, man the speedy Mosquitos and Hurry-bombers in the lightning low-level attacks against Nazi industrial centres, military positions and railways, and their famous "train-busting" tactics have wrought havoc along enemy supply routes in occupied France.

Developed essentially as a war-time measure the value of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will not be lost to a peace-time Canada In the air era which seems certain to be at hand. the string of newly-constructed, modern air fields. built under the plan, will assure this country of an important place in the air world of post-war years. Where formerly lay tough prairie and wilderness, great aerodromes stand Today they hum with the gigantic business of conquest—tomorrow they will become the hubs of commerce and development, stepping stones to a new heritage for a new and mighty nation.

Planes Aid Future Car

MR. and Mrs. Canada's motor car of the post war period will according to automotive experts utilize many of the discoveries and developments of the aircraft industry. One of them, the designers suggest, will be smaller motors using 100 octane aviation gasoline. Rated at about 100 horsepower, the lighter engines will develop more power per weight than our present auto power plants. The vastly increased facilities for the manufacture of high test gasoline that have been developed since the inception of the war will provide ample fuel for the new machines.

Other indications point that the bombardier's "green house" of transparent plastic will make its appearance in our new cars Windshields and roofs, the experts agree, will be made of this material. More efficient streamlining — borrowed from the wind-tunnel tests of airplanes—will have to-morrow's cars lower, less wind resistant and more comfortable Vision, in all directions will be increased by the extensive use of transparent plastic double windows —another aircraft feature — it is promised.

Coping with the critical shortage of metal. Canadian furniture companies are being pressed into service on more and more aircraft work The greater use of plywood in the aircraft industry has enabled the furniture manufacturers to swing over their production of household furniture to war time planes with a minimum of rearrangement of their plants. Last August a survey was made by the Government with a view to more production from those engaged in this particular branch of manufacture.

Aircraft RIVETS

- On the production front rivets are vital ammunition. The air gun must precede the air gunner.
- In the modern all metal aeroplane as many as ONE MILLION rivets of various kinds are required We, who are busy manufacturing rivets, salute those thousands of willing workers, especially the Canadian women who are doing their part in aircraft production.

We manufacture aluminum and aluminum alloy rivets of various specifications (anodized or not anodized) mild steel rivets and copper rivets to all standards.

PLANES-TODAY
for Tomorrow's Pilots of the R.C.A.F.

When a pilot starts his active training, his first flight will probably be made in a "Cornell", the new elementary trainer made by Fleet Aircraft, Limited. The fine qualities of the "Cornell" are such that it has been adopted as the standard primary trainer of the United Nations.

Fleet Aircraft has played an important part in the progress of Canadian aviation. Prior to 1939 the Company supplied hundreds of trainers to the R.C.A.F., Canadian light aeroplane clubs and numerous foreign countries; since the beginning of the war, Fleet Aircraft has produced many hundreds more for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Now, Fleet Aircraft is devoting all its facilities to producing the "Cornell". This aircraft marks an important step forward in elementary training and its outstanding flying qualities inspire confidence in students and instructors alike.

Endless Tests Improve Flying Garb

NO longer do Canada's fliers have to put up with freezing temperatures while patrolling Canada's coastlines, thanks to the innovation in flying garb which has been designed through experiments of over 4,000 members of R.C.A.F. air crew detailed to do this important job of protecting Canada's sea lanes.

Experience gained the hard way by these "Knights of the Air" in the earlier days of the war has paved the way. Now the R.C.A.F. boasts the finest equipment in the world, and it all resulted from "bull sessions" held after operational flights on the east and west coasts. Scenes such as outlined in the following story were instrumental in providing the ideal cold - weather flying suit.

The crew room at an east base was blue with smoke and harsh words.

"The dam thing bunches up like a blanket roll under my knees till my feet forget my heart's pumping blood to them. No wonder I freeze . . ."

"What about my hands." a WAG cut off the pilot's moan. "I can't punch a key wearing a pair of working gloves and when I have to grab for the guns you'd think they'd been whittled out of a cake of ice."

"Ever try to fish a pencil out of an inside pocket?" demanded a navigator. "Bloody point breaks every time — snags on my woollen scarf. You'd think they could rig a pencil pocket on the flying suit, maybe on the sleeve . . ."

Each Has a Peeve

"Scarf or no scarf," interrupted the mid-gunner of a Hudson, "There's a gale whips into my cage and down the back of my neck that would fast-freeze a smelt."

"And you probably did," the Flight Commander planted a foul to shock the room to silence. "Now supposing we take this questionnaire item by item and get our ideas on paper."

"Yeah," cuts in a lower-case wag, ". . . some good may come from one of these Headquarters quiz contests yet. Who knows — it might even be this one!"

MacDonald, of Regina, is the boys' instructor, and all the bicycles have wings and tail assemblies to resemble a Spitfire, camouflage and all. (R.C.A.F. Photo)

Scenes like this were being enacted all over Canada in dozens of operational crew rooms and on advanced training stations all over Canada along about the time 1941 turned into '42. Today the boys in the Liberators who blaze the trail for Atlantic convoys, the flying boat crews who prowl the Labrador fjords, and the Kittyhawk warriors who whip out over the Aleutians in search of the Jap, are benefitting in warmth and comfort and flying efficiency from every one of those noisy bull-sessions.

Here's how.

It gets cold in the front office of a Hudson, flying at 150 miles an hour, 15,000 feet up and the Arctic seas below adrift with icebergs. Mercury can drop close to zero even at this time of year, and dive to 40 below in winter.

But today the man at the controls gets an even break with the weather.

First of all it is a two-piece affair, with a separate jacket and trousers. Next the zippers—zippers in all directions. One runs diagonally up the front to close the jacket, others seal jacket pockets and map pockets on either leg, below the knee! And two more zippers zip from ankle to waist, right up the front of either trouser leg. You don't climb into these pants, you put them on like a coat.

Remember the pilot that beefed because his heavily-padded flying suit bunched at the knees? He might have added elbows, crotch and shoulders, making for akwardness and—because of binding—cold. There's no more of that now, but you've got to see the new Type E Flying Suit on the ground, where you can spring all the zippers and pull it apart, to appreciate the vast improvement it represents.

Many Changes

The same close-up inspection reveals significant changes in the helmet. Close fitting over the brow and sides of the face, making for comfort and warmth, it is roomier inside but absolutely draught free

The new goggles are probably the most radical ever made, their feature a single, wide-vision plastic window without any break over the nose. Roomy enough to be worn over corrective spectacles, the goggles are framed in a sponge rubber pad for extra protection, and this is slotted top, bottom and sides with air vents, some of which can be taped over in cold weather. The plastic "lens", when it becomes fouled by scratches, can be sprung out and replaced in a minute at a cost of a few cents for a new one.

The new issue gloves mean greater warmth for all flying fingers and their three-piece design is of special value to WAGS and navigators, who must at times have their hands free to push pencils, tinker with various instruments or pound a key. The outer leather gauntlet pulls off with the central woollen mitt, leaving the hand snugly enveloped in the rayon inner glove which will retain warmth for several minutes at extremely low temperatures.

There's probably nothing like this RCAF innovation in flying garb anywhere in the world. For the job for which it was designed —long, chilling patrols as flown on Canada's coasts—it is without doubt the finest outfit ever developed.

And no wonder. It was designed by experts—four thousand one hundred and fifty-five of them, R.C.A.F. aircrew pooling their wisdom in wide-open bull sessions.

Their findings, based on chilling experiences, were carefully recorded man by man and group by group. The results, salted down with the lore of research scientists wise in the mysteries of bodily heat distribution and textile insulation, were charted and translated into tailor's patterns.

The flying suit was built about a subject seated in a tailor's idea of a Link trainer and the first model carted 18,000 feet up an Alaskan mountain for testing. In fact, the story of how "Type E" was created is almost as unique as the suit itself.

When Canada's miniature peacetime Air Force was handed the BCATP contract to train 25,000 air crew a year, fancy trimmings like flying clothing necessarily got scant attention. What was good enough for peacetime fliers might not be good enough for Service crews, flying faster and higher every minute and blazing new shortcuts across the Arctic circle every month. But it had to do—for a time .

Two years of war passed, then in the fall of 1941 the experts were called together to form a Flying Clothing Committee. Something, it was resolved, must be done about de-icing equipment for hore-frosted fliers. Scientific facts and theories were kited and bagged with great enthusiasm, till somebody suggested "Let's go ask the men who man the planes. They ought to be able to tell us plenty about flying clothing."

They Really Beefed

They could and they did.

Out to the 4,155 aircrew went a 10-page questionnaire that pulled no punches but gave each man a chance to voice every squawk he had about helmets, goggles, suits, gloves, boots.

The boys went for it like a chance at an overseas posting. Imagine being invited to beam your pet moans direct to AFHQ. They waxed wrathful about bulky

KNIGHTS OF OLD, whose shining armour and powerful steeds made them the heroes of their day, have a counterpart in this age in the brave, carefree youths who ride the skylanes invading the sanctum of the eagle and the hawk, and who send their planes zooming through banks of fleecy cumulus clouds, ever on the alert for the foes of freedom. Two modern knights are shown above chatting before the take off. Daily thousands of others, from high school students to married men over the thirty mark flock to don the airforce blue.

22,000 People Watch For Planes

ONE of the encouraging things about Canada's Aircraft Detection Corps—now grown to 22,000 strong— is that, unlike many other wartime services, it may continue to function in the post war aviation era.

This is because, while organized primarily to sound an alarm should alien aircraft invade our skies, it is proving an admirable medium for keeping track of our own planes and narrowing down the area of search when they become lost.

Since the R.C.A.F. organized this civilian corps of observers, it has sent its regional aircraft detection officers into the most remote settlements to obtain new volunteers and to train and organize those who had already offered their services. This has been no small task, but it is now paying dividends in lives and equipment saved.

The map of Canada has been divided into sections for the purpose of aircraft detection work, and the province of Ontario falls into the area known as the Central Canada sector, which also includes some of eastern Manitoba. Within this area 9,000 observers—or within a third and a half of the total corps—scan the skies for any out of the ordinary occurrences.

Well Organized

A sector is divided up into several hundred regions, each under a regional director, and each region in turn consists of half a dozen areas, each roughly 48 square miles in size, under a chief observer.

When an aircraft detection officer from the Air Force arrives in an as yet unorganized community, he systematically sets about the job of making it air-conscious. First he visits the local telegraph offices and the telephone exchange, informing them how to handle aircraft detection reports when filed. Then he provides the newspaper editor with an appeal for recruits, and tries to obtain a ten-minute period on the local broadcasting station, if any, for a talk to out-

Slick Mosquito Bomber Fastest Plane In World

THE press party of April 29 1943 to see the Mosquito fighter and bomber in production was the first press visit to any de Havilland factory in Britain since the war began. In addition to releasing details of the structure of the aircraft the following important facts are made known for the first time.

The Mosquito is the fastest aircraft in operation in the world.

The design was not started until after the war began, so that it represents a world record in time taken from drawing board to operations against the enemy — 22 months.

It is now revealed that the Mosquito is in service in several versions, as a day and night bomber, a long-range day and night fighter, intruder et with varying roles. The basic fighter has four 20 mm cannon and four .303 machine guns, all mounted in the fuselage nose, giving highly concentrated fire. The basic bomber carries 2,000 lb. of bombs with a fuel range which brings practically the whole of Germany within its reach. It is thus the most versatile first-line aircraft in the world today.

The makers' design number for the Mosquito is DH. 98, and it is the first de Havilland war aircraft to be put into production since the DH. 9 and DH. 10 single-engined and twin-engined bombers of 1918, production of which at the main factory alone then exceeded 250 per month.

A Flying Veteran

The design team of the parent de Havilland Company in England, which was responsible for the Mosquito, is headed by Captain Geoffrey de Havilland (who designed his first machine in 1908 and created several most successful and most extensively employed types in the 1914-18 vear). Mr. C. C. Walker, Chief Engineer of the de Havilland Company and a founder-director, Mr. R. E. Bishop, Chief Designer, and Mr. R. M. Clarkson, Assistant Chief Engineer and Head of Aerodynamic Department. Those men conceived the design formula of the Mosquito in the first few weeks of the present war. The idea was to create around two Rolls Royce Merlins a small, clean bombing aircraft with usefül range and bomb load, which would be faster than contemporary fighters. The fighter version was a natural development from the bomber version. The de Havilland Company was allowed by the Air Ministry and Ministry of Aircraft Production to proceed with the design work as a private venture, and although the company were given several changes of instruction as to how the first few aircraft ordered were to be finished (which mean building and flying both fighter and bomber prototypes) the Mosquito was actually in operation duty against the enemy within 22 months from the start of design work.

Wood construction was chosen for three main reasons:

(a) to get more quickly through design and prototype stages and into production, in view of the grave urgency of the times.

(b) to tap new material supplies.

(c) to employ a fresh labour group.

There were other advantages of buoyancy, ease of repair, etc., and wooden construction lends itself remarkably to dispersed production. Furniture and other woodworking factories, large and small have turned over to Mosquito work.

In Britain alone the de Havilland Company has scores of dispersed depots and some 400 subcontractors making components. A similar situation prevails in Canada, where Mosquitoes are now beginning to roll out of the big de Havilland plant.

No aircraft in history has such world-wide dispersal of manufacture, and the Mosquito may be considered as a United Nations effort. The magnificent Rolls Royce Merlin engines are now in full production by the famous Packard Company in U.S.A. The de Havilland full-feathering constant-speed propellers are of the type created and produced by the Hamilton Company of America. The de Havilland Company in Australia also has big works producing these propellers from the Pacific war fronts.

The strategic element in Mosquito manufacture will be obvious and was made possible by the attitude of the founders of the de Havilland Company towards export trade during aviation's lean years, men who are still at the helm of the company today. They formed the Australian de Havilland establishment in 1927 and the Canadian Company in 1928. In 1929 they started a branch in India and in 1930 one in South Africa. The de Havilland South American representations were co-ordinated in 1932, the Rhodesian Company was started in 1935, and the New Zealand factory got going in 1939 De Havilland civil aircraft and Gipsy engines were used, known and serviced the world over, and from 1935 onward de Havilland propellers also were being exported widely.

Staff Was Ready

Thus the present war found in readiness a strategic group of D.H. establishments with trained engineering staffs available in Britain, North America, Australasia, Africa and India, ready-made industrial units for a world air war. And that despite the fact that throughout the interwar period—the first two decades of the company's career — its whole interest and enthusiasm had been concentrated in the difficult field of civil and commercial aviation.

The press were shown all the principal features of the Mosquito construction. The stressed-skin wing and fuselage are similar in structure to the Albatross aircraft of 1937, and their weathering durability was therefore well known from operating experience in European, Arctic and tropical climates. The wing structure was developed from the Comet racer of 1934 and the form of the Mosquito also traditionally resembles that of the Albatross and the Comet, of which it is therefore the direct descendant. Timber of other than first grade can be used. Wood has interesting features. To create a wooden airframe with the same strength factors as a metal airframe, obviously spars and other members have to be bulkier, with the result that bullet holes and flak holes represent a smaller percentage of the mass of the member they pierce. This has proved a good thing in practical warfare. Repairs are easily effected by carpenters of ordinary skill The natural buoyancy of wood is another comfort to pilots; Mosquitoes have floated for many hours.

Besides its wooden construction the Mosquito embodies other unique features, notably for simplifying manufacture. Dividing the fuselage shell longitudinally simplifies installation work. A compression-rubber type of undercarriage leg which can be made by any ordinary sub-contractor, eliminating high-precision tubing, pistons, valves, etc., has been successfully employed; it is in fact a development of the Moth undercarriage, never previously used on so large an aircraft. A simple hydraulic chassis leg made from plain tube and eliminating specialized valve gear, etc., was developed from undercarriage retraction. The use of machined parts, forgings, dural extrusions, and light alloys generally was minimised; indeed forgings were practically eliminated by the use of high-strength castings. The stub-wing location of the radiators is good aerodynamically and permits almost any degree of cabin heating without extra weight.

Air Shorts

Aircraft workers at the Fairchild Aircraft plant in Montreal still talk of things which happened during the week of the Tramways strike, such as the 15-mile hike of Guard E. Laurencelle from his home in Rosemount to the plant. By special arrangement his attendance record has been marked as if he was on time, thus leaving it unblemished.

Glider clubs are increasing rapidly among Canadian aircraft workers. In addition to the de Havilland club, first in the industry, others have organized at Massey-Harris Aircraft Division, Weston; Canadian Pacific Airlines Repair plant at New Westminster and M & C Aviation, Prince Albert, Sask.

A simple course in aircraft designing is available to all aircraft workers at Aircraft Repair Ltd., Edmonton, through a series of illustrated articles in the employees' plant bulletin. The purpose is to give every ambitious employee a chance to learn and better him or herself, according to plant officials.

Ignorant of French, McCurdy tried to explain the Canadian device of movable wing tips to Farman. Farman knew a little English and when McCurdy said "little wings," he exclaimed, "Ah, ailerons." Newspapermen picked up the word and next day it was in the papers.

MAKING HISTORY

A prominent publisher of a daily newspaper who has just completed a six-months special assignment for the Federal Government at Ottawa writes us on returning to his desk:

> "The thing that has impressed me very forcibly has been the excellence of the service maintained by The Bell Telephone Company.... When the history of this war is written, certainly one chapter must be devoted to your Company and the outstanding job it is doing."

Naturally we are very grateful for such a tribute. Although more than nineteen hundred Bell workers have gone to war, the standard of service has been kept high.

Acute shortages of vital materials have halted extension of telephone plant. Record volume of long distance calling has caused some delays, especially where busy war centres are involved. Nevertheless, we are told repeatedly that the telephone job is being well done.

Telephone operators, linemen, central office experts, engineers, are all alive to the vital importance of telephone service to Canada's war effort. They very much appreciate the co-operation of the public in avoiding peak hours, foregoing all unnecessary calls, and keeping conversations as brief as possible.

For this co-operation, and the many tributes that come to them, they say "Thank You"!

Henry Ford Plans For Post-War

OUR Aircraft Industry, soon to be bigger than the automobile industry, offers exciting possibilities for post-war flying, according to the plant magazine of M and C Aviation Co., aircraft repair factory of Prince Albert, Sask.

When Henry Ford was asked recently what he was going to do with his colossal new army airplane plant after the war, he replied: "Make planes for everybody." He is not the only prophet who believes our miles and miles of new military plane factories will turn to making "air-flivvers" in peace time, continued the article.

The family plane may never be as common as the family car. but there are thoughtful observers who are sure a boom in little airplanes will create an industry big enough to help solve post war economic problems.

There are solid reasons for expecting something of this kind. First, the popularity of light planes was already increasing rapidly when the defense program came along and nipped the boomlet. In 1939 factories produced 3,608 small planes, and production was doubled in 1940. There are 22.000 civilian planes in the air to-day. This was in the United States alone.

There will be plenty of air ports for these new sky-riders; there are 2,000 now in the United States, and more are being built at an unprecedented rate.

lying settlers. A time and place is set for a meeting of interested persons and at this meeting the local observers' corps is founded, a chief observer elected, and possibly a regional director if the settlement is important enough.

Regional directors are usually travelling salesmen, doctors, fire rangers, or others who travel extensively through a district in the course of their work.

Observers are told what to look for and how to go about reporting it.

Educational literature on aircraft types and reporting procedure is distributed. Most high schools in the country now include aircraft recognition in their course of study, and some of the best observers are teen-aged boys and girls. Main points to report are the aircraft type, i.e. single, twin or multi-engined biplane or monoplane, its course, speed, height, and time of observation. Phone calls or telegrams are sent collect to nearest Aircraft Detection Centre and given highest priority. To avoid confusion, a roster of observers is established and only one or at most two observers are on duty on any particular day or night.

Report Regular

Observers do not function within a 15-mile radius of an air port, so that only cross-country flights are reported. The passage of airliners is regularly reported, and in times of poor visibility or when radio communication between air-liners and base radio stations goes out of order, this proves a valuable aid to airline operation, the movements of a lost or overdue liner being traced from a succession of telephone calls.

One evening this year a Cornell trainer aircraft from Pembroke became lost, far from its home field. Its peregrinations were faithfully reported by alert observers in the surrounding country, and the last phone call just before darkness fell said, in effect "a single-engined aircraft passed over, headed southwest, at a low altitude, seemed to be having engine trouble, and looked as though it was preparing for a belly landing, as its undercarriage was up."

At first light next morning an air search was made in the vicinity and the aircraft was found in heavily-wooded country. Food and a sleeping bag was dropped to the pilot, and he soon afterwards was rescued.

Some remote observers are far from a telephone or telegraph station, but jot down observation in a notebook and listen carefully for radio broadcasts announcing that an aircraft is missing. When this happens they usually drop their work and get out somehow to a centre from which they can communicate.

Glamor Girls Enjoy Aircraft Industry Jobs

THE hand that has rocked, is rocking or hopes to rock the cradle, is losing none of its glamor and none of its feminity in Canada's aircraft factories.

According to Ethel Colwell, Director of Women for Canada's aircraft industry, plant managers are even putting up cretonne curtains in rest rooms in order to make the "ladies of the planes" feel right at home. Safety devices from skin lotions to advisers on personal problems are becoming as common as ten-minute rest periods morning and afternoon.

"Technical work on machines can and is being simplified by engineers," said Mrs. Colwell, "Mechanical hazards are gradually being eliminated and every precaution is being taken against poisonous substances, the lifting of heavy weights and the many other dangers common to any war factory. But there is the more difficult task of handling the personal problems of thousands of inexperienced women and girls and this is a job that aircraft industry personnel managers are devoting considerable attention to these days.

Not Used to Factory Life

Mrs. Colwell pointed out that a great majority of women workers in Canada's war plants, are not accustomed to the amosphere of a factory—"and a factory going at full blast makes quite a noise." In almost every factory, the director explained, you will find debutantes, beauty parlor operators, clerks, college graduates, girls from the farm, brides and grandmothers, waitresses and career women. For the most part they are untrained, but filled with a great enthusiasm to build planes for victory.

"Many of these women have left their homes to join the army of aircraft workers," continued Mrs. Colwell. "Many of them have children or other responsibilities. Whatever the case may be, there is frequently a problem of adjustment—and such problems require most careful and sympathetic treatment. For this reason, many aircraft plants have engaged older, more experienced women as plant "housewives" whose duties are to keep a watchful eye on the needs of women workers. Personnel women act as confidantes to workers with personal problems and every effort is made to try to solve these problems in the interests of greater production."

Most of all, however, Mrs. Colwell stresses, is the fact that women workers are not sacrificing one iota of their glamor simply because they temporarily wear overalls and put their curls up in kerchiefs.

"We are aware of the fact that our women workers want to retain their beauty, their complexion, their smooth hands. They want to work in clean surroundings and have enough pep left when they go home to take in the odd dance, take care of the children or clean up the house."

"The production of aircraft lies at the very heart of our affairs."
—Winston Churchill.

Hurricanes

coast I discovered some of my controls had been shot away," he said later. "My Hurricane had also been hit in the oil tank butI managed to climb to 700 feet and just managed to make it. I was down to 20 feet before I reached the English coast, but my plane got me back to safety."

Back at the aerodrome, the ground crews worked at top pressure to repair the lesser damaged Hurricanes and with the addition of two new aircraft the squadron was soon ready for action again. In their second raid the Hurricanes were escorted by Spitfires which helped to drive off enemy fighters.

The squadron has a bag of 11 enemy aircraft destroyed. One of their first actions was during the evacuation of Dunkirk when they shot four Messerschmidts and probably destroyed two more.

In China Too

Canadian-built Hurricanes are also in operation with the China-British fighter squadron now recording a monotony of hits on locomotives in Germany and occupied countries. The pilots call one particular railway the "China-British" railway and on the wall map in their briefing room a little flag proudly proclaims this in Chinese characters.

A section of this railway is especially well known to the commanding officer, a 22-year-old native of Knutsford, Chesire. One night he shot up two locomotives and on two other nights he attacked two more almost in the same place.

A flight commander of this squadron whose home is at Torquay has destroyed three enemy aircraft and damaged three others. One night he attacked a Dornier on an airfield and the bomber blew up.

One D.F.C. pilot officer of this group has destroyed a Heinkel and probably destroyed two Junkers in operations at night.

E-boats and a 100 foot cabin cruiser which a pilot came upon in the moonlight off the French coast have been other targets for squadrons riding Canadian-built Hurricanes.

Speedy Mosquito Plane Pride of Sky Fighters

BECAUSE of its skimming, twisting, zooming flight, the sobriquet "Mosquito" has been bestowed on Britain's fabulous all-purpose plane. Esteemed by aviation intellectuals as one of the most deadly, fastest aircraft in existence, the "Mosquito," now being produced by the DeHavilland Aircraft of Canada Limited at Malton, has added a rowel to the aircraft industry's spur in producing top flight aircraft for active battle duty on the world's battle fronts.

Canada, a few years ago was practically a non-plane producing country. In the short span of the war years, elementary trainers, advanced trainers, the Hurricane, the Bolingbroke, then the Curtiss dive-bomber, the Catalina, have been, or are in the process of manufacture. Now with the hush-hush, buzzing, "Mosquito," she has found herself in a niche in the world of aircraft production for the fighting forces of a dozen nations.

Surprised Pilots

The "Mosquito" on making its initial appearance, succeeded in surprising test pilots and experts alike. Whisking through the air with the speed of a fighter, it can operate on long ranges; play the dual role of fighter-bomber, and can be used for day or night "egg laying" excursions.

With the plane's eerie speed, plus its conglomeration of other aerial attributes, an aircraft has been developed of exceptional qualities an aircraft that is astounding in its performance.

The first "Mosquito"—in preliminary trials, held in Toronto recently, took off in the orthodox fashion, then, apparently defying gravity, hung on its propellors and charged straight up into the blue. Powered by two Rolls-Royce American engines, built by Packard, it came down again—straight down—at about 500 miles per hour. From then on it demonstrated battle manoeuvres that would likely be encountered. Twisting flips and rolls, vertical banks one way then another, more power dives, roaring, skyrocket climbs. Concluding the exhibition of Canada's new plane, one engine was cut completely and the demonstration continued.

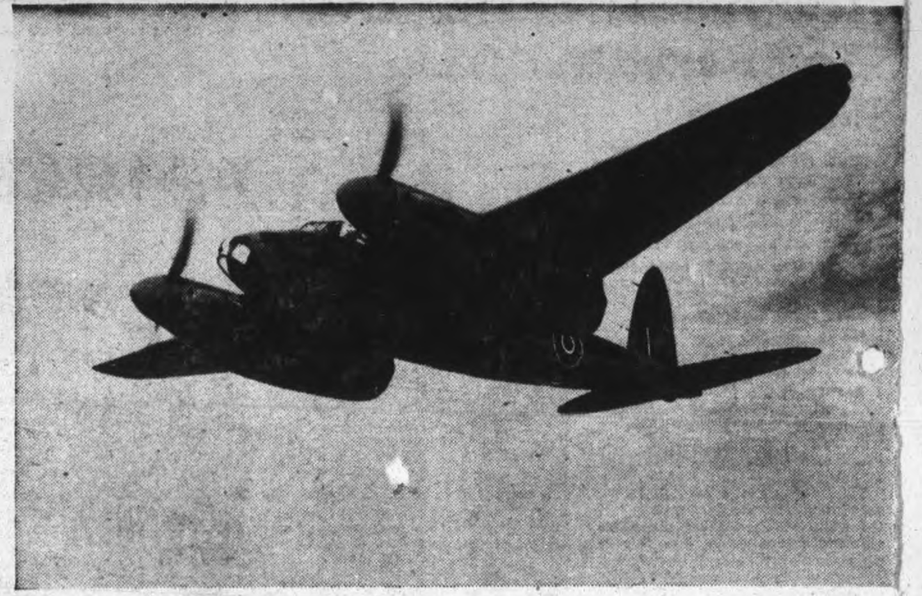
Acknowledged greatest single feature of the "Mosquito" is its climbing ability. This was continually demonstrated in the plane's trial flight and impressed aviation experts, workers and invited public with varying degrees of awe. Harassing and elusive as the little insect it is named after, it has proven a match for many of Germany's planes, including the much vaunted Folke-Wulf 190.

Wood Construction

Bonded plywood, such as is used in the "Mosquito," first started to attract attention in the wooden winged, Avro Anson twin engined trainer. Special noses were built up of plywood, then extended to much of the fuselage. In the "skeeter" wood is used extensively in its fabrication.

Ingenuity and engineering skill of Canadian technicians and aircraft workers are much in evidence in this sky scooter. With its appearance and performance, Canada can rightfully accept the laurels of one of the major aircraft production countries in the world for the making of warwings. In the days of peace to come, she should prove herself easily capable of maintaining this record in manufacturing the commercial planes of peace. With the performance of the Mosquito, that day may not be too far in the future.

"Canada has accomplished wonders in aircraft production in this war."—Canadian Aviation.



FASTEST FIGHTER-BOMBER in the world, the Canadian-made Mosquito bomber has brought new hope to the United Nations and new headaches to the Axis. Almost daily these lightning fast planes have zoomed over Berlin and other Nazi cities completing their missions of destruction or reconnaisance and returning with a minimum of loss.

suits that tore on cockpit projections, about clumsy gloves that had to be removed to adjust chin straps or reach for a handkerchief, and fogging goggles that made better blinkers than goggles even when clear.

Tests Continue.

They loudly demanded everything from tougher buttonholes to tapered trouserlegs, map pockets in suit linings to pencil pockets on sleeves, non-scratch lenses to a built-in gauntlet window so a fellow could see his wrist watch.

Back in Ottawa the committee was inundated by the flood, but pitched right in to tabulate and summarize the results. Working with the experts, they developed a new helmet, goggles and gloves for a starter.

Exhaustive tests have followed, modifications have been introduced not only in the suit but in the helmet and gloves. Precision Machine

It is a high compliment to Canadian skill and ingenuity that Canadian factories should be chosen to turn out the precision-built Helldiver.

Canadian Car and Foundry was the first and only Canadian plant to turn out single-seater combat fighters in this war, the Hurricane. Fort William-built Hurricanes have stood up with the finest all over the world.

The Helldiver, of course, is a lot bigger than the Hurricane.

Deadly Plane

A good dive bomber is considered to be the deadliest instrument of destruction in warfare today, when it comes to on-the-mark precision daylight bombing.

Hard on Ships

The risks it runs are many times greater than those run by high level, multi-motored daylight bombers, but when a Helldiver screams down toward its target and releases its bomb the pilot knows to within almost a matter of inches just where that bomb is going to smack.

It carries one of the deadliest attacks known to shipping. Even destroyer crews who man the slimmost speediest and toughest-to-hit targets afloat don't like the looks of an approaching dive bomber.

There may be debates about the respective merits of certain Allied versus certain Axis fighters and bombers, but when it comes to a comparison of dive bombers the Axis is now definitely behind the eight ball.

One of the latest attempts of Axis dive bombers to operate in Tunisia ended in almost complete annihilation of the enemy squadron before it could drop a single bomb.

Chute Packer Saves Lives

WHEN a flier has to bail out of his aircraft, he not only appreciates the parachute that does the trick of saving him, but looks on its packer as the person who threw a life preserver when he started to sink.

Flying Officer T. R. Delaney of Mount Vernon, New York, who recently jumped from a flaming aircraft, landed safely and went to the parachute section of the Royal Canadian Air Force Station at Rockcliffe, to thank the airwoman who 'brought him back alive.

She is Leading Airwoman Irene Camken, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Camken of Belleville. Formerly a fabric worker at the Cooey Metal Works, Brighton, Ont., LAW Camken enlisted in the Women's Division of the Royal Canadian Air Force fourteen months ago, and has been packing parachutes ever since. In her estimation, that is a real war job.

"You never can let yourself forget how important your work is when you're packing 'chutes," she said. "It isn't your life that depends on them It's somebody else's, and your best is the only job that's good enough."

Now transferred to another station of the RCAF, LAW Camken took along evidence of how good her 'best job' can be. It is a new identification bracelet, one shining side bearing the RCAF crest, her name and Women's Division number. The other is the side she prefers. That reads, simply—"Thanks. T. R. Delaney."

Physical handicaps are no bar to usefulness and a job to help win the war in Canadian Pacific Airlines repair plant at New Westminster, B.C. On the staff are at least 13 badly handicapped people. One is deaf and dumb, one is deaf, one is an Albino, three suffer withered or misshapen hands or arms, one is partially blind and the others are lame.

HUNS FAIL TO DISLODGE AMERICANS

Reds Nearing Dnieper Bend Gain 15 Miles Tuesday Nazi Retreat Becomes Rout

Vital Power Centre At Dnieperopetrovsk Threatened By Russian Push 350 More Communities Said Recaptured

By HENRY C. CASSIDY—Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 15—(AP).—The Soviet Army newspaper Red Star reported today a Russian night attack broke the German intermediate line defending Lozovaya in the central Ukraine as the Red Army pressed a general advance toward the Dnieper.

The autumn rains had started falling in the Ukraine, the dispatch said, bogging down roads and fields and slackening the speed of manoeuvres, but the tanks and motorized infantry continued to slog forward in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

Lozovaya, 30 miles northeast of Pavlograd and 65 miles northeast of Dnieperopetrovsk, was the last of the old Ukrainian bastions left to the Germans. It served as one of the main defences south of Kharkov during the first winter offensive and was the scene of one of their counter attacks during the second winter. It was the high water mark of the Russian counter-offensives in the south.

Red Star said the Russians were advancing toward Lozovaya along the railroad to Lozovaya, the newspaper said, taking a stand on an intermediate line on a river bank near an undesignated railroad station. Big infantry forces and numerous fire-points were detected there by Russian scouts.

Red Army men shattered the position by a night assault, the dispatch reported, and tanks rushed through the gap leading a six-mile advance.

On the left flank of these forces other Red Army units battled their way west along roads from Krasnoarmeiskoye toward Pavlograd. German tank and infantry counterattacks were reported being repulsed in that sector.

The base of the Russian line on the Sea of Azov was broadened yesterday by the expansion of the occupation around Mariupol, 12 miles west to Mangush and 12 miles north-

In the northern Ukraine, the Soviets entered the immediate defences of Nezhin after taking Kunashevka, three miles east of that railway junction 73 miles northeast of Kiev.

The Red Army lines also rolled closer to Priluki in the Northern Ukraine as the Russians pressed an enveloping manoeuvre around positions at Romny protecting Priluki from the east. Romny was outflanked from the south by a push through Lokhvitsa, 29 miles southeast of Romny and 43 miles southeast of Priluki.

Closer To Kiev.

Further south along the Desna River valley, Moscow reported, the Red Army troops smashed closer to Kiev, and one thrust placed them within thre miles of Nezhin on the Kiev-Kursk railroad 80 miles northeast of Kiev. Here the shattering force of the Soviet drive sent the Germans fleeing in disorder toward the Dnieper defence wall.

Reports of the drive toward Dnieperopetrovsk indicated advance units of the Soviet columns may be within 30 miles of the great Dnieper bend, following a gain of 15 miles announced yesterday by the Moscow communique. The Russians listed 150 towns as captured in this action.

Altogether more than 4,300 Nazi troops were reported killed and 1,000 captured in yesterday's fighting, with a total bag of 350 liberated localities. Ninety-two German tanks and 13 planes were destroyed.

Youth Is Killed Returning From Hunting Minnows

Peter Murphy, 18, of 424 Donegal street was injured fatally shortly after 5 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon when a car in which he was a passenger went out of control on the Jackson Park Hill on Park Hill Road after a front tire had blown, and rolled over in the south ditch.

Murphy after being tossed out as the car made its roll, was able to walk 170 feet up the hill toward the Jackson Park west gate before he collapsed. He died a few minutes afterward before medical aid could reach him. Dr. J. M. McCulloch who arrived on the scene shortly after pronounced life extinct.

The boy who was a son of Joseph Murphy, 424 Donegal street, was an apprentice in the machine shop of the Canadian General Electric Company and Tuesday afternoon had acompanied Donald Gardiner, 20, of 5 Cricket Place, another apprentice on a minnow-catching expedition to the Jackson Park creek, a short distance west of the park.

They were on their way home with Gardiner at the wheel of the car, owned by Wm. Mantell of the C.G.E. machine shop, when the accident occurred.

Gardiner stated that his intention had been to swing south on Monaghan Road but as they reached that street another automobile, northbound on Monaghan Road started to enter the intersection. Gardiner said that he had to swerve his car to the north side of Park Hill Road and after he had done so the front right tire blew out. As a result the car went out of control and angled in a southeasterly direction into the south ditch, two-thirds of the way down the hill. As it left the road, the vehicle, an old model roadster, made a complete side roll, stripping the top off as it went over and came to rest, badly damaged, but back on its wheels.

After the accident Gardiner was bleeding from cuts on his face but his companion did not show outward evidences of being hurt. He started to walk up the hill in the direction of the lodge just inside Jackson Park but after he had gone nearly 60 yards he collapsed at the side of the road.

Constables John Stevenson and Harold Mesley were soon on the scene and were with the youth until he died a few minutes afterward.

Gardiner, who escaped with facial injuries and bruises was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in a police cruiser by Constable Mesley. He was not badly hurt and it is expected will be released from hospital today.

Prairies Need More Help

Eastern Farmers Assist In Harvesting

By GEORGE FINLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG, Sept. 15.— (CP).— Reinforcements are needed for the battle on the food production front in Western Canada where strenuous efforts are being made to harvest crops before cold autumn winds and rain sweep the prairies.

The pay is good. It ranges from $4 to $4.50 a day for field workers.

Appeals have been sent to Eastern Canada and are being made regionally to bring out farm commandos from the stores and offices in cities and towns for part time work; from industrial plants and from farms where harvesting has been completed.

Hundreds of soldiers have been given leave—which may be extended —under farm duty plans.

Improved harvest conditions this week brought a call from Saskatchewan for more workers. More than 1,700 farmers from the East are now working in Saskatchewan fields; another 500 are en route west and in a new appeal a call is made for an additional 350 workers.

Indians have been brought from their northern reserves. Three thousand are working in Saskatchewan fields, while Manitoba had more than 500 Indian workers during the early harvest rush.

Cohen Explains Labor's Aims

MONTREAL, Sept. 15—(CP).—J. L. Cohen, recently dismissed Labor member of the National War Labor Board, said today no moment should be lost in instituting a labor policy based on co-operation with labor and proper treatment of labor.

A sound legal basis had to be established whereby trade unions could increase their ability to serve the national need. Workers must be allowed to organize into unions of their own choice. Management interference with these rights or management refusal to recognize or deal with trade unions should be declared "against the national interest" and made subject to "adequate" penalties.

"Strikes in wartime should be avoided by enacting proper machinery to carry out such provisions," said Mr. Cohen. "Equally, machinery must be available for the expeditious and efficient handling of disputes arising out of the interpretation or application of collective agreements arrived at."

Promised Justice.

A "just and effective" wage policy had to be instituted. Former Federal Labor Minister Norman McLarty, announcing inauguration of wage control in October, 1941, had said wages would be stabilized on an "extremely fair" basis. Labor sought fulfilment of that promise—nothing more and nothing less."

Referring to reports on the labor situation prepared by the board, but not yet made public, Mr. Cohen said suggestions that the reports contained inflationary recommendations are false.

"Labor approves of stabilization and of proper controls in a wartime economy but these controls must be just; they must answer to the productive needs of the nation; they must be applied so that they can assure the maximum of production, and the greatest possible equality of distribution of the goods and services which are available for public use and consumption."

Fair Distribution

An efficient policy of selective service was needed. Women in employment should be assured their right to equal economic rewards for equal work. Workers should guard against any proposal to "deprive you of your right to a full cost-of-living bonus, or against a sinister attempt to ex-

Heroic Few Honored To-day Subdued Vaunted Luftwaffe

By PAT USSHER—Canadian Press Staff Writer

Three years ago today a comparative handful of courageous R.A.F. fighter pilots—some of them Canadians—met and bested more than 500 of Germany's vaunted Luftwaffe to win the Battle of Britain and save their country from invasion. Today, with an emotion almost akin to reverence, the memory of those few was honored by the country they protected.

It was on September 15, 1940, that the Battle of Britain reached its climax as Germany threw wave after wave of bombers and fighters against southeast England in a determined endeavor to smash her defences and clear the way for invasion.

The attempt failed. Tossing her pitifully few planes into the air, Britain fought the invaders throughout the fine fall day. And when night came and the skies were cleared at least 185 enemy aircraft had fallen to the guns of the badly outnumbered Hurricanes and Spitfires. That was the official score, but many more were probably destroyed.

Turning Point.

It was the turning point of the tremendous aerial conflict that raged all through the late summer and autumn of 1940 in British skies. The men of whom Prime Minister Churchill said "Seldom was so much owed by so many to so few" inflicted such staggering losses upon the Luftwaffe, Goering decided to abandon daylight attacks in favor of the safer night raids.

Today, although the roar of planes still shakes Britain's skies, they are aircraft of the R.A.F.—bombers and

AT 5TH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN SALERNO AREA, Sept. 14.—(Delayed)— Fighting side by side by the light of a full moon throughout last night and in the early morning hours, British and American troops stopped vicious German counter-attacks which pushed with considerable force against the dead centre of the Allied bridgehead on Salerno Bay.

The enemy began the attack about nightfall, striking on the front in the area of the Sele and Calore rivers and pounding towards the junction of the rivers. Infantry units of the 16th Panzier Grenadiers attempted to open gaps in the Allied bridgehead line closely followed by Tiger tanks. Salerno Bridgehead Holding As Naval Guns Pound Nazis

Fierce Fighting Close In Rages All Night

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associate Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 15. — (AP).—Allied troops have beaten off fierce German counter attacks against the Salerno bridgehead in Italy but were forced last night to yield some ground gained earlier, in order to straighten their lines.

New support came to Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces—the strongest air attacks of the Mediterranean war and the thunder of naval guns offshore.

To-day's Allied communique disclosed that savage, close-quarter combat raged along the whole 5th Army from Salerno to Agropoli 27 miles south, with both sides throwing heavy reinforcements of troops and armor into battle.

British and Canadian 8th Army troops speeding up the west coast to support the landing drove through the village of Belvedere, 67 air miles from Agropoli, to close the gap between Allied forces to some 80 miles of coastline by land.

Both Get Support.

The German propaganda machine reported last night without confirmation that Canadians "with many tanks and motorized infantry" are engaged in the Salerno fighting. London had earlier reported, also without confirmation, that units of the Canadian 1st Army Tank Brigade were in the vicinity.

The Nazis managed to bring up more troops to the Salerno sector despite the concentrated pounding of roads by Allied aircraft, and elements of at least one more division—the German 29th motorized —were identified in action against the Allies. At least three others, the Hermann Goering, and 15th and 16th armored divisions, already were in the battle.

The land communique reported that " in some places our troops have been forced to yield ground, but new positions are being consolidated. Both sides made determined counter-attacks, it added.

The yielding of ground at nightfall straightened Allied lines and permitted consolidation of positions against expected night assaults by the enemy, it was announced.

In Allies Favor.

One officer declared that the end of the day showed the situation was "a little more in our favor, especially with the arrival of fresh reinforcements."

The 8th Army'ss advance to Belvedere represented a 25-mile push belond the Cosenza Line, which had been announced yesterday as its position.

In the Taranto district on the "heel," British forces liberated 300 Allied prisoners, including two Greek Generals. They came in contact with German forces at Gioia, about 20 miles northwest of Taranto. This was believed to have been a rear guard of the German 1st Parachute Division encountered earlier just north of Taranto.

Naval guns blasted heavily at German positions on the mainland in the Salerno area.

One cruiser alone fired 355 rounds in a single day at enemy tanks and machine-gun nests.

Small pieces of ground changed hands repeatedly in the day's fierce conflict. The Germans made their

Nazi Soldiers Guard Vatican Gates

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP).—A German-controlled broadcast from Rome today reported that "since yesterday afternoon, two German soldiers have been mounting guard in St. Peter's Square exactly on the marble line which divided the square itself from Italian territory."

The troops took their posts after negotiations among "the secretary of the German Embassy to the Holy See, and the commander of the Papal Armed Corps and some German officers," said the broadcast recorded by U.S. Government monitors. Two Italian policemen have been stationed at each of the three entrances to the Vatican, it added.

Last night the B.B.C. quoted the German radio as saying German parachute troops armed with anti-tank guns had mounted guard in St. Peter's square "to prevent by force anyone penetrating into Vatican City."

Meanwhile, the office of war information said a Berlin broadcast declared that "behind the German soldiers at entrances to the Vatican the Pope's Swiss guards have taken up posts."

The BBC said that technically St. Peter's Square is Vatican City territory and "the Germans try to explain away this encroachment on it by citing the lateran treaty between the Vatican and the Italian Government, which makes St. Peter's Square open to free use by Italians. Therefore, the Germans say, it is open to free use by Italian police— and by the German soldiers who have replaced them."

The broadcast did not explain why it had been found necessary to replace the Italian policemen, O.W.I. said.

Massive Air Attack Blankets German Positions

By WES GALLAGHER,
Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 15 —(AP) —The northwest African Air Force hurled every plane in the command over the Salerno Bridgehead from dawn yesterday to dawn to-day in the biggest air attack in the history of Mediterranean flying.

Even four-engined bombers took part in pounding the Germans positions in front of the Salerno bridgehead, with bombers of the strategic airforce alone flying more than 600 sorties.

The terrific air attack was concentrated on the few miles between Salerno and Eboli, 13 miles to the southeast.

The attack was even greater than the huge Allied effort last May 6 that broke the German will to resist before Bizerte and Tunis.

Every type of plane under the command of Lt.-Gen. Carl A. Spaatz took the air and while Wellingtons dropped 4,000-pound block busters, fighter-bombers completed the bomb range by dropping anti-personnel bombs of 100 pounds.

Fighter-bombers alone flew more than 500 sorties.

This greatest air attack in the history of the fighting in this part of the world encountered almost no opposition as the Germans used their airforce in offensive operations only.

The fight was part of the great Allied effort to save the Salerno bridgehead.

21 Hour Barrage.

The barrage of high explosives started at dawn and continued without let-up for 24 hours.

An air force spokesman added, "every bomber in the strategic air force which is normally used for long-range operations joined the tactical air force in the attack."

Six Italian Machi 202s with German markings on them were seen by the bombers but they made no attempt to halt the terrific avalanche of bombs, which deluged the German positions, roads and lines of communications feeding the bridgehead.

Planes which bombed road and dispersal areas near Sboli were in a position so the crews could see the fighting on the ground.

Medium bombers, the only planes under serious attack all day, were jumped by 12 enemy aircraft. They escaped safely, however, shooting down three of the Nazi planes.

Other formations blasted road junctions and defiles near Auletta.

14,000 Miners Strike In Britain

LONDON, Sept. 15—(CP).—Fourteen thousand coal miners are on strike in Great Britain today in protest against the imprisonment of 18-year-old Sidney Page for refusing to obey a Ministry of Labor order to work in the mines.

The strikers ignored the advice of the union president to return and said that they would remain out until the boy was released.

The strike began September 12 and has spread until 14 pits are now idle.

Under the law the Ministry of Labor is empowered to direct a person to work in a war industry.

Germans Have 40,000 Men At Salerno

Reinforcements To Allies Should Change Picture Shortly

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Difficulties such as Allied troops are encountering on the open beaches of Salerno are bound to cause worry among the folks at home, especially since casualties apparently have been severe, but there's no reason why we shouldn't regard with complete confidence the general position of our battle with the Hitlerites in an already beaten Italy.

Even if the 5th Army units had to withdraw entirely from Salerno, as the lying German propaganda machine yesterday said they were doing, it wouldn't represent a major defeat from the standpoint of the Italian operations as a whole. It would be a nasty but not a vital setback.

The Nazis have no expectation whatever of preventing Allied occupation of Italy. Their tactics represent an act of desperation which is being carried out largely to try to restore in some degree their shattered prestige, and partly in the hope of delaying the Allies in undertaking other invasion operations.

Guns on Hills

Our troubles at Salerno haven't been due to the massing of great German strength—though we seem to have been outnumbered numerically—but to the fact that the Hitlerites were well established with artillery on the hills overlooking the landing-stages.

It doesn't take a big force to defend such admirable positions as are held by the Germans. Actually they are said to have one infantry and two mechanized divisions—or parts of divisions—in the Salerno sector. Three full divisions would represent between 35,000 and 40,000 men.

Concentration of these troops on the heights has made it extremely difficult to create a heavy attacking force from invasion units at the beachhead. However, the troops obviously have done a sizeable job, for at last reports they are holding a 24-mile beachhead and were in possession of the city of Salerno—a place of some 70,000 inhabitants.

Changed Positions

Apparently in the early stages of the fighting we did have to withdraw a unit from one point in the beachhead and send it in at another place. So far as information from Allied Headquarters goes this represents the sole excuse for Berlin's claims that we were withdrawing wholesale and were beaten. On the contrary, latest advices are that Gen. Eisenhower is pouring reinforcements into the Salerno battle and that the sea is black with transports in that area.

Meanwhile Gen. Montgomery's Eighth Army is pushing northward in two columns from the heel and toe. These columns now are something less than 100 miles from Salerno. They aren't encountering much armed resistance, although they are hampered by mines and Nazi demolitions along the highways, and they are moving so fast that they may reach Salerno in a week or so. An attack on the German rear would change the complexion of things.

Famine Stalks North Italy

Rome Sends Appeal To Farmers For Help

BERNE Sept. 15 —(AP) — The spectre of famine hangs over Rome and the Nazi-occupied cities of Northern Italy, dispatches from the Italian frontier said to-day.

Nazi authorities in Rome broadcast a proclamaiton telling the Italian people "after the treason of Badoglio and the rupture of the Treaty of Alliance between the Reich and Italy, the German military have taken Italian territory under their protection."

The proclamation admitted resistance had occurred "even in Rome" to German occupation but declared order now had been restored. It ordered all persons to deliver their fire arms to German authorities by to-day or be shot.

A Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Chiasso reported Nazi parachute troops had taken up positions in St. Peter's Square and added that the fate of Pope Pius XII and that of other high church prelates who had taken refuge in Vatican city is at present unknown.

The Rome radio last night appealed to food producers and farmers in the vicinity of the Italian capital to bring food to Rome, promising it would be used solely to feed civilians. All Rome schools have been closed indefinitely.

POWERFUL BRITISH 9th ARMY IS REPORTED ON MOVE FROM SYRIA

Believed Aiming At Greece Or Dodecanese Islands Guerillas Make New Gains

Partisans Occupy Dalmatian Coastline Along Adriatic Opposite Italy Huns And Italians Fighting In Rhodes

LONDON, Sept. 15—(CP).—Unconfirmed reports reaching London from Stockholm via Ankara today said that Britain's great 9th Army—a force which the Germans assert has been designated for an Allied drive into the Balkans—was on the move today from its Middle East bases facing the island pathway into Greece.

British military officials had no comment to make on the Ankara reports, published in the Stockholm Svenska Dagbladet, which said Gen. Sir Maitland Wilson's army had embarked for an "unknown destination."

The dispatch coincided here, however, with authentic accounts of ferment in the Balkans, of sweeping new successes by Yugoslav guerillas, and reports of fierce fighting between German and Italian troops in the Dodecanese Islands off the Turkish mainland.

The Algiers radio, in a broadcast recorded here by The Associated Press, today again forecast that "important new military developments are imminent," and it was pointed out the surrender of the Italian Navy has cleared the Mediterranean for any assault against German positions in southeastern Europe.

400-Mile Trip.

Bases of the 9th Army in Syria and Transjordania are only 400 miles from the Island of Rhodes and less than 600 miles from Crete, Axis outposts in the Mediterranean.

A summary of accounts of Balkan unrest reaching here gave this picture:

Yugoslavia—Forestalling German and Croat troops, Partisan forces reportedly have occupied more than 100 miles of the Dalmatian coastline on the Adriatic Sea opposite Italy. They were said to have seized a large area in Slovenia which previously had been occupied by Italian troops. Two divisions of Partisan troops were said to be moving toward Serbia and there were reports of large scale fighting throughout Bosnia.

Rumania — A state of "near crisis" was said to prevail with the Government of Premier Antonescu losing its control. Antonescu, in one account reaching London was reported to have refused a renewed German demand for more troops.

Bulgaria — Alarm over the capitulation of Italy was heightened throughout the country, with agitation for a break with Germany reportedly increasing.

Dodecanese Islands — Ankara dispatches to London morning newspapers said that German forces, using dive-bombers and tanks, have defeated a garrison of 40,000 Italian troops holding the islands. The town of Rhodes was said to have been bombed.

Reports from Cairo, however, said that despite great confusion caused by the Italian surrender, the Germans still have the Balkan situation well in hand and will have to be pried out of their positions by Allied force.

Approve Child Clinic At Park Hill Road

"We mustn't be materialistic in matters pertaining to public health. Our duty is to administer the best facilities we have."

Asserting that ideal at the meeting of the Board of Health last night, David G. H. Melton supported a proposal to provide a child hygiene clinic for the families of Wartime Housing area at Jackson Park.

Miss Geraldine Conley, Public Health Nurse, said that Dr. J. A. Morgan had all the equipment that would be needed for a Park Hill Road clinic. Presumably he had bought it for a similar service in North Monaghan, but the project failed to attract the families and children for whom it was intended.

"Will we go in there without a grant from Wartime Housing?" Mayor Hamilton enquired, a question that brought the proposal to the focussing point of decision. "I would," His Worship added.

"Well, I think you will be going into that area," Alderman Dutton, chairman, said to Miss Conley, thereby expressing his own assent.

Since the Park Hill Road or Jackson Park housing community came into the city from Smith township, approaches have been made to the council and Board of Health for the extension of some of the health services to the families in that rather large community of new citizens. Official reaction was briefly in the expression that if Wartime Housing wanted some extra service out there, let them pay for it. That answer was heard in the council chamber, and the members of the Board of Health likewise feel that the Wartime Housing should make some contribution to assist the Board in meeting the additional expense this work will entail.

The available equipment owned by Dr. Morgan will probably be obtained at a reasonable figure and will not amount to much, but there is also the time factor, the transfer of present work to the proposed clinic by Dr. R. A. Kelly, M.O.H., and some other member of his staff.

Mr. Melton's statement of guiding principle expressed the opinion of the Board as the discusion last night traced its sentiment. The subject came before the meeting in the renewal of a suggestion presumably from Mrs. May Thompson, counsellor for the community at Jackson Park. His resolution authorizing Dr. Kelly to proceed with the establishing a child health clinic at the Park area was unanimously adopted.

Those present last night were, Alderman Dutton, Mayor Hamilton, Mr. Melton, Dr. Kelly, Miss Conley and Welfare Officer Metheral.

Miss Conley informed the Board that an enumeration of the children in the area this week disclosed that there are 162 children of pre-school age and 53 infants.

"We get a very warm reception from the people up there," Miss Conley said. "They are glad to see us, and are anxious for an extension of our health service. We found in our survey only four families that have not had some pre-school immunization."

Mr. Kelly remarked that the new clinic would have to be held some morning in the week. However, the details were left to him.

Exchange of ideas and also of information and discussion of "mutual health problems" was the purpose of a request to the Board of Education that its nurses and Health Officer and Inspector confer some time with the Board's active representatives.

Another letter to the Board of Education suggested consideration of a series of lectures on health and especially sex, to be confined to the secondary school students. Mr. Melton said that even one lecture a year, that is one for girls and another for boys, might be adequate to meet a need which he said he considered demanded attention.

Such a board should be composed of men and women with practical knowledge and experience in relation to industrial matters.

Draft Call-up System To Be Continued

OTTAWA, Sept. 15—Army draft call regulations will not be relaxed in the wake of the home army reorganization that will cut Canadian operational forces on this continent by 20,000 it was reported here yesterday.

The Manpower Committee of the Cabinet will meet this week for a policy conference. But with the need of army reinforcements just as pressing now as it has ever been, and likely to soar as the active army is thrown in increasing numbers against the enemy in Europe, Selective Service and army authorities are confident that the callup will be maintained without downward revision.

Defense Minister Ralston in his announcement Monday of the disbanding of the 7th and 8th Divisions and the partial disbanding of the 6th Division, said that since April 4 the number of men enrolled under the N.R.M.A. averaged about 2,700 per month, of which more than 400 per month enlisted subsequently.

What he did not stress was the number called. A larger percentage enlisted immediately than enrolled in the N.R.M.A. group. The Minister's report showed that more than 5,000 per month have enlisted since April 1. Many of these undoubtedly would be volunteers in the purest sense.

But there are few officials handling manpower so unrealistic as to believe that most of the 5,000

For a few minutes the Allied line saged under the weight of the strongest German thrust of the Salerno campaign. A few Tiger tanks broke through. But the Doughboys and Tommies fighting doggedly at close quarters blunted the spearhead shortly after midnight. Then with the aid of naval guns offshore whose deep-throated roar suddenly joined in the macabre symphony, they stopped the German attack and pushed the enemy back.

Council Says Peterborough Prices Rob Lakefield Of Wood Supply

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 15.—(ENS).—Peterborough City Council's wood-buying tactics came in for some bitter criticism at the September Village Council session Monday night, high-lighted by the report of a wood trucker allegedly telling a Lakefield man enquiring the price of his wood, as he stopped on the street, that Art Metheral was paying him $18 a cord for it delivered in the city.

"That's the kind of thing that makes it impossible for citizens here to get wood at all," said Reeve Scriver. "Wood producers sail right through here for the higher prices offered by Peterborough and it looks as if our citizens may be penalized to the extent of being cold this winter, which doesn't seem right."

"Our ceiling price of $9 for softwood and $11 for hardwood curbs our buying as a council and also hits the citizens in their efforts," commented Councillor Dave Millar, who, with Councillor Fred Lawrence, had been appointed in August at a special meeting as a committee to try and buy wood for the village that a stock might be on hand for those unable to get it later in the winter.

Not Right.

"Well, if we have to use the system of buying it for whatever we can get it at, and sell it at the ceiling price, letting the taxpayers in general make up the difference, as apparently our neighbors are doing, I'm against it," interposed Councilman George Graham, and the rest of the Village Fathers nodded assent.

An attempt to have the Price Board change the ceiling so that more might be paid legally brought a belated reply that it had been referred to the Fuel Board, with no answer from them as yet.

Several of the councillors reported knowledge of limited supplies of soft and hard wood which might be bought at a price that would let the village sell it at the present ceiling and an effort will be made to purchase several hundred cords.

Chief Samis reported that the Town Hall's supply of some 25 tons of coal was in, and a proposition by William Edwards might add a bit of wood to the supply. Edwards offered to cut the dead trees in the park for half the wood he cuts—an idea the councillors favored, and they will visit the scene and mark the timber to be felled.

A request by George Harrison to cut three trees on the roadside near his place was refused on the grounds it might start a general tree-cutting demand by various other villagers.

Street Dance.

Howard Beavis, on behalf of the Lakefield Agricultural Society, asked the Council's permission to use the main street for a dance on Fair night, Wednesday, September 22 and refused to be jollied into renting the Town Hall instead—Councillor Graham and Fred Lawrence pointing out in vain that it might rain and spoil the dance. However, assent to use of the street was given provided the Department of Highways concurred as they had done in July.

The matter of tax arrears was discussed briefly, the clerk, E. H. Northey, reporting them whittled down to $2,181.50 covering back to 1938. He stated that the present year's taxes were coming in in excellent flow and the financial situation looking very bright.

Heat was ordered for the Library on Tuesday and Friday afternoons when needed and the Chief instructed to see about a small wood fire for the occasions.

More Road Work.

George Charlton reported the roads in good shape with a little patching to do yet. Stock piles will be filled before snow flies, ready for the spring, and winter sanding.

An offer to purchase the lot back of his property, by Alexander Wannamaker saw the council lower its price from $100 to $50—Mr. Wannamaker's bid, the sale to go through providing he pays any deed costs.

Starting of the painting of the Town Hall by Truman Jewell brought remarks of satisfaction by several of the council. This time the lettering and figures on the front of the building will be done in black instead of silver as aluminum paint is now off the market.

Althugh it is long past last winter the council as a whole delved deep into last winter's snow plowing costs. From bills presented it appears that agreements as to snow plowing will be made in advance this year and rates not left to the plowers themselves.

The meeting wound up on the wood question with Councillor Lawrence observing that the Federal Government seems to be able to make millions of dollars worth of war materials and set up smooth-running organizations to handle it, but when it comes to seeing that the people who are making the war materials are kept warm there seems to be no organization at all, at least very little in the way of getting wood cut.

Sitting in on the session were Reeve Gordon Scriver, Councillors Dave Millar, George Graham, Fred Lawrence and George Charlton.

Do What Your Doctor Does If Child Is Listless

Because the tongue is the upper end of the stomach and bowels, it is usually the first thing a doctor looks at when he examines a sick child. He knows that a coated tongue and bad breath is a danger signal—a warning of an upset condition below, which may lead to real illness.

Don't you take chances—look at your child's tongue and check the breath every day! And at the first sign of bad odor on the breath or a coated tongue, give Children's Own Tablets. Small, pleasant-tasting tablets made especially for youngsters from runabout age to 15 years, they are wonderfully effective in helping to clean out harmful wastes and sweeten sour, upset stomachs. No drastic weakening flush-out action like many old-fashioned laxatives have.

American's Dogged Fighting Holds Salerno Bridgehead; Casualties Believed Heavy

Hun Artillery On Commanding Heights Turns Murderous Fire On Allies Nazis Claim Americans Retreating

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 15—(AP).—The see-saw battle for the Salerno bridgehead in Italy raged on into its seventh day today with the issue still apparently in doubt as both the Allies and Germans hurled more troops into the fray in an effort to tip the balance.

(A London report today quoted a United Nations broadcast from Algiers as saying hard fighting was continuing in the Salerno sector with no change in the situation during the last few hours. The announcer said the Allies were pouring more equipment into the area.)

In the absence of official information the picture remained confused but press dispatches from the front said Lt.-Gen. Mark M. Clark's British-American 5th Army seemed to have the situation in hand at 1 p.m. after previously having yielded some ground to the fiercely counter-attacking Nazis.

These advices admitted frankly, however, that the Allies were hard-pressed by a foe that had all the advantages of position, heavy artillery fire power and terrain admirably suited for large-scale tank operations.

From heights commanding the beaches Nazi artillery was reported pouring down a murderous fire from guns ranging up to 149 millimetres on a six-mile-wide strip held by the Allies.

Have Driven Wedge.

Under cover of this fire Marshal Albert Kesselring's armored divisions apparently were trying to consolidate a wedge they had driven into the area between the Sele and Calore Rivers and to extend their line to the sea.

Press dispatches said the Allies enjoyed partial air superiority and declared the sky above the British-American lines was dark with fighter planes parrying repeated thrusts by Nazi bombers.

(The German radio said flatly Nazi tank divisions had smashed through the Allied lines on the plains of Salerno and were "engaged in breaking enemy resistance on the coasts of the sea." Strong Allied detachments, the Nazis said, have been cut off from their beachheads by the attacks.

Canadian Tanks There

(In another broadcast the German overseas news agency declared Canadians "with many tanks and motorized infantry" are engaged in the fighting swirling around the Salerno bridgehead. The broadcast added the Canadians were fighting on the "northern flank of the Allied bridgehead" and asserted they had been encircled by German counter-attacks and "now are exposed to heavy artillery fire on both flanks."

(The account claimed the Canadians had been driven back on Vietri, on the coast of the Gulf of Salerno about five miles southwest of Salerno, after they had driven west from their landing point to gain control of a plain" ....whence they might have reached Naples."

(The only other indication Canadian forces were engaged in the Salerno battle came from London Monday, where reports said it was believed the 1st Canadian Army Tank Brigade which fought in Sicily, might be with the 5th Army. No official report, however, has mentioned Canadian troops as being in action in that sector.

(Other German broadcasts described the fighting as being as bloody as that at Gallipoli in the First Great War when British forces attempted to force the Dardanelles, suffering some 100,000 casualties.

(They added the Allies were abandoning the bridgehead "in complete disorder" and said American troops were in plight after suffering 8,000 to 70,000 casualties and that the British forces had been decisively whipped. There was no confirmation of these claims.)

heaviest and most determined attempt to drive the 5th Army into the sea by sharp thrusts from the villages of Excevilla and Armoniana, situated on high ground overlooking the entire southern portion of the Allied foothold in the Sele River valley.

Hold 2 Villages

One officer described the fighting as "exceedingly bitter." The Allied troops withdrew there slightly, leaving the enemy holding the two villages, but with every prospect that equally violent combat would begin at the first light of dawn today.

With complete co-ordination never before attained by any army, navy and air force, Allied aircraft and warships joined in support of the army, and the air force threw in the full weight of its striking power which never before was concentrated on so small an area.

Hundreds of big shells were poured into Nazi positions, where troops concentrated for counter-attacks, by British and United States cruisers and destroyers steaming close inshore despite several hit-run bombing attacks and strong counter-fire from German artillery.

Despite all this, Gen. Clark's army still was confronted with a terrific fight in its efforts to expand a small bridgehead and gain fresh footholds on the high ground beyond, from which the Nazis now can command the entire beach area.

"The enemy is attacking incessantly because he realizes this is his best opportunity," the Allied officer declared. At the same time, however, reports from the front told of great confidence among the Allied forces who, he explained, "have proven that they can beat the Germans and know they can do it again."

Despite the 8th Army's rapid progress, military men said several days must elapse before Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's force could possibly reach the Salerno bridgehead and become a factor in the fighting there, particularly since it must bring up its own supplies.

In addition, the German high command undoubtedly realizes the danger of its own position, if the 8th Army reaches that area and throws its veteran warriors into support of the 5th Army. Thus it appeared likely the 8th Army would encounter even more extensive demolitions to retard it in the 80 miles of travel through rough country still ahead of it.

A substantial force including large elements of at least one German division is known to be retreating swiftly ahead of the 8th Army, but there has been no indication yet that it might turn and try to bar Gen. Montgomery's way.

Instead, it is apparently being rushed north to join the onslaughts in the Salerno area.

In the Taranto area, Italian troops were said to be continuing to assist Allied forces in extending their hold in and around the heel of Italy.

Powerful Allied reinforcements were reported landing all along the Salerno-Agropoli front. Agropoi is 27 miles south of Salerno, on the lower bend of the Gulf of Salerno.

A naval communique announced capture of the Island of Capri west of Salerno.

Allied cruisers and destroyers shelled enemy positions on the mainland throughout Tuesday.

British and Canadian 8th Army troops pushing up from the south have reached Belvedere on the west coast road, 67 air-line miles from Agropoli and about 94 air-line miles from Salerno.

The Germans were throwing a great weight of tanks into the bitter struggle around Salerno, and many were destroyed, Headquarters announced.

Rylstone Church Observes Golden Jubilee

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 15 — (ENS)—Few of the congregation of Rylstone United church can still remember the log building in which people from that district first attended worship services. The building was erected not far from the site of the present edifice, where on Sunday, members came in large numbers to join in celebrating the church's Golden Jubilee. This was the anniversary of the building of the present church which was completed on October 8, 1893, and many former members of the congregation joined the gathering that took part in the special services on Sunday.

Guest speaker of the day was Rev. J. J. Black, B.A., B.D., of Cambridge Street United church, Lindsay. Mr. Black was pastor at Burnbrae Presbyterian church from 1918 to 1924 when before Church Union the two congregations were linked together on the same circuit. Rev. Black delivered two inspiring messages, taking as his subject for the morning service, "The Church, The Body of Christ," while in the evening his theme was "The Fatherhood of God."

Special music of the day was under direction of the organist, Miss Esther Meiklejohn, and during the morning the choir rendered the anthem, "The Power of Jesus Name." Mrs. George Williams of Springbrook was the guest soloist and she sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." The evening anthem was "The Glory of God" and other special music included a duet by Misses Geraldine and Birdie Simpson of Allan's Mills who sang "Drifting Tonight," and Mr. Francis DeCarroll of Campbellford, who sang "Beside the Still Waters."

Church Re-Opened

A feature of the morning service was the brief ceremony of officially re-opening the church following its redecoration. As a part of this the present incumbent, Rev. J. R. Holden, was presented with the key to the church by Mr. Sanford Meiklejohn representing the Board of the church.

Names of former ministers of the church at Rylstone are:—Rev. Jacob Steele, 1887--1891; Rev. John Moore, 1891-1904; Rev. J. E. Smith, 1905-1912; Rev. C. C. Salisbury, 1913-1918; Rev. J. J. Black, 1918-1924; Rev. D. A. MacKenzie, 1924-1925; (After Church Union)—Rev. P. F. Gardiner, 1926-1929; Rev. H. A. Bunt, 1929-1933; Rev. H. W. Foley, 1933-1937; Rev A. W. Harding, 1937-1940; Rev. R. W. Young, 1941-1942.

Congregational Rally

On Monday evening a congregational rally, which included a varied program and refreshments, was held. Rev. J. R. Holden was the chairman and he read a number of congratulatory messages, one of which was from the Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Rt. Rev. J. R. P. Slater and another from Rev. Dr. James Semple, chairman of the Presbytery. Rev. J. R. Bick of the Seymour Circuit of the United church brought greetings from his congregation and delivered a few well chosen remarks.

Following an interesting history of the Rylstone church and community read by Rev. Holden, a male quartette from Campbellford, comprising H. M. Donald, Harold Twiff, Harold Pierce and George Lucy, sang two numbers. Lantern slides showing many places now in the news in Italy were shown by Rev. Holden who gave an interesting commentary on them. Two more numbers by the quartette and a vocal solo by Rev. Holden concluded the program.

Jap Prisoners SendWordHome

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 15 — (ENS)—Several in this district have received their second communication from sons who have been prisoners of war since the fall of Hong Kong in December, 1941.

No one was more grateful than Mrs. George Moore, who had had no word from her son since he had been taken prisoner, though a year ago she was advised in a communication from Ottawa that he was a prisoner. Following is the letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Moore from their son, Pte. Reginald Moore, who had enlisted with the Midland Regiment in 1940 and gone with the contingent to Hong Kong prior to its capture.

"Dearest Mother—I am very glad to be able at last to let you know that I am still alive and well. I hope that you are all well and healthy and happy at home. Please do not worry. Here is hoping that the war is soon over so we can get together again. The time seems to go very quickly. We pass the time by playing ball and cards. Hope dad is still working and that everything is going well at home. We are going to be allowed to write one letter a month from now on. Remember me to my friends and most of all please don't worry."

Get Card

Mrs. Redney Glenn of this town received a card from her son, Pte. Jack Glenn, who was also formerly with the Midland Regiment. He stated that he was in good health and expressed the hope that he would see his mother soon. Pte. Glenn was married shortly before he was sent to the Pacific war theatre and his wife resides in Trenton. His father, Redney Glenn, is on active service with the District Depot Band at Kingston.

CAMPBELLFORD

R.C.A.F. Unit Has 10 Approaches

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 15. — (ENS). — More advance publicity than they have ever had on a previous trip to this town paid dividends so far as the R.C.A.F. Mobile Recruiting Unit was concerned.

Visiting here with a staff under Flt. Lieut. Thomas Pryde on Tuesday afternoon and evening a total of ten applicants were interviewed. The interviews are characterized as "approaches" by the R.C.A.F. staff and though all but one of these wrote a general knowledge test, all may not successfully pass the stiff medical requirements, hence the total actual enlistments will not be known for several days

The unit fell below the quota of girls it desired to enlist here. They had previously named their objective as twelve, but only two visited the recruiting office, and one of them was under age. It was an increase, however, over their previous visit when not a single girl applied, and only five boys appeared.

Flt. Lieut. Pryde said he was pleased with the results of their visit and announced the unit would return again on October 5. In the meantime, to provide additional facilities for local people interested in joining the R.C.A.F., J. M. Ferris and Miss Eleanor Ferris have been appointed liaison officers in Campbellford.

PORT HOPE

Fenian Raid Veteran Dies

PORT HOPE, Sept. 15.—(ENS).—The death of D. J. McMillan last Saturday removed from this community one of Port Hope's oldest and most respected citizens. Mr. McMillan was 95 on Friday and had resided in Port Hope since he was twenty, coming here from South Finch, Stormont County, where he was born. He is believed to have been the last of the Fenian Raid veterans. Both he and his father were concerned in the raid.

For over forty years the late Mr. McMillan was with the waterworks in Port Hope, retiring from the position of superintendent six years ago.

On May 20th, 1872, he married Miss Jeannette Laurenceson of Quebec who had moved to Port Hope a few years earlier and died in Port Hope six or seven years ago.

He was a member of St. John's Chuarch, and Honorary member of the Orange Lodge and Honorary member of the Ex-Service Men's Club.

Mr. McMillan is survived by one brother, John A. McMillan of Oaklands, California; four sons, J. D. McMillan, W. A. McMillan and J. G. McMillan of Port Hope; J. N. McMillan of Kingston; two daughters, Mrs. Harry Mitchell, Cobourg, and Mrs. A. W. Phillips of London; one sister, Mrs. Emsley Bainton, Cut Knife, Sask.; 19 grandchildren and 9 great grandchildren.

The funeral service was held yesterday in St. John's church with the Rev. J. M. Crissal officiating. The pallbearers were George Garnett, William Carol, William Bissett, W. A. McMillan, J. D. McMillan and J. N. McMillan.

COBOURG

Terrorist Ways Not Tolerated Judge Declares

COBOURG, Sept. 15 — (ENS)—Described as a specimen of the gang tryanny which the boys are overseas fighting to prevent encroaching on the Allies' way of life, the actions of a group of Port Hope boys were the subject of sharp criticism by Magistrate R. B. Baxter in police court yesterday.

Magistrate Baxter was trying a charge of assault against Mark Burgess, 18-year-old Port Hope youth. Burgess was sentenced to 30 days in Cobourg jail.

"Our boys are overseas fighting against an order which would introduce rule by gangsters and tryanny in our country if Hitler ever came over here. Meanwhile you boys are practising methods which are something like the Gestapo. Well, we are not going to permit anything like that in this country," declared the magistrate.

Burgess told the court that he had spent two days in jail on the liquor charge to which he had pleaded guilty and said that he would keep out of trouble as he had learned his lesson.

Lectures Prisoner

"If you had learned your lesson you would have pleaded guilty to this charge instead of getting your friends here to frame up a story for you. While you had a perfect right to decline to give evidence in your own behalf, your refusal to do so, weighs against you. These boys went out looking for trouble because Smith had a fight with Ferguson. You twisted Beatty's arm and tried to force him to find Ferguson. It is too bad that all your witnesses, besides yourself, are not all facing charges. You are not the police. If you got into a fight, Smith, you should have reported it to the police, not take things into your own hands by rounding up a gang to get after Ferguson," declared the magistrate.

Describes Fight

Ted Beatty, the complainant, of Grafton, whose appearance drew the remark from the magistrate that Beatty was apparently a boy who minded his own business, related details of the affair on the night of August 28 when he was assaulted.

There had been a fight at the pavilion between Ronny Smith of Port Hope and a boy named Ferguson of Grafton. Beatty and his brother, Chris, along with James Prentiss, all of Grafton were up at a service station on the night of the assault, putting water in the radiator. Two cars drove up. Burgess seized Ted Beatty by the wrist, while a soldier held Beatty, and twisted his wrist. Beatty exhibited a right arm which was raw from elbow to wrist, right after the affair.

The group of youths with Burgess tried to upset Beatty's car, the complaint related. Then they commanded the three Grafton youths to go down with them to the beach, at the pavilion, to point out Ferguson to them. Their search for Ferguson was unsucessful. C. Ling, J. Rowe, L. Bird, R. Smith and L. Falls, all testified that they had made no attempt to upset Beatty's car and asserted that Beatty's arm was not twisted by anyone. The defence witnesses also stated that Beatty had told them that a soldier had twisted his wrist.

The magistrate's re-action to this story of peace and goodwill was a blunt, "I don't believe any of you."

Oshawa Men In Sicily Reported Prisoners

OSHAWA, Sept. 15—(CP).—Families of two Oshawa men, one of whom had been reported killed in action and the other missing, yesterday learned that both were prisoners of war in Italy.

Pte. Nelson Vaillaincourt, whose parents had been informed that he was killed in action in Sicily July 19, wrote to his parents saying he was a prisoner in Italy and was recovering from an arm wound. His letter was dated July 31. It told also that Pte. George Metcalfe, of Oshawa, previously reported missing, was a prisoner as well.

Toronto Man Opposes Water Pollution

Cancellation of the right to operate a sawmill in the Kawarthas if its by-products of sawdust is dumped into water is proposed by Arthur G. Piper, Toronto, member of the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association, in a letter of protest to the Department of Fish and Game.

To D. J. Taylor, deputy-minister Mr. Piper complained that sawdust is being deposited in Stoney Lake at Hurricane Point, "to the detriment of fishing and contrary to law."

"Stoney and Clear Lakes have approximately 600 cottages and any act which is determental to fishing would naturally be determental to their continuance as summer resorts, and, I venture to say, a losing proposition to the Government."

Mr. Piper suggests that the sale of lots for summer resort purposes would be more profitable than the licensing of the cutting of pine in the district. He regards sawdust in the water as detrimental to the resort hotels, settlers and Indians, adverse to the propogation of game fish for which the Department is spending a considerable sum annually, and also an interference with the growth of wild rice as a natural food for waterfowl.

"It seems to me that any party receiving the privilige to cut timber and who deliberately disregards the main attraction of the lakes by depositing sawdust in the water should have his license revoked."

Mr. Piper presents this suggestion to the Department.... "That the Government cease granting the privilege of cutting pine or any other timber in this district, whether or do they have a perfect legitimate right to do so, and that if the deeds of the owners or the registration of such deeds do allow the Government this privilege, this right be rescinded and placed on record, both in the deeds of the owners and in the registration of such deeds in this particular locality."

CAMPBELLFORD

Red Cross Branch Ships Summer Work

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 15 — (ENS)—Despite two months during which the Red Cross did not meet the Campbellford and Seymour branch mustered a sufficient quantity of material to make a sizeable shipment to their Toronto headquarters recently.

Congress Of Labor Delegates Pass Five Resolutions

By NYER NEGRU
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL, Sept. 15—(CP). — Resolutions dealing with collective bargaining, holidays with pay, government operation of the coal industry, housing, and labor unity were adopted here Tuesday by the Canadian Congress of Labor.

The Congress approved, and sent to the resolutions committee for inclusion of an amendment, a motion urging the Dominion Government to enact "without delay" collective bargaining legislation "that will guarantee to all workers the right to organize in, and bargain collectively with their employers, through legitimate unions of their choice."

The amendment to be added asked that the Government declare illegal "all company-sponsored union organizations in this country."

An allied resolution urged that collective bargaining rights be granted employees of Government agencies such as the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, National Harbors Board, Navy Dockyards, the Congress of Transport and Dominion Arsenals.

2 Weeks' Holidays.

The Congress demanded that the Dominion Government pass mandatory legislation granting workers of Canada at least two weeks' holiday with pay each year.

The Congress went on record as petitioning the Federal Government to "immediately set up the necessary machinery to take complete control of and place under Government direction and operation the entire coal mining industry of Canada."

On the subject of housing, the Congress urged the Federal Government, in conjunction with Provincial governments or local authorities and exclusive of private enterprise, to set up the necessary machinery "to put into effect immediately a comprehensive housing scheme whereby good houses will be built for use and not for profit and at economic rents within the reach of every working-class family in the country."

The incoming executive committee was urged to continue in their efforts to bring about unity of action between "all bona fide labor bodies on issues confronting the Canadian labor movement."

No Vote For The Services

The Liberal Government of Prince Edward Island went one better — or worse? — than did the Nixon Government in Ontario, when it simply eliminated the 10,000 to 12,000 men and women in the fighting forces as voters in the provincial election, the Stratford Beacon-Herald says.

We admit that the proxy vote of the soldiers in Ontario was a great disappointment, but we hardly think that the former Nixon Government should be given all the blame. From what we can learn, the proxies were distributed in England in plenty of time to be returned to Canada, and those that were mailed by the soldiers themselves arrived in time for the election. The slip-up was in the returning the great bulk of the proxies to Ontario.

Proxies which were turned into headquarters at least three weeks prior to August 4 were not received in Peterborough until a week after the election, taking four weeks to come from Britain.

Talking to soldiers, who were over there at the time the proxies were distributed, we find that large numbers of Ontario boys had been away from home so long that they took no interest whatever in the provincial election. This of course is to be expected, especially when we find that not more than 50 per cent. of the electors living right in the riding of Peterborough, did not bother themselves enough to use the franchise.

We agree with the Beacon-Herald that the proxy vote was a mockery, as far as Ontario was concerned, but we also think that no matter how the vote was taken amongst the services in a provincial election it would have been just as great a mockery. We had mockery by the electors, right here at home, and if they did not interest themselves in using their franchise, why should the boys who are thousands of miles away take any greater interest?

Canada's Navy Grows

Hon. Angus L. Macdonald recently announced that Canada is about to secure two new cruisers from Great Britain, and further hinted that aircraft carriers may be added to our fleet. Up to the present we have concentrated on small ships but the addition of capital ships to our navy is a most ambitious program.

Since the outbreak of war, when the Canadian Navy had 15 ships, the strength has increased 36-fold, to more than 550 ships made up entirely of light, fast craft suitable for submarine patrol and convoy work, but entirely unfitted to meet and deal with large enemy units.

The Canadian Navy and the Royal Navy are responsible for all convoy protection on the vital North Atlantic route, assisted by air forces of Canada, Britain and the United States. The Canadian Navy's duties in this work have been steadily expanded since the outbreak of war, until now one-half of the protection of merchant shipping is provided by the R.C.N.

The venture into the operation of larger ships suggests a long-range policy which is evolutionary. Canada is apparently looking to the future and envisioning a larger and different sphere of action. The war has shown us the shortsightedness of depending entirely on the Royal Navy for Empire defence and as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations we must assume a larger share of the responsibility for that defence.

Post-war plans must include arrangements to enforce peace throughout the world and we must be prepared to take our place amongst the other powers.

W. W. Jacobs Is Dead

W. W. Jacobs is dead. Had he lived until Wednesday, September 8, he would have been eighty years old. To the people of this generation his passing means little, but those of an older generation have lost a warm friend. W. W. Jacobs was intimately known to very few people. He was of a quiet disposition and has lived in semi-retirement for some years. A full and appreciative valuation of his works may be found in the great Cambridge History of English Literature; there can be no doubt that W. W. Jacobs through his books has gladdened and delighted the hearts of millions of readers.

William Wymark Jacobs was born in London on September 8, 1863. He was educated in private schools and later entered the civil service. Very early in life he started frequenting London docks. The characters he found around the docks interested and amused him, and he began to write short stories about them, featuring the night watchman, a delightful boastful old character who was in constant trouble of one sort and another. Shortly after, his widening circle of readers who enjoyed his subtle dockside humour, were introduced to three sailormen: Peter Russet, Sam Small and Ginger Dick. These three usually signed on for long voyages together but it was of their adventures around the London shipping area where they were squandering their hard-earned wages in the various dockside pubs that Jacobs wrote so entertainingly.

Then he gave us "the oldest inhabitant" who used to sit outside the Cauliflower Inn at Claybury, cadging a drink and a smoke from wayfarers who stopped to rest on the bench outside the old Inn, in exchange for stories of Bob Pretty and his wicked ways.

After being published in the Strand and other magazines, Jacobs' stories were published in book form. Later he wrote a number of book-length stories, including "The Skipper's Wooing," "At Sunwich Port," "Salt Haven" and others. These contain the same delightful brand of humour which characterized his short stories. Jacobs also wrote occasionally in serious vein. Perhaps of his one-act plays, "The Monkey's Paw" is best known.

William Wymark Jacobs has passed away. During his journey through life he scattered much sunshine along the way, and those of us who are fortunate enough to have a complete collection of his works can happily continue to bask in that sunshine even though the creator of the night watchman, Ginger Dick and Bob Pretty is no more.

The Power Of a Ballad

The two words, Mandalay and Rangoon, keep recurring in the war news. Within the past few days United States bombers have been dumping a great weight of explosives in the far eastern zone where those places are located to disorganize the Japanese. What one poem may do, when turned into a popular song, to make names known in many parts of the world that would otherwise remain in obscurity, except in a limited area, is exemplified in the case of those two Burma cities.

Years ago Rudyard Kipling wrote a ballad titled, "Mandalay". It was set to music and became a popular song, heard everywhere at banquets and concerts. The lines have a particular interest now in view of the fighting which has gone on for months, intermittently, in and about the two centres. The first stanza of the famous poem brings a vivid picture before the mind of the old Flotilla which used to ride in those far distant waters in the days when Great Britain was in possession of Singapore and other fortified ports of the Northern Pacific. The lines run:

"Come you back to Mandalay
Where the old Flotilla lay:
Can't you 'ear their paddles chunkin'
From Rangoon to Mandalay?
On the road to Mandalay,
Where the flyin' fishes play,
An' the sun comes up like thunder
Outer China 'crost the Bay!"

One often wonders what that celebrated man of letters would write, if he were living today, to present the Tommy Atkins and other phases of life of the present war as he so brilliantly presented those of a former time in his poems and stories.

NOTE AND COMMENT

There is something in a name after all. The British submarine Unbroken is safe back in her home port after 16 months' service in the Mediterranean.

Salt Lake city council of women want to ban kissing for the duration. Without photographs of the committee we cannot be sure whether or not the suggestion was made in self defence.

One of the funniest features of the whole war has been Hitler's complaints about Italian treachery. That is one subject of course on which the Fuehrer should be an authority.

Governor Osborne of Arizona has bet the Grand Canyon that his state will make the best showing in the war loan drive. He'll certainly be in a big hole if he loses.

British fliers at Picton and Mount Hope are coming here Saturday to do their bit for the British War Victims' Fund. Peterborough should co-operate with a record crowd at the benefit soccer game at Riverside Park.

Answers Are In Order

From WINNIPEG FREE PRESS

THE Canadian Forum, we believe, accurately described the attitude of mind of many of the electors in The Pas when it remarked that they were not interested in Premier Garson's question, "Where is the money to come from?" when he discussed the problem of social security. The Forum, of course, put an edge on its remarks thus:

The electors in The Pas can no longer be fooled about social security measures by the helpless cry, "Where will the money come from?"—which was the age-old plaint of the servants of monopoly capitalism advanced by Premier Garson. The war has debunked that excuse for inaction.

The fact remains, of course, that regardless of sarcasm, the money will have to be found, and since the Canadian Forum accuses Mr. Garson of fooling the people, it is legitimate to ask the Forum to explain just where the money is going to come from, or itself stand accused of fooling the people in a much worse way—that of making impossible promises to them for the sake of getting the C.C.F. into power.

If the Forum knows where the money is to come from, it should let the people know promptly, for the C.C.F. leaders themselves never tell, or make absurd remarks such as those uttered by Mr. Stanley Knowles about getting the money out of the profits of the industries the C.C.F. will take over. The editors of the Canadian Forum are the intellectuals, the economists, the political scientists, of the C.C.F. If they don't know where the money is going to come from, nobody does.

The Canadian Forum, we hope, is far too intelligent to believe that the money is going to come out of the profits of business. It knows that even if it socialized all business and industry, the whole of the profits would not produce what was needed, or anything like it. It would be unlikely to reply that socialized industry would be so much more efficient than private enterprise, that enough profits would be earned, for it is on record as believing that present wages are too low, and the greatest conceivable increase in efficiency would be needed to pay more to the worker. Nor would it reply that social security would be paid for by a capital levy or by confiscation of large fortunes, for even if a very substantial amount of money was found by such means, it would only be found once, whereas social security is to be permanent, involving annually very large sums of money.

OUR hope would be that the Canadian Forum would answer the question we address to them by analyzing the present source of the national income, and point out that its present size—which leads impracticable people to the belief that it could be easily made permanent—is due to an enormous overseas market for the goods we produce. These goods are of course weapons of war, and their shipment overseas is due to our paying for them ourselves, through taxation and borrowing.

We would welcome the statement of some program of how this present state of affairs can be perpetuated without the creation of permanent overseas markets for our peacetime products of the same magnitude as those now existing in war. Or does the C.C.F. propose to maintain our national income at its present level by permanent borrowing to finance production, and giving our goods away to peoples overseas, or destroying them after production (as war material is destroyed)? If this is the idea, who is going to do the lending? We have never observed the Forum paying anything but the most cursory attention to ways and means of expanding and maintaining exports. This is a feature the C.C.F. program always dismissed in a paragraph or so with some reference to the creation of import and export boards for the sale and purchase of socially desirable goods. Yet it is precisely that problem of international trade and its prospects which most worries an honest man like Mr. Garson, who does not want to hold out alluring prospects which he, in Manitoba, cannot make come true unless many factors, all of which are out of his control (to say nothing of their being also out of the control of the C.C.F.), are all brought together to create a widely-trading world in which a producer of surpluses like Canada can sell freely. He is, at least, entitled not to be dismissed as "a servant of monopoly capitalism," since the problem here involved is one that will face a completely socialized state just as sternly as it faces the present one.

We suggest further that the electors of The Pas who voted C.C.F., if they refused last month to take seriously the answer to the question, "Where will the money come from?" will be asking it of themselves at some still undetermined date in the future and wondering why it all looked so easy to the C.C.F. speakers in 1943.

Thoughtless Criticism

Of all the loose talk one hears these days the loosest is that which says the Government is going to be slaughtered, or should be slaughtered, because of its war restrictions. This Government has enough sins on its head, and must expect opposition and criticism, but to hold that it shouldn't have brought in such war controls as the War Prices Board and wages and prices ceiling, and must be jumped on because it did bring them in, is neither fair nor decent.

No Government we could have, no matter what its politics, could run a war such as this without restrictions; and the truth is that such controls as we have had represent about the best thing the Government has done in this war. If anybody disbelieves that, let them consult the authorities at Washington.

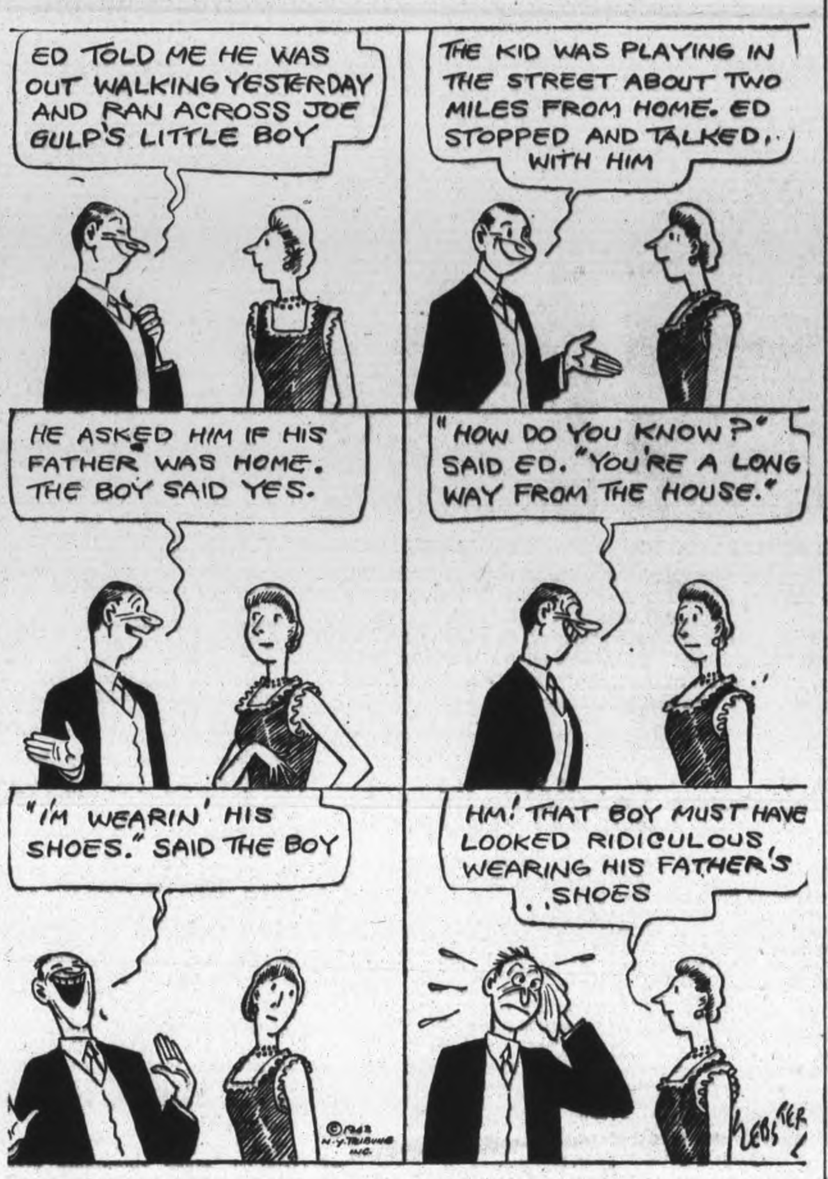
Actually, The Journal doesn't believe these tales about opposition to the Government being based in objection to restrictions. There is some grumbling, of course; but that grumbling doesn't necessarily mean failure by the people as a whole to realize that a war of such dimensions as this one can't be run without controls, without a great deal of regimentation, and that they aren't willing to submit to them. By and large, there have been very few prosecution for non-compliance with the law.

Opposition to the Government is the right of all of us; sometimes our plain duty. No good is served when the opposition is grossly unfair, taking no account of realities.—Ottawa Journal.

Plowing Styles Change

When the International Plowing Match starts again after the war, contestants may be required to plow curved furrows around slopes or even to plow round and round the field. Tillage ideas and cultural practices are undergoing a mild revolution.—The Farmer's Advocate.

AND NOTHING CAN BE DONE ABOUT IT



At the Centre of Empire

(By SCOTT YOUNG, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Sept. 15 (CP)—The housing shortage is beginning to make itself felt in a new way in London—in the resentment of returned servicemen that they cannot find living accommodation while many of the flats and homes that otherwise would be open to them are occupied by the refugees they have been fighting to save.

There aren't many of these men coming back so far—just the odd ones and twos and half-dozens, and many of them come back to Waves and families who had managed to keep their homes intact during their absence. But a smattering of letters to the editor, the great escape valve of the British public, and private conversations of the subject indicate the problem will be one of considerable proportions when the trickle of returning men becomes a flood.

There are tens of thousands of refugees in London, perhaps more than a hundred thousand.

These exiles aren't rich, usually, but they seem to have better than ordinary incomes. They can afford the flats that range from one room affairs at about $15 a week to seven rooms at about $60. Naturally returned servicemen can't.

Right now, there isn't any sign of a remedy. There are lots of vacant houses, particularly in the better residential areas, because some people who left in the blitz have never returned. But although the government has full power over all property, just as over manpower, this property jurisdiction is exercised quite modestly.

Even the government's promised agricultural cottage building program is moving slowly, indicating that with materials hard to find and available labor as scarce as chocolate eclairs, it's likely this metropolitan shortage will have to struggle along by itself.

Lord Louis Mountbatten's appointment to the job of bossing southeast Asia delighted the small-time Londoners, who more often disapprove than approve such appointments. He ranks with Gen. Montgomery as a hero of the rank and file.

Just as these Londoners love to talk over the latest "Monty" story, they like to see pictures of the big, handsome combined ops chief and hear of his latest exploits. The British public loves any good fighting man, but most of all it loves a good fighting man who is aristocratic, too, because British aristocracy is much-maligned in other parts of the world and the British seem to feel they are justified in keeping them around when one like Lord Louis turns up.

These people who are so happy over his new appointment will be expecting startling Mountbatten-fashion news from the Pacific war.

Americans Who Hate the British

(FROM BUFFALO COURIER-EXPRESS)

WE share Mr. Churchill's faith that America and Britain will work together to win the peace as they now work together to win the war. But after we win the war and before we win the peace, another battle must be fought and won right here in America. That will be a battle in the political arena against those who would rather see America lose both the war and the peace than to see Britain win either.

It may seem incredible to many on both sides of the Atlantic—including Mr. Churchill, himself, who is almost as American as he is British—that there should be persons calling themselves American who hate Britain more than they love their own country. Unfortunately, there are such persons and, while they constitute a minority, it is a highly vocal and politically potent minority. This was proved, before we entered the war, during the great debates over repeal of the arms embargo, over the trade of destroyers for air and sea bases, over lend-lease and over other measures of aid to Britain and her allies. If that highly vocal minority had had its way, the United States would have become a passive partner of Hitler's Germany instead of an active partner of Churchill's Britain.

When the war ends, there will be another great debate in which our Anglophobes and our haters of democracy, our homegrown Nazi-Fascists will find collaborators among well-meaning but confused and timid citizens who can be misled into thinking that the way to avoid World War III. is to pull out of Europe and Asia, crawl under the bed and cover our eyes and ears. That's how we made sure of World War II.

We don't think that the haters of Britain, the haters of democracy and the good citizens whom they may cajole or scare will win the debate which is sure to follow World War II. We don't think that World War III. is inevitable. We share Mr. Churchill's confidence that co-operation of the English-speaking countries can be made the foundation-stone of a new and better world in which all peoples will share the fruits of our sure victory over tyranny and oppression. We believe with him:

"If we are together, nothing is impossible. If we are divided, all will fall.

"I, therefore, preach continually the doctrine of the fraternal association of our two peoples, not for any purpose of gaining individious material advantages for either of them, not for territorial aggrandizement or the vain pomp of earthly domination, but for the sake of service to mankind and for the honor that comes to those who faithfully serve great causes."

That passage reflects the great vision of a great man. If the vision is to become reality, men of good will on both sides of the ocean must work to win the peace as the soldiers of our United Nations fight to win the war—with tenacity, with courage, with devotion and with indominable faith.

Hearst On Churchill

(FROM OTTAWA CITIZEN)

WILLIAM Randolph Heart's editorial attack on Prime Minister Churchill for his Harvard address is of interest chiefly as fresh evidence that the leopard cannot change his spots. The diatribe reveals pretty conclusively that the old corrosive obsession that "England" is constantly plotting the incorporation of the United States into the British Empire still gnaws at the aged publisher's vitals.

Mr. Hearst, of course, is entitled to his opinion and to its free expression. And too much importance should not be attached to his latest piece of name-calling. There are probably a few others who will share his view that Mr. Churchill's suggestion of Anglo-American military co-operation after the war was "untimely and dangerous," and that the British leader may be charged with "conducting pro-British propaganda on our soil." Ancient bogeys die hard.

To say, however, as Mr. Hearst does, that Mr. Churchill indulged like a "superior parent" in "post-war proposals of a selfish, insolent and essentially Cockney character," is to come not far from using insulting language towards a man whose greatness is founded upon a fundamental honesty and a native simplicity, not to mention an innate generosity and incapacity to dissemble, unique in contemporary statesmanship. We may leave to America's sense of fairness that aspect of the matter.

It remains only to be pointed out that the majority of United States editors and commentators reacted sympathetically to Mr. Churchill's theme, and that on the very day that the Prime Minister spoke to Harvard University, Thomas E. Dewey, a Republican party leader, issued a challenging statement which coincided strikingly with what Mr. Churchill had said. Governor Dewey proposed a post-war military alliance between the United States and Britain as the foundation of any plan to maintain world peace. And what Churchill and Dewey advocated is but the formalizing of a condition which has existed not only since Pearl Harbor but, without anybody admitting it, for many years before.

A Bible Message

And Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep, and do them. The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day. (Deut. 5: 1-3.)

And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, to keep the commandments of the Lord, and his statutes, which I command thee this day for thy good? (Deut. 10: 12, 13.)

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness. And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? (II Cor. 6: 14-16.)

Apt Reply

One of the Quisling-appointed "bishops" was recently berating a loyal pastor for the latter's unyielding opposition to Nazism. The "bishop" painted a glowing word picture of what the New Order would mean to Norway. The pastor responded with a word picture of the house-cleaning that was to take place after the war. "Ah, but remember," said the Quislingite, "revenge belongs to the Lord!"—"I know that," replied the pastor, "but I know also that we are His helpers here on earth!"—News of Norway.

Education of an M.P.

Now let the M.P.'s take the week's holiday which Mr. Bevin says is enough for the ordinary worker. Then there is plenty of fruitful occupation while the doors of Westminster are closed. Let them turn reporter for a change, going around investigating what their voters are saying and thinking. In turn the newspapers will cheerfully print their stories when they come back. They should descend from the heights of strategy and world planning to the domestic problems which trouble the people. — London Daily Express.

Only Politicians Object

Canadians called up and thus not eligible for use "overseas" were among the troops, including Americans, who occupied Kiska. When the Americans decide to move on from Kiska, how about these men? Will they keep up the procession or be held behind because it would be "over the line?" Incidentally it is said not one of the call ups objected to going to Kiska, although 2,000 miles from Canada. Probably they would be willing to go anywhere. Only some politicians would object.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Army Shake-up May Leave 3 Mobile Units

OTTAWA, Sept. 15—(CP) —The establishment of three embryo army divisions in Canada, each capable of moving and fighting independently and disposing of formidable fire power, is seen as the possible result of the re-organization of the Canadian army in the Dominion announced yesterday by Defence Minister Ralston.

Under the re-organization, the 6th Division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. A. E. Potts of Saskatoon, the University Professor who led the Canadian expedition to Spitsbergen in 1941, will be partially disbanded.

The 7th and 8th Divisions, commanded respectively by Maj.-Gen. P. E. LeClerc of Montreal and Maj.-Gen. H. N. Ganong of St. Stephen, N.B., will be disbanded. Defence Minister Ralston's announcement made no reference to new posts for any of the three Generals.

Col. Ralston said the re-organization does not mean that all units of the three divisions affected by the change will be disbanded. However, fifteen infantry units, three artillery units, four engineer and three medical units will be affected by the disbandment.

Operational Work.

It is considered likely Gen. Potts will be given command of operational troops in Canada under the re-organization, and it is further expected a modified divisional headquarters, formed around Gen. Potts as his 6th Divisional Headquarters Staff, will adminitser the three brigade groups in the new set-up.

Each brigade group, if 14 of the 27 infantry battalions in the three divisions are disbanded, will have four infantry battalions. This would indicate a possible set-up for each brigade group of three rifle battalions, one machine gun battalion and appropriate artillery, army service corps, engineer, signal and medical detachments.

On that basis, the brigade groups, equipped as they can be with sufficient vehicles from the equipment of the three divisions would be highly mobile, and able to strike hard and quickly at any enemy attack of the smaller or harassing type which army authorities consider still possible on Canadian shores.

He Certainly Saved

CLEVELAND, Sept. 15 — (AP).—Police Capt. Patrick J. Lynch reported today the theft of $26,820 from a trunk kept under the bed of a west side man who said he liked to have "my money where I can see it." The victim was Albert Schmeeberger, reported by Lynch to have shown police $19,000 he said the thieves overlooked. He said the money was his life's savings.

Turin Feels Weight Of Allied Bombs

From a neutral source comes this photo of a street in bomb battered Turin, Italy, after an Allied air raid in August. Turin is close to the River Po, where the German armies may make their "do or die" stand to keep the Allied forces from spreading onto the continent proper from the "boot."

Mess Room Chatter

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 15 — (CP)—Let no one doubt the manoeuvrability of Bomber Command's big 20-ton Stirlings for front-gunner Pilot Officer Larry Grainer of Truax, Sask., tells how his pilot turned their Stirling into a night fighter.

They were coming back from an attack on Turin and over France the R.A.F. crew with which Grainer flies spotted another Stirling about 2,000 feet below them. Behind it, speeding in for a close-range attack, was a Nazi night fighter. So Grainer's pilot put his plane into a steep dive and swept in to attack the German aircraft at 600 feet. Grainer, from his front-gun position, was able to get in two good bursts and the night fighter whipped off, probably damaged.

In Canadian Bomber Group's Lion Squadron, now flying Halifaxe Sgts. Jimmy McLean of Sydne, N.S. and Johnny Albert of Emerson, Man., share credit for shooting down a JU88. Their bomber, piloted by Pilot Officer G. P. Vandekerckhove of Stony Mountain, Man., and navigated by Sgt. W. A Williamson of London, Ont., was coming out of the target area at Hamburg when it was caught in a searchlight cone for about four minutes.

The aircraft shook the seachlights and then a night fighter came for it, then another and McLean and Albert let the second one have it after driving off the first. He went down in a crazy spin and, said McLean, "it looked as though we nailed the skipper." They watched the Nazi JU88 spin downwards for 2,000 feet and then "Vandy" saw cannon shells bursting in front as a third German fighter attacked. Evasive action got them away from that one and the whole show only lasted five minutes.

McLean, rear-gunner, previously had two probables, one scored over Essen and the other over Duisburg.

Believe this or not. It comes from an anonymous character at R.C.A.F. headquarters, who tells of a flying officer, Bill Doak (for want of a better name) who was a Halifax pilot. He was fed up with some of the fighter pilots who frequented his favorite pub. Every time he looked at the vacant top button hole of their tunics (fighter pilots allegedly always effect an undone top button) he snorted in disgust.

Finally one night when the pub was going full blast, our hero turned out faultlessly dressed except that his tunic was completely unbuttoned.

His comeback to queries was: "Oh that? Why, didn't you know? I'm a four engine pilot."

Group captains don't get much chance to fly. They're not supposed to, operationally, but during the recent Hamburg attacks, Group Captain R. C. (Bus) Gordon of Vancouver, commanding an R.C.A.F. station, obtained permission to go along as second pilot with one of his crews. He enjoyed it, said it reminded him of the Fourth of July.

Small British Force Holds Rocky Gorge For Two Days Without Reinforcements

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(CP)—BBC today quoted a delayed dispatch from a correspondent telling of "a magnificent stand by a small British force just outside Salerno which played a large part of the capture of the town."

The broadcast, recorded by CBS, said in part:

"The force occupied a mountain gorge close to the town and was told it must hold out in it for 12 hours until reinforcements could be brought in. The Germans held the hills on both sides of the gorge and repeatedly shelled the British troops down in the valley.

"Twelve hours passed, but there was no sign of reinforcmeents. Another 12 hours went by and still our men had not been released. Fighting on the beaches had been so severe that no reinforcements could be spared. The men in the gorge had only a small tin box containing biscuits, chocolate and boiled sweets, and only about two pints of water.

"But they held on and actually made a number of unsuccessful attempts to storm the hills on either side of the gorge. In one of these attempts a sergeant carried a gun and ammunition right to the top of a 1,000-foot ridge, although the gun normally needs three men to carry it. He succeded in driving the enemy back for a time but was eventually killed.

"Another 12 hours passed...

"Then at last a message came from Allied Headquarters.

It said: Hold on at all cost for three hours more. They did hold on. And just when they were at their last gasp, British reinforcements began to arrive..."

Greek Chef's Death Found Not Accidental

TORONTO, Sept. 15 — (CP) — Police today were investigating the sudden death here yesterday of Satereos Loggis, 55-year-old Greek chef who formerly lived in Halifax.

Nick Chaggares, 45, Greek restaurant owner from Belleville, Ont., was arrested in Belleville last night on a charge of stealing a wallet containing $1,150, a registration card, some jewelry and personal effects of Loggis.

Police said it was believed at first that Loggis had died of a heart attack but that further investigation showed he had a discolored eye. They said they had been informed that Loggis was struck in a fight at the Greek Social Club where his body was found.

Doctor Claims Woman Insane

KINGSTON, Sept. 15.—(CP). — Dr. G. S. Tenant, superintendent of Rockwood Hospital at nearby Portsmouth, gave medical evidence yesterday in the trial of Mrs. Mary McCumber, charged with the murder of the infant son of her daughter Mrs. Rose Wagar, last March.

Dr. Tenant read the jury reports of two examinations he had made of the accused. The report said his opinion was that Mrs. McCumber was mentally defective and should not be held responsible for her acts.

It was announced that the hearing of a murder charge against Walter Haley, also arising out of the infant's death, has been traversed to the Spring assizes.

Medical Services Equal To Emergency

CALGARY, Sept. 15.— (CP).— There are sufficient doctors, nurses and medical services available in Canada to care for both military and civilian needs, no matter how long the war lasts, Dr. T. C. Routley, general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, told a meeting of the Alberta Division, Canadian Medical Association here yesterday.

'We have just carried out a survey across Canada which is the most intensive of its kind ever made in Canada or in any other country," he said. It included all doctors, dentists, nurses, hospitals, public health institutions, war industries and district health services in the country.

Foreign Trade Report

MONTREAL, Sept. 16 — (CP)— Members of a sub-committee of the Canadian Manufacturers Association conferred with government export officials yesterday and decided to submit to the Federal Government an outline of what they think should be done for the maintenance of Canada's foreign export trade, during and after the war.

TAMBLYN
EMPHATIC ON "TOOTH CARE"

It may seem to many that over-emphasis can be made of the "Care of the Teeth." We beg to differ, however, in as much as we must recognize that our "Teeth" have indeed a most important function to perform in the maintenance of our general "Good Health," as well as the fact that the possession of sound, white, gleaming teeth is an asset that should be carefully preserved. Thus once again "Your Tamblyn Drug Store" is featuring "Dental Requisites" and wishes particularly to suggest to you the critical examination of that "tooth brush of yours" as above all else the continued use of a firm bristle "Brush" is necessary for complete "Mouth Health." Following this thought and as an aid to your choice, a number of these "Necessities" have been included in this list of

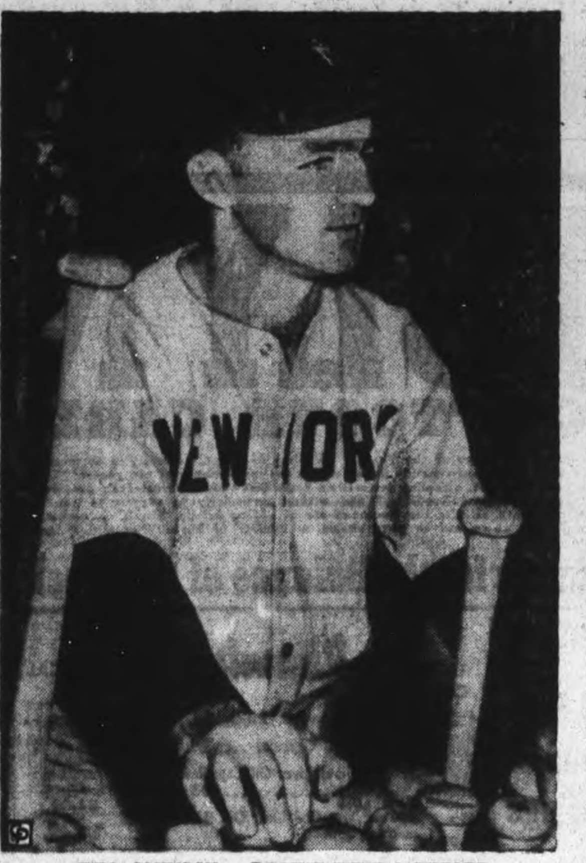
BRINTONS VICTORS IN INDUSTRIAL GAME

Bill Johnson Clicks As Yankee Infield Star



BILL JOHNSON....ROOKIE WITH A RECORD

By Central Press Canadian

While other clubs may snicker and counter-punch with a player of their own, the Yankees believe they have "the infielder of the year" in William R. (Billy) Johnson, the Newark flash who stepped into Red Rolfe's old spot at third base and has delivered the goods post-paid.

The handsome hot corner guardian of the Yanks, who has proven a durable sort of player—he's been in all the Yanks' games this season—was especially brilliant on the club's recent western tour.

On his return he had a record of 82 runs batted in a batting average (on the trip) of .333. His season's average at the plate is only slightly under .300, not bad for a kid playing regular the first year in the big time.

Johnson, a right-handed batter, is a fine fielder and has a good throwing arm.

The Yank third sacker was a shortstop with Newark last season and ranked as the best in the loop. His batting average was .290 over 153 games. He smacked out 12 home runs.

In organized ball since 1937, Johnson has had experience as a pitcher and an outfielder. He has proven a durable player throughout his minor league career.

Johnson is 25 years old. He stands slightly under five-ten and weighs 160 pounds. A native of Augusta, Ga., he now lives at Montclair, N.J.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 — (AP).—With the major league pro football season opening Sunday— and it'll outclass the college brand this year just the way big league baseball does — this corner offers a scouting report from one of the biggest and best scouts in the business.... To get it over quick, he picks the Chicago Bears and the Washington Redskins.

Skinning the Redskins:
The way our informant sees it, you can laugh off those three pre-season games the Redskins lost..... They couldn't do much scrimmaging with a 28-man squad, he explains, and they had to get ready in a hurry for the all-stars with 80 men....But Sammy Baugh seems to have recovered from whatever ailment was bothering him at the start and is hitting his pass receivers in his best form.

More bear stories?
The Bears and Packers will have another race in the Western Division, but the Bears, as usual, seem to have the ball club....They have those two big guards, Formann and Musso, and a good-looking boy named Merkel from Kansas — also Sid Luckman and Bill Geyer, who is stronger and better than last year.

New reason:
When Bill Hetzel, rookie infielder, walked out on the Boston Braves the other day, he gave this brand new explanation for his act: "Big league baseball is too high toned for me: Always having to wear coats and ties, imagine."

LAWN BOWLING

How about Friday night! It is to be a mixed rink tournament at 7.30 o'clock. There is to be eight individual prizes (all groceries) donated by two prominent members of our club. We are not at liberty to say who they are. The draw, instead of being off the board, will be by card. This system is used extensively up in western Ontario and we tried it out here once before. After each game the cards are collected and then distributed again for the next game. You play on a different rink each time and keep your own score for the three games. The eight bowlers with the greatest total score will receive the prizes. And please note this—there is no fee, it is all free and everybody is invited, so come along and have a good time. We have not many more Friday nights left for this season.

The notices are out for our last open tournament of the season. It is to be held on Saturday, Sept. 18th at 1.30 o'clock.

"Men's Irish Trebles" is the way the ad. reads and the fee is $3.75 per rink. So get up a rink and come with the crowd.

Brintons Take Second Factory Playoff

Brintons and Outboard Marines tangled in the second game of the Industrial League play-offs Tuesday night at Riverside and the carpetmakers drew the long end of a 14 to 9 count. Both teams have now gotten bad games out of their systems and the battling from now on should produce a high class variety of softball. They meet again on Thursday evening.

Too many free trips to first by Heffernan and Murphy, losing hurlers, who contributed two and six respectively, most of them in one bad frame, was the turning point in the game. Rose on the other hand pitching for the winners handed out only one walk. Hitting features of the tussle were provided by Shaughnessy, who walloped a homer with one aboard, and Loucks, who also cracked out a four-base drive. Both perform for the Marines. Line-ups:

Outboard Marines: Loucks, ss; Metcalfe, c; Shaughnessy, cf; Murphy, 3b, p; Heffernan, p, 3b; Parker, 2b; McMillen, 2b; English, 1b; McArthur, rf; Watkins, lf.

Brintons: Kingdon, cf; Dorrell, 2b; Corbett, 3b; Byers, c; Weese, ss; Jones, rf; Bun Rose, p; Phillips, 1b; Goodwin, lf.

16 Men's Teams Almost Certain

Sixteen bowling teams seems a cretainty for the Men's City League when announcements arrived yesterday from Chief Gimblett, George Walton, Jim Herron and Les McIntosh that each of them will be ready with a strong club when the schedule opens on October 7th. Vince Anthony of last year's Swartz team is still another strong possibility. Eleven other teams were signed up at the City League meeting held last Friday night.

Nothing has been heard as yet from Canada Packers or the K. of C. The Brintons and Empress No. 2 teams of last year are definitely out. Harold Freeman of Smith and Freeman will have Walter Firth, Bun Rose, Barney Worsencroft, Ross Hopkins and himself. George Walton has rounded up George Robertson of last year's Jay's team, Holly Mowry from the Cleanrites, Bert McCarroll and Maurice Caccavella.

The teams entered by Jim Herron and Les McIntosh include all C.G.E. and Genelco bowlers. Herron's squad will consist of Fred Meagher, Gerry Seabrooke, Tony White, Maurice Giardino, Tick Cacavella, Fred Jones and Herron, while the McIntosh entry will be Deb Whatman, Clint Endicott, Percy Ellison, Bill Flint and Les McIntosh. The applications of the above two teams are being held for a few days while waiting for a decided answer from any other last season's clubs who wish to entre.

The entry list now includes Jay's, Walton's, Sunocos, Big Five, Empress, Outlaws, C.G.E. Machine Shop, Willison's (C.G.E.), Old Timers, Les Moore (Westclox), Freeman's, Herron's (C.G.E.), Cleanrites, Chief Gimblett, McIntosh (Genelco) with Vince Anthony to hear from.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The last battle in the Girls' Softball League for this season is scheduled for tonight at the East City Bowl when Brintons and Generals will clash in the final battle for the intermediate title and the Knox Cup. The series is tied up with each team having won one game and tonight's tussle is a tossup. Generals won the first playoff fixture without much trouble but Brintons snapped back Monday night to take the equalizer even more easily and now everybody is all at sea trying to call the turn for the final argument. On the season's record and on the strength of the two final games the teams are very evenly matched and everything depends upon which outfit manages to find its best form tonight. Personally we wouldn't be able to even hazard a guess. It looks like Beryl Lee, the little pitcher who held Generals under control Monday night to go back at them tonight while the C.G.E. girls will call upon their left-hander, Pat Wilson. It looks like a merry old tussle and should be a fitting climax to a successful season for the girls' loop.

The Westclox team, Peterborough Girls' League champions, will swing into action some time next week, although the definite dates are not yet known. The Big Bens received word to that effect from provincial headquarters yesterday, Peterborough representatives go right into the finals, playing the winners of the St. Catharines-Stratford series for the provincial title. This is the first year the Eastern winners got a bye. Usually they have been scheduled against the Toronto representatives. This year however the Victory Aircraft team which won the intermediate honors in Toronto were pitted against the St. Catharines Merry-Macs and St. Kitts' girls took the round. Meanwhile the Guelph lassies who won from Preston Rivulettes, last year's winners, by default were getting trimmed by Stratford, the Classic City team winning in two straight. Stratford and St. Catharines meet in the semi-finals with the second game Saturday and Westclox will battle the winners next week. It is hoped to have a playoff game here a week from Saturday but there is nothing definite on that score yet.

It's A Big Event

Saturday's soccer battle here between the Picton R.A.F. and the Mount Hope R.A.F. looms up as one of the major sporting attractions of the season. Bringing together as it does two teams made up for the most part of former professional players from the British Isles the game should afford one of the most interesting exhibitions of soccer ever staged here. Peterborough folk saw the same two teams in action here a year ago and were thrilled by the display of fast clever football the rival Air Force elevens staged. There is reason to expect an even more spectacular battle on this occasion for word from Mount Hope is that that station will be represented by a much better-balanced team and they hope to give the classy Picton stars a real battle all the way. With the high-scoring former Partick Thistle star Flying Officer Campbell and the clever Miller at centre on the Picton forward division the Easterners will be decidedly strong on the attack and we will be disappointed if that advance guard doesn't come through with some of the smartest offensive work that has been shown here. Campbell's work last year is still talked about by the fans who saw the game and the big Scot is going better than ever this season according to all reports. A huge crowd is expected at Riverside Park for the battle. The entire proceeds go to the British War Victims' Fund and the advance sale of tickets indicates hearty support. Dominion Woollens and Worsteds took a block of 200 tickets and that is just a sample of the interest that is being shown in this noteworthy sporting event.

Doug. Vaughan in the Windsor Star's sport column has the following pertinent reference to war-time sport: A sour-puss individual who, by his own admission, never had the time or inclination to indulge in any form of athletics (from the tone of his letter he must keep his girlish figure, if he has one, from drinking unsweetened lemon juice) writes in to put the blast on war-time sport. He doesn't confine himself to lambasting civilian sport, but even brands the recreational programs staged within the armed services as "a waste of time and of absolutely no use in helping us win the war." There is only one place for such letters and that's in the garbage can—which is right where this one is going. However, since we know that there are some people who do feel that sport is being over-emphasized in some respects we'd like to quote from a story just received from Somewhere in England quoting Lieut. Larry O'Connor, holder of the 110 and 220-yard Canadian hurdle records. Says O'Connor: "Athletics are recognized here (England) as an essential part of the physical training program and in my opinion they are not emphasized enough at home (Canada). There are no better conditioners than swimming and running—and the competition provided is a strong factor in maintaining morale."

Leafs Start Well

Toronto Maple Leafs, thanks to effective pitching by their veteran ace, Luke Hamlin, got away to a flying start in their Governors' Cup series with Montreal Royals last night, taking the opening game in Toronto 5 to 2. Hamlin pitched a couple of home-run balls in the opening inning but those were all the runs Montreal could put together during the engagement. Toronto evened it up in their half of the inning, went ahead 3 to 2 and finally cinched the argument when Jeep Handley cuffed a long triple with two on in the seventh to drive in a pair of counters and make the margin 5 to 2. The Royals threatened twice in the later stages but Hamlin was superb in the pinches. He stopped Montreal from scoring on one occasion when they had the bases loaded and only one out and next innings put the brakes on after the Royals had filled the cushions with not a man down. The cagey 37-year-old Hamlin fanned no fewer than eleven of the losers during the battle, indicating that he had plenty on the ball. The second game of the series will be staged in Toronto tonight and then the rivals move on to Montreal. It is a best-of-seven affair.

Perhaps the chief feature of note in the limited big league program yesterday was the fact that the Washington Senators took over second place in the American League by nosing out the Boston Red Sox. Candini on the mound for the Senators allowed ten hits but had them well spaced. Heber Newsome was the losing pitcher. The Washington move into second place was greatly helped by the St. Louis Browns who ganged upon the Cleveland Indians to take both ends of a double-header. Steve Sundra had the Tribe completely baffled in the opener, shutting them out 3 to 0. Sundra working against the Cleveland ace, Jim Bagby, allowed only four scattered hits and walked but one batter. In the second game the Brownies had little difficulty, winning 7 to 1 with Potter on the firing line against Smith and Kennedy. In the opening game Vernon Stephens fired his 19th and 20th homers of the season. Two former International League pitching stars clashed at Boston where Red Barrett outpitched Rex Barney as the Braves blanked the Dodgers 3 to 0. Chet Ross's bat did the trick. He drove in the first Boston run with a single and the other with a homer.

Synod Supports Pre-Nuptial Physical Tests

TORONTO, Sept. 16. — Motions supporting Federal restrictions on consumption of alcoholic liquors during wartime, and urging "measures to ensure that parties to marriage are of good mental and physical health," occasional animated debate yesterday, during the fifth session of the eight-day meeting of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, held at Trinity College.

The resolutions, which were carried, were part of a broad social program endorsed during the day's discussion of the report of the Council for Social Service, presented by Canon W. W. Judd, Council secretary.

"At last the Canadian people are laying aside their prudery and facing the problem of venereal disease, which is assuming alarming proportions," declared Canon Judd. "The Council advises a campaign of education, conducted by good, sane people like our clergy."

The Council had presented a motion urging diocesan councils for social service to lead an effort to secure legislation calling for pre-marital medical examination with regard to venereal disease.

"This is the voice of the Church on one of the most sacred and delicate matters of human life," objected Canon R. W. Spencer, Camden East. "In its present form, the motion stresses the physical to the exclusion of the spiritual side of marriage, and it should not go forth as the official pronouncement of our Church."

His motion that the resolution be recast by a committee was endorsed by Dr. Charlotte Whitten, member of the C.S.S., and was carried in both houses of the Synod.

The motion, as carried, stated: "That this Synod, holding that marriage is essentially a spiritula relationship, emphasizes the importance of inculcating principles of self-knowledge, self-reverence and self-control, and recommends the support of measures to ensure that parties to marriage are of good mental and physical health."

Unanimously Carried.

Expressing the opinion that the Federal Government "will be justified in at least continuing the modest restrictive measures" regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages during the war, the motion put by Bishop S. H. Sovereign of Athabaska was opposed in a standing vote by 15 out of 200 members of the Lower House, and was unanimously carried in the Upper House.

"Certain foods and other amenities of life have been restricted for the better proscution of the war," he said. "Restricting consumption of alcoholic liquors will save materials for war industry and will improve morale of the troops," he declared.

Broad Policy Urged.

Favoring a broad postwar immigration program, the Synod carried a motion by Hugh Farthing, K.C., of Calgary, asking the Canadian Government to accept the British Government's offer to assume 75 per cent of costs of tarnsportation and settlement of its emigrants, provided that Dominion Governments assume 25 per cent of the costs. The motion also asked for the establishment of a bureau, representing highest educational and cultural standards, to present the Canadian case to Britain.

Concerning refugees, a motion was presented by Dr. Mabel Cartwright, C.S.S., and passed by the Synod. It requested the Canadian Government to welcome victims of political persecution in Europe, regardless of race or creed, and to take immediate steps facilitating entry of some refugees, particularly those stranded in Portugal.

An appeal to the Synod to remember missions to seamen was entered by Rev. F. W. Weaver, port chaplain at Halifax, whose work for members of the armed forces there won the Synod's praise.

A general program of advance by the council, in the fields of port chaplaincy and immigration work, co-operation with other religious social service work, including chaplaincy work in sanatoria, camps and war production areas, was submitted to the Synod special committee on advance. It will be discussed Thursday with other advance measures.

Senator Opposes Calling Fathers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem.-Mont.) said yesterday he will oppose all administration attempts to delay a Senate vote on his bill to halt the drafting of fathers into the United States armed forces.

He added that he was amending the proposal to prohibit "indefinitely" the induction of fathers, instead of postponing such action until after Jan. 1, as it now provides.

The declaration was Wheeler's answer to administration proposals to delay action pending a further statement from Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet.

"The Canadians are already disbanding some of their combat troops for civilian purposes," Wheeler said.

(This referred to an announcement at Ottawa yesterday by Defence Minister J. L. Ralston that Canada would reduce home defence operational military forces by about 20,000 men through disbandment of the 7th and 8th Divisions and partial disbandment of the 6th Division.)

Use Soldiers Here.

"Instead of taking more men at this time and upsetting our own civilian economy, we ought to be using a lot of our own soldiers in this country in civilian pursuits when there is such a shortage of manpower," Wheeler said.

Chairman Andrew J. May (Dem.-Ky.) of the House of Representatives Military committee termed the Canadian action "an irrefutable argument against the drafting of fathers in the United States."

"If there is no need for these trained men on fighting fronts of the United Nations," May told reporters, "then it is difficult to understand why there is a need to induct fathers in this country."

May introduced as soon as the House met a bill to postpone the scheduled father-draft indefinitely, or until Congress orders otherwise, and to effect the discharge of fathers already in the armed forces.

Building To Create Post-War Jobs

OTTAWA, Sept. 15 — (CP). — Reduction in the number of construction licences, announced last night by Munitions Minister Howe, will further increase a sizable backlog of construction that may become an important factor in post-war employment, Munitions Department officials said to-day.

While licences from the construction control have been required primarily to conserve materials that are in short supply, the restrictions are having the effect of postponing many building programs until after the war.

Licences with an average value of more than $2,000,000 a month have been refused by the Department and this figure is likely to be increased under the new policy. In additional to actual refusals, the control has, by direct contact with prospective builders, persuaded many to refrain from applying for licences for retail store expansion, theatre construction, and other large-scale proposals.

While it is realized that not all of these projects will be proceeded with after the war, many have been merely postponed and are likely to go on as soon as material is available and the restrictions are removed.

Huge War Construction.

Many of the building materials that now are in short supply have been required in large quantities for direct war projects. Since the outbreak of war the Government has made commitments for the building of defence projects with a value of about $400,000,000 and for new industrial projects, including machinery, with a value of some $850,000,000.

Mr. Howe, in announcing that fewer construction licences will be granted in the future, said the shortage of materials made it necessary that "all but absolutely essential construction" be postponed.

During the depression years the Government used building as a means of stimulating employment because of its widespread effect, both in actual construction and in the manufacture of materials used by the construction industry. Thus, construction postponed until after the war may become an important factor in absorbing surplus labor.

Catch Ottawa Thief

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—(CP).—Police alleged last night that with the arrest in Montreal of Albert Robert, 27, the man is in custody who in the last month broke into four Ottawa establishments and stole articles valued at $15,396.

Hamlin And Howell Winning Hurlers

By The Associated Press.

Manager Jewell Ens of Syracuse Chiefs opened the semi-final playoffs of the International League with Newark with a bit of strategy and today sits in the driver's seat.

With everyone expecting the Chiefs to toss Tomas de la Cruz, slender Cuban, against the Bears' Walt (Monk) Dubiel, Ens sent Millard Howell to the hill in a surprise move.

The strategy worked. The Chiefs mastered Dubiel, who pitched a no-hitter against Syracuse in the final week of the campaign, and Howell went on to win 6-2.

In the other bracket, the pennant-winning Toronto Leafs downed Montreal Royals 5-2 behind the effective hurling of Luke Hamlin.

Ens now has De la Cruz earmarked for tonight's second game with Jim Davis slated to hurl for the Bears. Lloyd Dietz, late of the National League, will be Montreal's mound hope with the veteran Nick Strincevich doing the flinging for Toronto.

The first three balls Hamlin pitched were of the old Hamlin home run variety. Eddie Brack, first man up, swatted a long fly that was caught, but the blows of Carl Barnhart and Bob Ortiz went into the stands.

After that Hamlin was in command. Toronto evened the count in the lower half of the inning, went ahead with a single run in the third, and counted two more in the seventh when Lee Handley poked a 360-foot triple to centre field with Hamlin and Frank Zak on the paths.

TORONTO, Sept. 15 —(CP) — No matter what happens to organized hockey in the fifth year of war, Canada's youngsters will see to it that the Dominions National game survives. There will be plenty of hockey players as long as there are boys like the Fort William lads who have already built a shack at the corner of Vickers and Moodie Streets in anticipation of the rink they'll have there next winter. The boys scoured back lanes for blocks around in search of materials and built every bit of the shack themselves. They made sure they'll have a place to don their skates. Fred Edwards of the Fort Williams Times- Journal comments: "Hockey's future centainly rest secure with such enthusiasm."

Empire Games:

Ralph (Hunk) Henderson, former Vancouver all-round athlete, wrote home from a prison camp in Germany: "On July 24 we had a camp track and field meet which was conducted just like the Empire Games. Canada took first place which is pretty good when you consider there are only 75 Canadians in this camp that holds 700."

Go West young man:

Herb Manning of the Winnipeg Tribune discusses the fact a number of former Eastern Canada football stars out with Winnipeg Service Football teams this season and comments: "It's a fact that Eastern boys will help to keep the Western game going this year. Imagine winning the Grey Cup with half a team collected from all points East."

Round and about:

Granting that Halifax Service teams this season have many of the greatest names in Canadian football on call. Bill Hutchinson of the Moncton Transcript discounts the possibility of a successful Halifax challenge for the Grey Cup because of lack of competition in the Maritimes .... 35 Players Try Out With Boston Bruins

BOSTON, Sept. 15 (AP)—Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins announced today about 35 players would report for pre-season training at Quebec on Oct. 13.

He said the Bruins would open their National Hockey League schedule against Les Canadiens at Montreal on Oct. 31 and would play three more road games before returning to Boston.

The Bruins have lost most of their 1942-3 players, including Goalie Frankie Brimsek, now in the Coast Guard at Baltimore. One candidate to succeed Brimsek is Harvey Bennett, a 17-year-old Toronto boy, who played for the Oshawa Juniors in the last Dominion hockey championships.

Lakeshores Win First Play-off Tilt

BRAMPTON, Sept. 15—Mimico-Brampton Combines had too much gallop for Lakeshores' collection of veterans and comebacks, and trimmed them 20-7 here last night in the first of the best four-in-seven series for the Ontario Lacrosse senior championship.

Lakeshores held the winners close in the opening quarter, and were fairly even with them in the third, but were out of the running entirely in the other portions. Combines held an edge throughout, and their decided superiority in the second and fourth quarters enabled them to pile up their big margin.

Harrison in the Combine net was the best player in the game, as he saved all kinds of hard shots from Bucko McDonald, Piper Bain and the other Orillia oldtimers. His net-minding opponent, Red Hartley, had a relapse from his last brilliant performance, blowing hot and cold.

Miss America

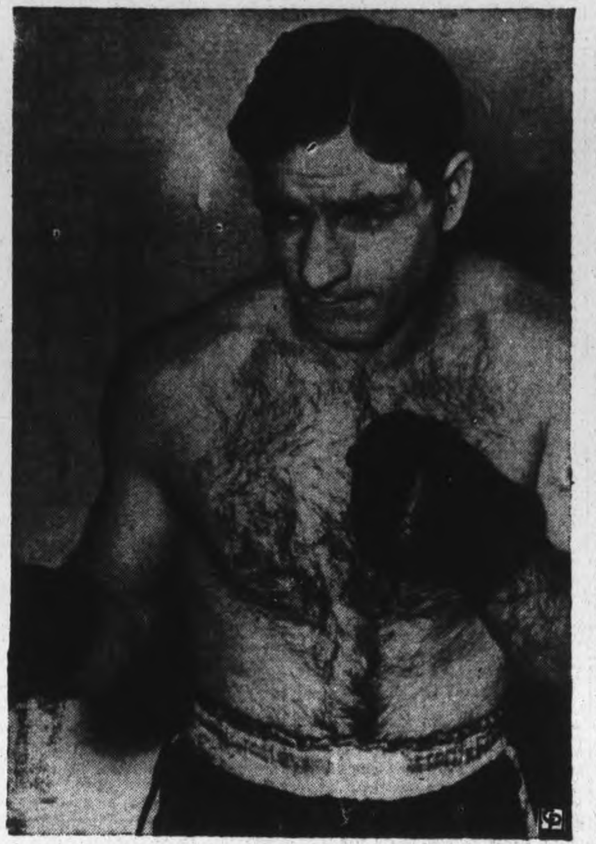
Bettina Returns Against Bivins



Melio Bettina, former lightweight champion, now a corporal in the U.S. army, returns to action in a 10-round bout against Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland heavyweight contender, at Cleveland's stadium tonight. Bettina, undefeated since Jan., 1941, has had but one fight since joining the army. Bivins, meanwhile, has conquered all in his path to reach the top circle of heavies.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

By The Canadian Press.

Possession of the Grey Cup, emblematic of the football championship of Canada, may be decided this year on a trans-Canada basis, if a whisper from Halifax becomes a demand for a crack at the Dominion title in a semi-final or final fixture.

Long the home of English rugger, Nova Scotia has developed enthusiasm for the Canadian grid sport through the invasion of the Atlantic area by former Ontario players of renown as members of the armed forces. Last fall a three-team league operated successfully and the stage is being set for another schedule this year, with team practices due to start tomorrow. Royal Canadian Navy has the largest coterie of Ontario graduates in Bob Isbister of Toronto Varsity and Argos; Frank Morris, Steve Levantis, Pat Reid, Jack Wedley and Jack Plaxton of the 1942 Toronto Navy cquad; Al Leonard, scoring ace of the O.R.F.U. with Hamilton Wildcats last season; Tiny Herman of Ottawa Rough Riders; and Dick Pawley and Scotty Wright, also of the Hamilton Wildcats. Another navy team at Deep Brook, N.S., boasts of Jack Edwards of Queen's and Argonaut fame, and Mike Hedgwick, formerly Hamilton and Sarnia. The Maritime command, R.C.A.F., has Bill Stukas and Art Evans, both formerly with Toronto Scullers, as its imports.

Low Category.

After being discharged from the United States Marines for physical disability, Frankie Sinkwich, former all-American halfback at Georgia, last night signed to play with Detroit Lions of the National Pro Football League and immediately reported at the club's training camp at Grosse Ile.

Southpaw Fritz Ostermueller, 36 years old today and married, left the Brooklyn Dodgers last night for the army induction centre in Chicago for his second and final medical examination, having passed his first test there last June.

Somewhere in England, more than 3,000 persons witnessed the final softball encounter for the reinforcements units championship. Members of the winning team included Maj. F. L. Fisher, Kingston; Lieut. R. A. Gault, Cornwall, and Cpl. J. D. Childerhose, Oshawa. The runners-up included Sigmn. W. S. Harshall, London, Ont.; W. J. Yank, Kitchener; L.-Bdr. L. D. Marchant, Windsor, and Gnr. E. M. Oliver, Napanee.

Series Even.

Centralia R.C.A.F. evened the Senior "B" series of the Western Counties Baseball Association by trimming Dresden 5-4 yesterday at Centralia, forcing a third game which is likely to be played in London. Pat Sheehan, formerly on the Brooklyn Dodgers' reserve list, twirled for the Fliers.

Scheduled to join the Cleveland Indians Friday, Pitcher Steve Cromek of the Baltimore Orioles found himself reclassified 1-A by the U.S. selective service yesterday. Also recalled from the Orioles, Pitcher Ed Klieman was reduced to category 4-F.

Golf Foundation.

The formation of the American golf foundation was announced yesterday at Chicago by George S. May, sponsor of the Tam o' Shanter golf tournament. The venture, financed by May will devise ways and means for private golf clubs to operate at a profit.

Outfielder George Case of the Washington Senators last night won a $100 war bond before the American League tilt in the U.S. capital when he broke the record for circling the bases, doing the 120 yards in 13:5 seconds, three-tenths of a second faster than the old mark set by Hans Lobert of the Cincinnati Reds 23 years ago.

Dies In Prison.

A classmate of Gen. Douglas McArthur at West Point and an outstanding army athlete 40 years ago, Col. Paul D. Bunker was reported dead in a Japanese prison camp after being captured at Corregidor. Bunker was twice named for the all-American football team by Walter Camp.

Although he has been in a batting slump, Luke Appling of the Chicago White Sox continued to lead the American League hitting parade for the season with .321, six points ahead of Dick Wakefield of Detroit, according to league figures released last night.

Torrid Fights Shape Up For 2nd Spots

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

In the absence of anything resembling a pennant race, the major leagues are offering the next best thing—a spirited scramble for second place in both circuits.

However, the struggle between Washington Senators and Cleveland Indians in the American League and between Brooklyn Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds in the National is just as torrid as if the stake were first place.

Senators, who finished seventh a year ago, in the last five days have put on a spurt of five consecutive victories. This drive, coupled with a double setback for Cleveland last night, was enough to place Washington again in the American League's runner- up spot. A single by Gerry Priddy in the seventh inning knocked in the deciding run for a 3-2 victory against Boston Red Sox in a night game.

At St. Louis the Indians were tumbled twice by the Browns 3-0 and 7-1 in a twi-night double-header and dropped back to third place by a game and a half.

Gets 2 Homers

Steve Sundra held the Tribe to four hits and Vernon Stephens, shaking off his slump, hit two home runs to win the first game. Stephens also knocked in two runs with a double in the second game.

The second place Brooklyn Dodgers were blanked 3-0 by Boston Braves and saw their margin over the idle Cincinnati Reds shaved to half a game.

Rookie Rex Barney suffered his first loss since joining the Dodgers although he pitched four-hit ball. His nemesis was Chet Ross, who drove in one run with a single and two with a homer.

In the only other senior circuit encounter New York Giants and Philadelphia Phillies, already scheduled for a game at 11 o'clock (EDT) this morning, struggled to a 4-4, 10-inning tie in a night game that was called by baseball curfew rules at 1 o'clock this morning after twice being interrupted by weather. As the result today's game at Philadelphia was made a morning doubleheader.

New York Yankees downed Philadelphia Athletics 6-5 and Detroit divided a doubleheader with Chicago. The White Sox took the first 7-1 and the Tigers the second 7-5.

Health Survey Reveals BigImprovement

Hotels and beverage rooms were all found in satisfactory condition as reported by Sanitary Inspector R. M. MacPherson to the Board of Health, last night. His visits of inspection were made in company with Dr. R. A. Kelly, M. O. H.

"The kitchens, refrigerators, dining rooms, sanitary facilities and sleeping quarters were all well looked after, clean and in good condition. The sterilization of eating utensils in both kitchens and beverage rooms was being done satisfactorily."

Three new permits were issued to dairy farms to deliver milk for the city's bottle trade. They were granted following inspection and a reasonable assurance that the milk would be produced in a clean and sanitary manner.

Restaurants and booths "were well attended to last month. Some work is being done at present in determining methods of securing the sanitization of ice cream scoops. "It is felt that the present method of dipping the scoop into water is inadequate and with the recent development of a tasteless, odorless and powerful chemica ldisinfectant improvement can be brought about. To this end we have had a number of specimens of the water analyzed and through the co-operation of several managers we have established this chemical process. Its efficiency remains yet to be established.

The local slaughtering and meat packing plant was inspected in company with Dr. Kelly in order to acquaint him with its arrangements.

The question of trailer camps or cabins has been thoroughly investigated by Dr. Kelly and myself. A suggested regulartory by-law has been drawn up for consideration by the Board of Health. In the meantime we are following out our practice of prohibiting such camps in the city. One camp was closed and three other such temporary living quarters were closed, the owners being advised to remove them within a reasonable time. The owners of three houses lacking adequate sanitary facilities have been ordered to install them."

Among other topical details of his work, Mr. MacPherson said bed bugs were found infesting four premises. "One of them has been treated with hydrocyanic acid gas. The other three are to be done shortly. Various other types of insects such as roaches, beetles, flees and mites have been the cause of annoyance in a number of other dwellings. Methods of eradication have been outlined to the occupants, who, in every case, have been grateful for the assistance rendered."

enlisted before their draft calls were at last on the way. Therefore, it is submitted that the draft, from the first of April to the end of August, netted nearly 25,000 for active service plus the 2,000 drafters who went active subsequent to their enrolment.

Isolationists Make Capital

Already it has been learned at the capital, and the Government is deeply concerned about it, that the news of the reorganization has given a lever to isolationist, Roosevelt-hating forces in the United States.

Deliberately, at least so it is claimed here, these forces have misinterpreted the reorganization as meaning that Canada is reducing its army strength at the very time Congress is being called to consider the War Department's recommendation to draft men who were fathers before Pearl Harbor.

Army Headquarters spokesmen declare there is not the slightest suggestion in the Defense Minister's statement that the army strength is being sapped, except that "personnel not of age, rank or medical category suitable for operational duties and who are not required for less active posts in Canada will be discharged to resume civilian occupations and thus improve the manpower situation for essential civilian activities."

The only change in strength foreshadowed was the definite intimation, so clear that it was almost an announcement by itself, that the Canadian Active Army overseas would not be expanded beyond its five divisions, three infantry and two armored; and two tank brigades together with supporting ancillary troops.

And if many Parliamentary and other critics of the army program are speaking with authority, the cutting down of the army formations did not weaken the army — it strengthened it by carving it to a size that had relation to manpower resources and the co-ordinated needs of the other services and of industry.

It is believed that the Minister's choice of the word "disbanded" as applied to the three divisions was unfortunate. It could give the impression that the three divisions were to be written off, rather than to indicate a change in formation and not one of strength.

Nevertheless, in spite of the furor raised by the isolationist zealots across the border, it is pointed out here that Col. Ralston made it clear that top category men of the divisions "suitable for potential reinforcements will be absorbed into units or training or other establishments, and that general servicemen—and that excludes draftees—who are below category for operational duties will, as far as required, be absorbed in less active posts in Canada for which their physical category may be suitable."

It is the intention that a tidy little pool of high category manpower will be tapped by the transfer of these lower category men to less active posts.

By the terms of the announcement, relatively few draftees may expect release to civilian occupations. For example, they cannot apply for release on the ground of age, as they were called originally within defined age limits, and it is believed that the number who will have passed beyond the active service age limit will be relatively few.

Latest tabulation on army personnel statistics shows that, of 65,000 draftees, 50,000 are of A category and could be made available as overseas reinforcements if the Mobilization Act were invoked.

The same report states that 60 per cent of the general service personnel in home war establishments or on the staffs of training centres in Canada are below category A or more than 35 years old or both.

They are to be exchanged at Mormugao for approximately 1,250 United States citizens, 200? Canadians and 50 nationals of American republics.

Child Dispute Aired In Court

The Battle of Lundy's Lane was fought all over again in Police Court this morning when John Kelly was charged with assaulting Bobby McCaw, the young son of Albert J. McCaw. Both parties live on Lundy's Lane, North Monaghan.

W. J. Arthur Fair appeared for Kelly, who pleaded not guilty.

McCaw, father of the alleged victim of the assault, told the Court of difficulties between his son and the Kelly children of incidents of sand throwing and kitten-beating, and finally swore that on the Sunday in question he had heard his boy crying and on going outside he had seen Kelly strike the lad with a stick on the side of the face and afterwards strike him several times with his hand.

The case is proceeding.

Canneries Busy Packing Corn, Tomatoes

Canning factories in Northumberland are operating at capacity, packing tomatoes and corn, as reported in the weekly review by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Apple picking will be general this week. Many sows are being marketed in Peterborough, and little pigs are selling at lower prices.

Egg production in Prince Edward is gaining rapidly. Farmers are increasing their acreage of Fall wheat and rye.

Pastures in Glengarry-Stormont areas green and fresh as in June, and cheese boarded last week showed an increase for the corresponding period's output a year ago. Some of the counties report late potatoes hit by blight. "Growers who used Bordeaux mixture and copper lime dust have protected the crop remarkably well."

Prices for good dairy cows are proving an incentive to Grenville farmers to raise dairy calves and heifers. Many Frontenac farmers saved part of their 1942 seed grain for 1944 planting. Seed cleaned for 1943 was not used and will be held over. Ensilage corn is standing up well, and will be a heavy crop to harvest.

Weather in the Eastern counties has been generally adverse to harvesting. Rain last week permitted little or no threshing and grain in stook has a tendency to sprout. the blight on late potatoes is mentioned from most of the counties in the Eastern section of the Province.

Sowing of Fall wheat is general across the Province. Turnips are making good growth in Bruce and buckwheat is a promising crop in Halton. County reports generally indicate disappointment with the grain crop, especially oats. Haldimand estimates yields at 15 to 20 bushels to the acre, and quality "very poor." Early sown fields of Fall wheat in Middlesex are making good growth. Farmers are still buying Western grain.

P.C.V.S. Canteen Presented In Liverpool To Seamen

The ABOVE picture was taken in Liverpool, England, during the presentation of a mobile canteen, the gift of the students of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational Training School to the Seamen's Friend Society. The Lord Mayor of Liverpool presided at the ceremony and the presentation to Sir David Maxwell Fyfe, President of the Society and Solicitor-General of Great Britain, was made by A. E. Bryan, Canadian Trade Commissioner. The canteen is seen in the BACKGROUND.

Canteen Purchased By Students Of Collegiate Is Doing Yeomen Service Bringing Food To Sailors

The students of Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School should be deeply, if incidentally gratified by the publicity attending their gift of a mobile canteen to the Liverpool Seamen's Frietnd Society.

The presentation to Sir David Maxwell Fyfe, K.C., M.P., president of the Society, and Solicitor-General of Great Britain, received what the British would refer to the news of the event as "a good press." It was made by A. E. Bryan, Canadian Trade Commissioner, Liverpool, representing Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada, who was prevented from attending by prior engagements in London.

The Lord Mayor of Liverpool presided at the ceremony, and among those present were the Lady Mayoress of the city, Rear-Admiral J. J. Ritchie, Captain J. J. Yeoward, Commander Heaton, Helena Countess of Sefton, Major F. O. Taafel, of the U.S.A. Chaplains' Corps, T. N. Philip, chairman of the executive committee, Alderman Sir Sidney Jones, Rev. C. C. Dicks, who dedicated the canteen, and many others.

In a letter to Miss Alexandria Howson of the Collegiate staff, Mr. Massey wrote in part: "Invitations were sent through their respective headquarters to the ex-students given in your list. Unfortunately not one was able to attend, but Lieut.-Colonel Agnes Neill hopes to be able to inspect the canteen and learn something of the useful work it is doing for the seamen when next she visits Liverpool.

"I feel that the subscribers to your fund will be happy to know that their canteen will be doing yeoman service twenty-four hours a day bringing food and nourishment to tired sailors of the Navy and Merchant Marine, many of whom are Canadians. I should like to add my own sincere thanks to that of the Gordon Smith Institute for this generous gift."

First Duty as President.

In accepting the Peterborough gift, Sir David Maxwell Fyfe said it was a great pleasure that his first duty as president of the society was to receive this canteen. It provided a three-fold symbol of the great co-operation of Canada with the Mother Country, "of the debt we owe to those who go down to the sea in ships, and of the great work the Liverpool Seamen's Friend Society is doing."

At any moment, day or night, the society could deal with 1,500 seamen. It was an organization of efficiency and inspiration. It was with a sense of recognition of generosity that he accepted the canteen, knowing that every possible ounce would be got out of its working capacity and every possible use would be made of it.

In making the presentation Mr. Bryan said it was the 51st made by him to various organizations from the people of Canada.

"This is the third canteen that has come to you from friends in Canada, and, as many of you have been here on previous occasions of this kind, I am sure that some of you, at least, will tire of seeing my presence so often," Mr. Bryan said.

Outline of Peterborough.

"This canteen, as you will note from the inscription which it bears, comes to you from the students of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. For those who are not acquainted with Canada, I may say that Peterborough is one of the loveliest towns in Ontario, a town of some 25,000 population, 92 per cent of whom are of British origin, located 75 miles north-east of Toronto.

"Peterborough is situated on the Otonabee River, which is part of the Trent Canal system, linking Lake Ontario and Lake Huron. One of the notable features of this canal is that it possesses the largest hydraulic Lift Lock in the world.

Accused Admits Assault Guilt

A broken section of a cedar fence rail and a good-sized stone were carried into police court this morning by Provincial Constable Price Morris. They were intended as exhibits in a case in which Wilfrid McDonald, Peterborough, was charged with assaulting Pte. Gordon McNeal, occasioning actual bodily harm.

The weapons however were not needed, however, for when the case was called Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who appeared for McDonald said that his client was willing to plead guilty to a charge of common assault.

"This would be a long and tedious case," said Mr. Gordon "and if it were proceeded with it would bring out domestic details that might effect a possible settlement between the parties."

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., said that he was willing to agree to the charge being reduced.

Mr. McElderry made a statement to the court as to the circumstances of the assault which he said took place on the farm of Mrs. McDonald's father in Cavan township. McDonald, he said, resented McNeal being there and had struck the soldier over the head with a cedar fence rail, some five feet long. McNeal, he said, was knocked down and McDonald then threatened him with a stone.

Magistrate Langley without comment made the fine $20, with the costs amounting to $10.85.

Richard Heard Dies In Hospital

Farm implement dealer in Peterborough nearly twenty years, Richard C. Heard died at Nicholls Hospital early this morning. He was born in Hope township, son of Thomas Heard and his wife, Martha Chestnut, and moved with his parents into Smith township when he was about ten years old.

Mr. Heard learned the trade of blacksmith and carriage builder, and for more than thirty years he carried on that business at Bridgenorth where he lived. Coming to Peterborough thirty-one years ago he engaged in the farm implement business in a store on Water street from which he retired five or six years ago, and since then was caretaker of the Normal School. Mr. Heard's illness extended over nearly a year.

His wife, who was Mary Ann Northey, predeceased him fifteen years ago. Mr. Heard is survived by two sons, Clare and Roy of this city, and four daughters, Mrs. K. R. Whitaker, Mrs. Robert Kingston, Mrs. R. Delahaye and Mrs. G. Douglas, all of Peterborough, also by his sister, Mrs. Arthur Killingbeck, Wolfe street, and his brother Walter Heard of Smith township.

Mr. Heard was a member of George Street United Church of which he had been a steward for years and also assistant superintendent of the Sunday School. He was also a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

The funeral will take place Friday at 2 p.m. from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Ray Delahaye, 852 George street, to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. H. L. Roberts of George Street United Church will conduct the service.

Red Cross Group Repeats Aid For War Victims

On quite a number of occasions, the Red Cross Group of North Monaghan has given assistance which goes direct to the heart of the Empire at London, England, to render aid to the sufferers from air raids over Britain through the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund.

This is a work which definitely comes within the true sphere of Red Cross activities, and in this matter this particular group with Mrs. T. Monk as president has been among the leaders in this class of war workers in giving support to the local fund, which is particularly a city and district effort.

Their contributions based on the comparatively small number who belong, have always been on a fairly substantial scale, which is a good indication of the energy they are putting into the various works which they do on behalf of the war effort. Their latest contribution of $20.00 per Mrs. T. Monk and Mrs. J. Taylor is listed in today's receipts and marks at least six times a donation has appeared in this column to their credit.

St. David's Society.

By coincidence, another comparatively small group who have also been doing a fine work to assist in the war effort is also listed today, for the St. David's Welsh Society who are credited with $5.00 in this day's list has also contributed on quite a number of occasions to this fund, and like the previous mentioned group, their work has covered many other endeavors to give an assist to the war, among which has been the sending of assistance direct to their native hearth in Wales.

Then to add a tiger to this day's report, there comes another contribution in the name of "The extra cent a day" from E. A. L. and M., whose donation has regularly appeared every three months almost from the time that the fund commenced to operate, and if you stop to figure it out, a cent a day makes approximately ninety-one cents in three months, which they then complete by adding the necessary balance so as to keep it to the basis of giving every third month of the year.

These ladies, whose roots go back to the very spots which have been the scenes of Hun barbarism from the air, have shown a consistency worthy of emulation, for even the giving of this means something to them, who have not an overplus of this world's goods.

Range Pals' Bingo.

Preliminary announcement is made at this time of a bingo games to be held on behalf of the fund by the Range Pals, who have done considerable work which has been of substantial assistance to the fund on previous occasions. This event is to be held at the Rifle Range School on Friday, September 24, and anyone who has attended events put on by this group knows that they provide a good evening's entertainment, which are usually made the occasion for being of some service to others than themselves.

The North Monaghan Red Cross, per Mrs. T. Monk and Mrs. J. Taylor	20.00
St. David's Welsh Society	5.00

NightManoeuvre Held By Four Rangers Units

A compass night march of the whole battalion was held in the vicinity of the Rifle Ranges by the Prince of Wales Rangers (RF) Tuesday night. It was the first time that all four companies of the Reserves took part in such a manoeuvre operating as complete units.

Covering a course of some one and a half miles distance, the companies set out to separate bearings, at times criss-crossing each others' tracks, but despite the difficulties of following a course with no other guide than a compass and the fact that the night itself was ideal for this kind of manoeuvre, visibility being low, few miscalculations were made by the troops and three of the companies arrived at their destinations right on the beam. This was accomplished by one company in the face of an unforeseen hazard in the shape of the carcass of a cow, which being a bit "high," compelled the men to deviate a little for a few minutes from their proper bearing.

Practice in what is known technically as "back-bearing" was also engaged in by the battalion. Still with only the compass as a guide, this manoeuvre teaches the difficult art of retracing one's steps back to a given point.

Transport Work

A good deal of the emphasis in the parade Tuesday evening was placed on the transport angle of conducting operations in the dark. This involved a blackout drive, with practice in embusing and debusing and road-turning. Officers in charge of battalion training stressed the importance of all these night operations, inasmuch as errors on the part of a few men in actual encounters with an enemy might well seal the fate of a whole company of soldiers.

Returning to the city after the completion of the night's manoeuvres, the battalion was debused at St. John's church, and a route march was held from that point up to the Armouries with the Rangers band playing on the way.

It was stated this morning by the officers in charge of training schemes that more drills of the extensive type undertaken Tuesday may be held his fall while good weather lasts.

Sea Cadets Get 10-Oar Cutters

Peterborough's Sea Cadets will have the opportunity of learning the fundamentals of boat drill right on the home grounds. Two ten-oared cutters, supplied by the Navy for training purposes, arrived in the city Tuesday and were put in the water in Little Lake.

The boats, 25 feet overall and manned by ten men with a coxswain at the rudder, are of the same type as those used by the boys when they were at their summer camp on Minnicog Island. In them Sea Cadets will practice the manual of boat drill, and training in this particular work is in charge of Lieut. Terry Hall.

No time was wasted in putting the boats into use, and they were taken out for a turn Tuesday night. The Cadets who went along were boys who all had some experience of boat-drill while at Minnicog, but to many members of the Junior Navy this type of training will be entirely new.

It is planned to use the cutters on Saturdays for as long as weather conditions will permit during the fall.

City's Fuel Wood Supply To Be Kept For Emergency Use

The Special Fuel Committee of the City Council, which has been authorized to secure a supply of fuel wood, desires to advise the citizens that:—

1. The Committee has been successful in contracting for the delivery of a limited supply of fuel wood in four-foot lengths.

2. It is intended that this City supply of fuel wood shall be kept and used for emergency purposes only during the winter.

3. Those citizens accustomed to, or planning to, burn wood this autumn and winter must secure their fuel wood from the usual sources of supply or direct from the producers of fuel wood.

4. There is an urgent need that citizens should endeavour to supply themselves with coal and fuel wood now and that they not depend upon the City supply, which at best can only relieve emergency cases during the winter.

Miss Freda Held Speaks On Purpose of W.V.S.

Miss Freda Held was guest speaker on Tuesday evening at the first open meeting of the season, held by the W.V.S. in the recreation room of the Y.W.C.A., with Senator Iva C. Fallis in the chair. Miss Held was here in connection with the activities of "Volunteer Week" to speak of the W.V.S. and the opportunities for voluntary service which it offers.

Miss Held wondered if anybody had been affected by the war in this country, more than women, whose home responsibilities had been increased owing to the difficulty of engaging help and who had also shown and maintained an interest in the war needs of their communities.

"The W.V.S." said Miss Held, is "is not another organization and does nothing that is already done by some organization. The W.V.S. merely provides a central registry, were volunteer workers are listed according to their abilities, to be called upon when the need arises." She explained that any organization which co-operates with the W.V.S. can obtain workers through it when they are faced with a job for which they cannot supply sufficient workers from their own membership alone. It also serves to place the worker in the job where she will be happiest, and prevents the mistake of placing people at work for which they are not suited.

Miss Held said the publicity committee of the W.V.S. was an educational medium, the results of which would not always be seen at once. It should spread the idea of voluntary service, and the greatly increased need for it in wartime around the community so that organizations will see the importance of having a supply of volunteer workers to draw on instead of running their own few workers ragged.

30 Centres

The W.V.S. has now been in existence across Canada for 15 months, and there are already 30 centres registered, and as many more communities planning to establish them. Winnipeg, whose women saw the need for volunteer registration in 1939 and promptly established a central registration, has equipped an enormous canteen and recreation centre which is staffed entirely with help obtained through this registration. After the opening of the canteen the men of Winnipeg saw that there was a place for them in its operation and asked to be registered at the bureau. In Saskatoon the registration has spread beyond the city to the rural areas and a tremendous work has been done for the victory gardeners, in the gatheing and distribution of information.

Miss Held also spoke of the block plan, the system whereby a community is organized by blocks, each community having a chairman, under whom were zone leaders, and under them again the sector leaders who are the immediate contact with the block leaders. The block leader is chosen from those who live in the city block in question and organizes the volunteer work of that particular group of pepole.

She told how the block plan had proved invaluable in various communities as a means of obtaining and giving out information. In one community the M.O.H. was concerned over the question of diphtheria, and he prepared a questionnaire concerning immunization, and he used the block plan in his community to distribute and collect the questionnaire, seeing that each was correctly filed in. As a result complete information was acquired, and over 1,300 children were inoculated against diphtheria. Similar uses of the block plan have been made in other localities, and in another the government conducted an investigation to discover the best way of giving out information, discovering that most people learned best by word of mouth.

Speaker Tells Of Work At Leaders' School

Mrs. Wesley Rose, Morrow street, was hostess Tuesday night to the girls of the Jean Wagar Mission Circle, when they rallied for their first fall meeting.

An impressive worship service with "Stewardship of Time" as its theme, was led by Jessie Martin 1st vice president.

The Bible has much to say about the stewardship of money and possessions, and various passages of scripture were read to show that God had a plan for the use of time. These were read by Alma Hunter, Gladys Langton, Lilyan Huggins and Mrs. Sedgwick.

In presenting the department of Christian Stewardship Zetta Wood stressed proportionate and systematic giving as the best method for both the society and the individual. World needs can only be met by the consecration of money, and she asked, 'What kind of a giver are you?' Systematic or spasmodic; proportionate or temperamental; stingy or generous; resentful or joyous?"

Fall Rally

The president, Dorothy Martin, was in charge of the business program. She thanked the girls for their co-operation in carrying on the work during her absence. She announced the Circle Fall Rally to be held October 18 in Knox United Church.

A letter from the Presbyterial Circle Secretary, Mrs. Franklin Bannister, was read and some discussion regarding the efficiency contest, followed. An invitation for the October Circle meeting was extended by Jean Davis and accepted. The Circle year closing in December, it was decided to get in dues, donations etc., before the Christmas rush so that the treasurer could close her books.

A solo, "Teach Us To Pray" was sung by Mary Hanlon, accompanied by Gladys Langton.

Leaders School

A report of the school for W.M.S. leaders, at Whitby Ladies' College was given by Connie Wagar, Circle Secretary for the Bay of Quinte branch, who emphasized not only the social but the spiritual side of the school life.

Methods of work and study were outlined in detail with many helpful and practical suggestions for local application. Illustrating her informal report by the use of posters, photographs, scrap book and literature, Miss Wagar urged the members to plan attendance at this holiday school next year.

The president expressed the thanks and appreciation of the Circle to their hostess Mrs. Rose. Refreshments were served by the social committee, Gladys Latchford, Ellen Rutherford and Mrs. Sedgwick.

Music Teachers Plan Activities

Mrs. Jack Smith presided at the business meeting of the local branch of the Ontario Music Teachers' Association, held Tuesday evening at the Y.W.C.A. Delegates were appointed to attend the annual meeting to be held in Toronto in October. The president outlined the season's activities, which included lectures by Mr. R. L. Hale of the Collegiate staff, Mr. Christopher Wood of Port Hope and Dr. Charles Peaker of Toronto. The organization will sponsor Mrs. Agnes Logan Green in a piano recital early in the new year. A series of concerts sponsored by the Toronto Conservatory of Music over CFRB on Sundays at 4.00 p.m. were brought to the attention of the meeting. The next meeting, at which Mr. Hale will speak, will be on October 9.

George St. W.M.S. Hears Talk On Temperance

The main feature of the September meeting of George Street W.M.S. held in the Board Room on Tuesday was an address on "Temperance" by Rev. Dr. McLean of Bridgenorth. In introducing his subject he said that he was a Scotchman and a Presbyterian, with many years of experience with the liquor traffic and that there never was a time when the avarice and greed and influence of the liquor traffic preyed upon the appetites of weak men as at present.

Dr. McLean quoted from "Alice in Wonderland," "We must run very hard to keep where we are," then he referred to the great waste and expense and said "Enormous sums are being paid to clean up the floor without turning off the tap." A vote of thanks was moved to Dr. McLean by Miss E. Might.

The Bible reading was given by Mrs. F. Latimer and Mrs. Sandercock led in earnest prayer for sincerity and guidance in all efforts. The treasurer announced that $517 had been sent the Presbyterial treasurer. Mrs. J. W. Hales reported that her committee had made 121 calls and the community friendship committee, Mrs. R. Parnall convener, reported 15 calls in the homes and three at the hospital.

During the afternoon the meeting was favored with a solo by Miss Joy Walker, accompanied by Mrs. C. Renaud. Mrs. H. L. Roberts presided in the absence of the president.

Auxiliary Opens Fall Meetings

The September meeting of the Helen Roger Auxiliary of Knox United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Denike, 9 Burnham Court. The president, Mrs. H. Clegg, opened the meeting by reading the purpose of the W.M.S., and led in prayer. During the business period the stewardship secretary, Miss Mary Morton, read an inspiring letter on "Stewardship" by Miss Maud Love. The October meeting was then planned, and it was decided to continue the annual supper meeting and committees were appointed to arrange for the supper and the program. The worship service was led by Mrs. Clegg and followed the program in the "Missionary Monthly." Mrs. Clegg introduced the new study book, "For All of Life," by Dr. and Mrs. Wiser, and plans were made for the program for the year based on this book. Mrs. R. Hanson, who attended the school for leaders at Whitby gave some very interesting information and helpful suggestions on the use of the study book.

A schedule of the meetings to the end of October was drawn up. It was announced that Miss Grace Tucker, who has worked among the Japanese in British Columbia would be the speaker next Tuesday evening.

It was reported that an inter-denominational committee of the Young People's groups of the city was at work securing the names of young people who had recently come to the city and would supply these names to the various churches. Miss Margaret Harris was appointed to secure a list for St. Andrew's as soon as possible.

ENGLISH MORALE DURING WAR WINS ADMIRATION OF WHOLE WORLD

This Should Be a Lesson for All of Us; Praising People Helps.

The morale of the English people during the war has aroused the admiration and respect of the whole world. They have met danger, death, hunger and privation with a smile. They have had their homes shattered over their heads, their children maimed and killed before their eyes. People accustomed to lives of luxury and ease have lived in shacks and done menial toil, and yet through it all there has been no whining or complaining. They have met every hardship not only with courage but with humor.

An Englishman explains this phenomenon of human nature at its best by saying that when the Germans made their first air raid upon England and laid waste cities, towns and the peaceful countryside, no one had the slightest idea what the reaction of the people would be, who, for the first time, had death rained upon them from the skies. Could they take it? Or would they be so terrified, as the enemy hoped, that they would want to buy peace at any price?

The newspapers solved the problem. The next day, instead of printing heartbreaking accounts of the horrors, they filled their columns with tales of heroism of those who had forgotten their own loss and sorrows in trying to help others and who showed that, no matter what came, they had the courage to stand up like men and women and take it. And that set the pattern of behavior which a whole nation has followed ever since.

It seems to me that there is a great lesson for all of us in this story, for not only in great matters but in small we have an instinctive urge to live up to our blue china and be what people expect us to be. We have to justify our reputations, whether they be for saintliness or hoodlumism.

You can see this illustrated even in babies. When a little toddler falls and bumps his nose, if you say "Johnny is a brave boy. He never cries," he will bite back his tears and get up with a grin on his face. But if you say "Johnny is so sensitive. He can't bear to be hurt," Johnny will howl his head off.

Probably parents start many of the juvenile delinquents on their downward way by forever harping on their misdeeds, telling Bobby that he is a bad boy, calling Sam a bum, and saying they don't know what on earth will become of Sally because they can't do a thing with her. The result of which is simply to intensify the children's faults.

Bob feels that he has to sustain his reputation for badness by breaking windows and acting tough, Sam begins cultivating the technique of a tramp by staying away from school and refusing to keep himself clean, and Sally gets to going with the kind of boys and girls she should never know just to show her mother that she can defy her.

Not long ago I heard a conversation between two 8-year-old children, one of whom complacently said "I don't have to obey anybody or do anything I don't want to, because I am a problem child." And she will be not only a problem child but a problem woman, because she will always be trying to act as eccentric as people expect her to be.

Can anyone doubt that married people set the pattern for their mates, and that they get just about the sort of husbands and wives they demand? If a woman knows that her husband idealizes her and thinks she is everything that is sweet, lovely and good, she will bite her tongue off before she will go into shrewish rages. If he praises her good cooking he will never have to eat a bad dinner. And if he boasts about what a good manager she is that wife will pinch every penny.

But if he always wants to know why she doesn't look like Mrs. Smith and dress like Mrs. Jones, knocks all her faults, never praises any of her virtues, and lets her see that he considers her a poor makeshift of a wife, she ceases to try to please him, and becomes what he thinks she is.

Same way with husbands. The peevish, discontented wives who are always belittling their husbands and wanting to know why they don't make as much money as some other man almost invariably turn their husbands into failures, because they take away all incentive for them to struggle to succeed. It is the wives who are always telling their husbands how big and strong and wonderful they are who have the husbands who bring home the bacon, because their little women just knew they would do it.

So, it being true that people give us what we expect of them, how foolish of us not to call for their best instead of their worst.

Price Control and Rationing News

The Women's Regional Advisory Committee, Consumer Branch, Central Ontario, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, answers questions put to this paper regarding price control and ration regulations.

Q.—Is it legal for wholesale firms to sell to consumers at the retail prices?

A.—Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations make definite restrictions on direct sales by the wholesalers to consumers. However, the wholesaler who made a practice of retail sales before the basic period of September 15 to October 11, 1941, is permitted to continue this practice. Thank you for sending us the name of those concerned. We have referred the information to the Board's investigation department.

Q.—When I went to fill in my application for fuel, I was told I could not order coal from any other dealer. Is this correct?

A.—This is not a Price Board ruling. But since the coal trade is on a quota basis for domestic fuels, they feel they will do well if they take care of the customers they had last year without taking on any new ones.

Q.—Could I now obtain canning sugar coupons for a new boarder who did not apply for sugar last April?

A.—No, it is too late now. Canning sugar application blanks were supposed to be filled in and returned to your local ration board office by April 15. Canning sugar requirements were allotted in June.

Q.—May I sell farm produce, such as eggs, to a neighbor for less than the retail or wholesale ceiling price?

A.—Yes, certainly. Ceiling prices are maximum prices.

Please send your questions and your request for Consumers' News or the Blue Book (the book in which you keep track of your ceiling prices) mentioning the name of this newspaper to:

Need Volunteers For Big Salvage Drive

Peterborough's big Salvage Drive, which begins this morning, and continues until the end of the month, will be the last Salvage Collection until next Spring, and it is hoped that citizens will cooperate by putting out their accumulated cardboard, newspaper, scrap-paper, magazines and other forms of paper, except cellophane and wax-paper, which are not salvageable. The Peterborough drive is part of nation-wide drive during the month of September to collect waste paper.

Not only is the paper needed, volunteers are badly needed to drive the Salvage Truck, and to sort and tie the papers in the warehouse preparatory to shipping them. Volunteers will be required only during the drive, and as long as is needed to clear the warehouse of paper, as the warhouse will be closed during the winter months, and until another drive is held. Volunteers for this important war work should telephone Mrs. R. Whalon, Homewood avenue. Phone 3044.

The salvage truck will cover the city in sections and citizens should watch the Examiner to see when their own district will be covered.

THE STARS SAY ....

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, September 16

FAIR AND steady progress should be made on this day, with things on which firm foundations have already been laid. If they are in connection with public ideas or spectacular strokes of genius. The test of practical and constructive skill or mechanical ability may be at issue and determine the measure of public approbation. This might take the form of a gift or pension. Be conservative at home.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which there may be some solid, enduring and worthwhile token of public or community appreciation. This is probably for skill, originality, ingenuity or creative work, developed by industry, and perseverance. In domestic, social or romantic associations sustain harmony and pleasant relations.

A child born on this day may be steady, persistent, practical, and possess brilliant ideas or mechanical skills insuring it worthwhile success and tokens of appreciation. It may enjoy gifts or inheritance.

MILLBROOK

Early History Of School Told To Women

MILLBROOK, Sept. 15—(ENS)—Mrs. D. L. Lunn was hostess for the September meeting of the Women's Institute held at her home on Saturday evening, with the president, Mrs. Delbert Olan, in the chair.

Discussion as to ways and means of raising funds led to the decision to have the secretary, Mrs. Henry Blakely, write the "Did I Say That?" program and see if it can be secured for a social evening in October. In addition dancing or cards may be used to round out the evening.

The treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Hilton, reported a total of $44.33 in the bank and over $3.00 realized from the orders given at the demonstration of brushes. The October meeting will be at Mrs. T. G. Harkness home, and the theme "Health." considered, with Mrs. D. L. Lunn in charge of the program.

First Cavan School.

Historical research was the study for September, Mrs. Hilton reading a paper on the first school in Cavan and Monaghan, which came into existence in 1822—121 years ago, and was located somewhere on the boundary between the two townships, probably near what has for generations been known as Waddells Corners.

The first teacher was Alexander Davidson, who came from Wexford, Ireland, where he had been employed in the Civil Service, and was known as a "man of learning." Mr. Davidson showed a concern for the spiritual well-being of the people of the neighborhood, as well as for their secular education, by starting a Sunday School, his activities being recorded in a petition he forwarded to the Lieutenant-Governor, dated December 24, 1824, in which he asked permission to secure Lot 4, 4th Concession of Monaghan, from the Canadian Land Company, "as it adjoins my place of residence."

Records do not show what eventually become of the cultured Irish gentleman, who showed such concern for the education and religious instruction of his neighborhood. But there are doubtless many citizens of Cavan and Monaghan Townships whose grandparents received their knowledge of "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic" at the first school established within the bounds of these two municipalities. Mrs. Lunn's paper had to do with the time when Millbrook had three fairs annually.

Uniforms Teach Dress Smartness

TORONTO, Sept. 15 (CP)—Toronto stylists say that Canadian women are going to be smarter, better groomed when this war is over, all because so many of them are now in uniform.

The wearing of the khaki, airforce or navy blue has made women—quite literally—pull up their socks, and the women themselves say they'll never go back to sloppy joes and drippy hair-dos.

Sgt. Marion Rowe of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division), a prewar dress designer herself says that women are going to have more respect for well-tailored clothes when they go back to civvies, now that they've realized their full value for daytime wear.

They will rush back to spike-heeled sandals for evening. "But women will never again forsake well-made oxfords. The services have taught them to look after their feet."

Lt. Mollie Entwhistle, B.E.M. of Hamilton, now with the C.W.A.C. in Toronto, said she thinks the services have taught women to dress well, economically. "They have found that one well-tailored suit can be worn anywhere, if it's becoming."

SO. Kathleen FitzMaurice, Vernon, B.C., expressed the opinion that uniforms have taught women to wear clothes better. "No more debutante slump for us," she said. "The services have taught us to stand straighter and walk more gracefully, and that improves any woman's appearance.

Vegetable Ferculum

The Latins called it a "FERCULUM", but who cares what it's called? Try it. Incidentally, you'll be surprised at the wonderful flavour H. P. Sauce also gives to meat, fish, fowl, stews, salads and sandwiches.

Melt 3 tablespoons of shortening. Add 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper. Cook for 3 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons of flour. Mix well. Add 2 cups of canned tomatoes. Stir until mixture thickens. Add 1 cup of corn niblets, 1½ cups cooked rice, 1 chopped, hard-cooked egg, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, pepper, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons of H. P. Sauce. Blend mixture and place in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with ½ cup of grated cheese. Bake in a hot oven 400 degrees for 20 minutes.

NEXT TIME you buy coffee, get Maxwell House. Once you've tasted the smooth, full-bodied goodness of this delicious blend of coffees you'll sing its praises.

For wartime reasons Maxwell House is now packed in bags—in an All Purpose Grind only and at a lower cost to you.

This new grind is suitable for all ways of making coffee—coffee pot, percolator or glass coffee maker. If using a glass coffee maker, you may prefer to brew the coffee a little longer.

So Many People Prefer Maxwell House—Here's Why:

1. It's blended from rare, extra-flavor coffees, selected for fuller body and more mellow smoothness.

2. Roasted by a special process that captures completely the extra goodness of this fine blend.

IN MEMORIAM.

JOHNSTON.—In loving memory of Arthur T. Johnston, who passed away one year ago, September 15, 1942.

A helping hand to all he knew,
He was so kind, so generous and true,
On earth he nobly did his best,
Grant him, Jesus, heavenly rest.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Two Sons, Arthur and Edwin.

McGILL. — In loving memory of our dear Mother, Susan Elenor Jane Ruttan, wife of Herman McGill, who passed away September 156, 1942.

As a dear mother and wife,
We think of her so often
In memories that are fond and true
There wasn't a thing too big or small
That she wouldn't do for all.
It's sad but true, and we wonder why
The best are always first to die.
Quickly and quietly came the call.
Her sudden death surprised us all;
We have lost, but God hath gained
One of the best the world contained.
—Sadly missed by Husband and Family.

BLODGETT—In loving memory of Mrs. Alice Blodgett who departed this life September 15, 1942.

We mourned for her in silence,
No eyes can see us weep
But many a silent tear is shed
While others are asleep.
—Ever remembered by her daughter, Mrs. Peters and Family.

always a great tourist attraction. The Kawartha Lakes lies close by, and are favorite grounds for both fishermen and hunters, particularly to our good friends, our cousins to the south of us.

"Peterborough lies in the centre of a rich mixed farming and dairy district. The town is very well laid out, with 17 churches, 11 schools, 3 hospitals, 7 beautiful parks, and more than 70 important industries giving employment to 5,000 to 8,000 persons. We find manufactured here electrical machinery, dairy machinery, cereals, worsted yarns and goods, clocks, prefabricated houses, canoes, paper, carpets, and a number of other articles.

"Although all these firms were busy on peaceful pursuits up to the outbreak of war, they are now almost entirely engaged in the production of the sinews of war. Peterborough has sent many of its sons and daughters to join various units of the Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force, many of whom are already in the United Kingdom and have been here for some time, waiting their turn to get a crack at the enemy.'

Canada's Contribution.

Mr. Bryan improved the opportunity of the Liverpool ceremony to review at some length and in detail Canada's contributions in men and materials and finances to the Allied cause. He explained especially the Empire Training Plan costing $2,400,000,000 of which Canada has contributed substantially more than half, the phenomenal growth of the Canadian Navy and its Merchant Marine, and the vast production from the industrial front.

"This year, 1943, we will produce in Canada munitions of war to the value of $3,700,000,000 compared with $2,600,000,000 in 1942 and $1,200,000,000 in 1941. In other words, we will produce well over three times the total value of all the munitions and war materials supplied by Canada during the four years of the last Great War. Our war weapons have been shipped to every theatre of war in the following proportions: 30 per cent to the Canadian forces at home and abroad, 50 per cent to the United Kingdom and British combat areas and Russia, 20 per cent to the U.S.A., Australia, China, etc....."

Mr. Bryan discussed the categories of industrial output, ships, shells, guns, explosives, farm products, motor vehicles, airplanes, and so on.

"When I think of what my country has achieved on the financial front I cannot help but be proud. During the first two years of the war we loaned Great Britain over $600,000,000 free of interest. Last year we gave the Mother Country a present of one billion dollars, and this year we have laid an equal amount to assist Great Britain and the Allied Nations. Where is all this money coming from? It has all been provided by our small nation of 11½ million souls. You will be surprised when I tell you our total expenditure this year will amount to $5,500,000,000, which averages something like $156,000,000 a day, and is three times the total cost of our war effort plus demobilization during the whole four years of the war. Seven times as many people pay taxes now as before the war, yet I am glad to tell you that we hear very little grumbling from the Canadian people.

"This mobile canteen reminds me of the fact that Canadian citizens have given privately from their own pockets over $700,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring canteens, ambulances, medical supplies, hospitals, most of which has found its way to this country. Every single week that goes by the Canadian Red Cross Society in Toronto packs 80,000 parcels for British prisoners of war, each one of which weighs 11 pounds and contains essential food products. The expense entailed in this connection alone amounts to $200,000 a week, and proves, if any proof were necessary, that Canada is just as much interested in these brave but unfortunate prisoners as are the people in the United Kingdom.

Crude Vocabulary No Social Asset

Old Acquaintances Are Snobs?

Frozen by a couple who were once her friends, she'll weep on her pillow tonight—"Snobs!"

She'll never realize it was her vocabulary that repelled them, for she imagines that her "Where are you RESIDING?" and "I always RETIRE early" are ultra-refined.

But discriminating people don't use such pretentious words. They say, simply, "GO TO BED" and "LIVING." To them an affected speaker appears ill-poised, of poor background.

The oddest part of it is, people who "converse" rather than "talk" are the very ones who make crude errors like "borrowed off" for "borrowed from" and "leave go" for "let go."

While avoiding such obvious slang as "guy," they still give themselves away with "soup-and-fish" for "formal dress," and "gadget" for —almost everything.

Yet anyone can learn to speak in a cultivated manner. Our 32-page booklet helps you enrich your vocabulary, lists frequent mistakes in English and pronunciation, with correct forms. Explains words often mis-used.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service for your copy of HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR VOCABULARY. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE HIM WASTE ONE

TRUMPS bunched against the declarer in the hand of one defender can terrify many players. Others take such a line-up in stride and make the opponent waste one of them by forcing a lead at the close of the hand which compels the waste of an apparently certain defensive trick. Making such tactics work depends generally on eliminating other suits. As the dangerous defender finally gets into the lead, he can do nothing but lead one of his trumps.

With different vulnerability, East might have tried a sacrifice of 5-Hearts. South wished he had when he first realized his situation after winning the first trick with the heart A and leading to the spade A. It appeared as if the defenders would score a trick each in diamonds and clubs, plus two in spades, but the spade losses were cut to one by a nice end-play.

To the third trick, South led his club Q, letting the K win and ruffing the returned heart. The club J was overtaken by the A and the 10 used for a diamond discard. The diamond K was taken and the Q led, which West took with the A. He returned the diamond 10 for a ruff by South, who then put West in the lead. Holding only the spade K-Q-10-5, he led the 5 to West's J-9-8-7. The latter could get only one trick and then had to pitch away from his J into the K-Q-10, making the contract.

Synod Requests Bible Training In High Schools

TORONTO, Sept. 15—A motion that the Church of England in Canada request Provincial Ministers of Education to take steps to include Bible teaching in the curricula of public and secondary schools, and that heads of other Christian communions be requested to take similar action, was carried unanimously yesterday by the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, in the fourth day of its eight-day session at Trinity College.

The motion, made by Judge G. W. Morley of Owen Sound, was one of many passed during the day's discussion of the report of the General Board of Religious Education, presented by the Board's general secretary, Canon R. A. Hiltz. Others urged the extension of Christian education in adult and youth groups, and improved training for group leaders.

More than half the Canadian boys and girls of public school age are out of touch with any church, the report said.

"We have placed the child in the forefront of society, in recent legislation, yet one of the most serious of the question before us is the decline in Sunday school work," said Dr. S. H. Prince, Halifax.

"The Church must interest itself in all education, not just religious education," he said. "It must play a great part in the formation of public opinion in adult, rural, vocational and all other aspects of education."

Bible as Literature.

"When the Bible is read in high schools as litertature, it should be made clear that that is not religious education," warned Canon W. H. Davison, Montreal.

Stressing the importance of having the best men and women as teachers in the schools, he said: "Teaching is the impact of personality, and teachers should have the right Christian background."

Christian instruction is already given in 1,900 classrooms in Ontario, the report said. Rev. J. H. Craig of Vancouver, however, said: "Judge Morley's resolution is merely the expression of a pious wish. British Columbia law forbids the introduction of any religious instruction in any school or university, and we can't see any way of getting around it."

A new departure in Christian education came with the passing of a motion to study the relationship existing between the Church and the universities. "This is a vital field which has never been touched," said Rev. E. S. Read, Verdun.

Many speakers stressed the importance of 'teen-aged boys and girls to the Church, and a motion by Bishop A. H. Sovereign of Athabaska that the Synod call on bishops and clergy to enlist the interest of young people in the Church was carried.

The report's announcement that children under 12 in church organizations had donated $100,000 to missionary funds in the last six years met with the disapproval of Rev. A. Gardner, Charlottetown. "There is altogether too much emphasis on raising money," he said. "The children should be trained to give systematically and regularly, but the amount should not be stressed."

"The only solution to our Sunday school problem is having fewer, better-trained teachers in charge of larger classes," urged Canon C. A. Moulton, Toronto, during a debate on group leadership. "Today we have a great many well-intentioned teachers, but too often they are lamentably incapable and cannot meet the demands on them."

In 1940 he received the Canadian Efficiency Medal and soon after was promoted from Major to Lieutenant-Colonel. He was appointed Brigadier in September 1042.

His wife and son, Peter, 10, live in Trenton.

Co-op Needed To Subsidize Small Farmer

OTTAWA, Sept. 15 (CP).—A Federal Co-operative Act to define the principles, rights and place of co-operatives in the Canadian economy is needed "at once," the Canadian Federation of Agriculture said in an interim statement of principles of post-war reconstruction for agriculture submitted yesterday to the agricultural sub-committee of the Parliamentary Committee on Post-War Reconstruction.

"The right of co-operation to distribute savings to the members who have earned them has been challenged, and this strikes directly at the foundation of the co-operative movement," the Federation's submission said.

"This is very important, because co-operation will assume a larger role than ever before in the post-war world. If it does not, then we may look in vain for a new world order."

Co-operative Needed.

Canada, the interim statement said, "would be well advised to go 'all-out' in encouraging people's co-operative as a positive feature of reconstruction policy."

It suggested that equality for agriculture should eliminate the need for consumer subsidies in food products, since the price of farm products should be such as to reward the farmer adequately for his labor. Consumers of farm products should not be encouraged to expect to obtain food products below an exchange value that is fair to the producer.

"In our opinion," the Federation said, "some subsidies at the present time are having that effect."

It was suggested that the extension of rural electrification, together with far-reaching plans for the improvement of rural housing, "could well be included in any public works program undertaken to supplement private enterprise in the transition period."

Too Expensive.

The conviction was growing, the statement said, that with power machinery coming into fairly general use the earning power of the small family farm with diversified operations will be unable from now on to support the overhead in farm machinery required and desired by the farm operator.

The co-operative use and, possibly, the co-operative ownership of power machinery represented a proposal with distinct possibilities. Federal and Provincial governments should study, experiment with and encourage the best of such proposals.

Any reconstruction program should provide for meeting the farm debt problem by raising the relative earning power of agriculture, furnishing adequate debt adjustment legislation, and establishing credit facilities specially suited to the needs of primary producers and the co-operative movement.

HAVELOCK

W.I. Transplants Royal Oak Tree

HAVELOCK, Sept. 15—(ENS)—The transplanting of a Royal Oak tree, the seedling of which came from the Royal Oak Forests in England at the time of the coronation in 1937, took place at the Women's Institute meeting on Monday afternoon.

The Institute president at that time was Mrs. John Armstrong, and it was she who cared and nurtured the seedling since its presentation to the Branch by Mr. T. P. Lancaster. At present the tree is about two feet high and is a perfect specimen. On Monday, it was transplated to the centre of the plot at the west side of the town hall by Mrs. Armstrong, who is leaving shortly to make her home in California.

The vice-president, Miss E. E. Wright, presided over the meeting. The treasurer reported a bank balance of $21.54, and also that the library grant for $10.90 had been received.

Made Donations

Copies of "Home and Country," and "Conserve by Canning" were distributed to the members. In a letter from the department it was stated the donation to the Jam for Britain Fund had been used, and suitable labels, with the name of the branch on, had been shipped overseas.

Regarding the short course "Remodelling of Clothing" no definite fall dates could be set by the department unless the branch was willing to change until winter or spring. The cemetery committee reported favorably on the work, but several changes were suggested to take effect next spring. A Hallowe'en dance was set for Friday, October 29, the hall and music already arranged for.

Red Cross Shower

Six months ago the Institute decided to dispense with lunch for the summer months, but it was resumed again, with Mrs. H. Hoard acting as convener for October. Mrs. A. Anderson announced the shower for gifts for Christmas boxes for the Red Cross next Tuesday, which are to be sent to hospitals in Newfoundland.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson gave a splendid talk on social welfare as it affects the youth of today, reminding his audience that war had boosted juvenile delinquency 45 per cent. The increase is noted particularly in the larger industrial centres where temptation for stealing, manslaughter, receiving stolen goods, false pretenses, drunkeness, fraud, arson, forgery and major conduct problems are more prominent he said.

Mrs. D. J. Holdcroft gave a vocal solo "My Task," accompanied by Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson at the piano. Mrs. James Freeman gave a comic recitation, "Story Of An Irish Girl."

Red Cross Reports Urgent Need For More Donors At Clinic

Donations at the Blood Clinic on Monday held at the same general level which has prevailed through the summer months and which was supposed partly due to the influence of summer holidays. There were 66 donors all told, with Canadian General Electric again the best represented and again by a sizeable margin. The Blood Clinic is anxious to see an increase in the number of donors, whose contributions are urgently needed, and it advises that prospective donors may give their names and addresses to the staff of the Clinic, who will then arrange appointments for them.

Shipping Group Wants Air Lines

LONDON, Sept. 15 — (CP Cable) —A second major British Shipping Company will seek powers to operate air lines, it was announced today.

Furness Withy and Company announced that its shareholders will be asked at extraordinary general meeting in London October 8 to sanction provisions authorizing carriage of passengers, goods and mails by air.

The resolution will also seek powers to establish airlines between any countries or places, to build, buy or charter aircraft of all kinds and to construct and maintain airfields and stations.

The action followed the recent announcement by the Cunard Steamship Company that it will ask similar powers from its shareholders at a meeting at Liverpool on September 27.

Larger Lake Trout For Georgian Bay

TORONTO, Sept. 15—(CP)— D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries for Ontario, said last night efforts will be made to increase the size of lake trout used to stock Georgian Bay and Lake Huron.

He said he gave this assurance at a conference here with a Bruce Peninsula delegation headed by Bert Golden, Tobermory, and John Matheson, Southampton.

"Full consideration will be given to the delegation's request that larger fish be used to stock the waters," said Mr. Taylor.

He added that it is a question whether hatcheries can provide larger fish for stocking purposes. About 8,000,000 fingerlings now are used to stock the waters.

Subsidy Granted On Sausage Meat

OTTAWA, Sept. 15 —(CP) —The Prices Board announced to-day the establishment on a monthly basis of a subsidy on the meat ingredients used in the making of bologna-type sausages and weiners, with the payment for the period Aug. 23 to Sept. 30 to be two cents a pound. The October subsidy will be announced later.

The announcement said the subsidy will not be paid in cases where the total profits of a business are higher than "certain established levels."

The subsidy will be paid only on what is commonly recognized by the trade as bologna type sausage, namely, ring, ham and bung bologna in artificial casings or waxed bags.

The announcement said manufacturers wishing to claim the subsidy may get forms and full information from Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation, Ottawa. The number of the claim form is V4.

Group Housing Priority Now Rescinded

OTTAWA, Sept. 15 (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe announced last night that it had become necessary substantially to reduce the number of construction control licenses issued for dwellings and certain other projects because of the scarcity of certain building materials, including manufactured equipment for installation in new houses.

"It is recognized that in certain areas, seriously overcrowded as a result of the war program, some new housing may be necessary," Mr. Howe said in a statement.

"But the scarcity of materials has become so serious that all but absolutely essential construction must be postponed. Without such postponement, builders throughout Canada would face the probability of not being able to complete the construction and equipping of dwellings already started.

"Because of the changed circumstances, it will no longer be possible to continue granting the priority assistance for group housing which was announced last spring." No licence for a dwelling will be granted unless the structural size and material specifications are kept to a minimum.

Mr. Howe warned against starting construction before issuance of a licence. "In certain parts of the country builders have undertaken projects without a construction control licence," he said. "Apparently they do so in the hope that the licence can be obtained before their expenditure exceeds the $500 maximum for unlicensed construction.

"But in so doing they are contravening the wartime regulations. The fact that the construction has commenced will have no bearing on the decision reached by construction control as to the granting of a licence."

ALLIES DRIVE HUNS BACK AT SALERNO

Fuel Problem Nears Acute Point

Lumber, Pulpwood Production Fall Off Sharply

CHICAGO, Sept. 16 (CP)—Canada is experiencing a shortage of wood fuel "so serious that it assumes the form of national emergency," A. H. Williamson, Canadian timber controller, said here today in forecasting reduction in the production of pulpwood and other forest products this season.

As a "direct result of an over-strained manpower situation," Williamson told the National Hardwood Lumbermen's Association, reduction of newsprint output "appears inevitable." He emphasized that the burden of reduced production and increased lumber exports "has been borne in our Canadian domestic market."

"Increased exports of lumber from Canada (to the United States) might be possible if we could obtain increased production," the timber controller said, "but under present circumstances the requisite increase in logging could be made possible only by diverting men already engaged in the production of pulpwood, fuelwood and mining timber to the production of sawlogs.

Cut Newsprint

"As matters stand now, it is expected that production of pulpwood in Canada will be less than in 1942 when production was 1,000,000 cords less than consumption, the balance coming out of inventory.... The pulpwood supply situation in Canada is such that reduction in newsprint production appears inevitable, and certainly there is no possibility of transferring any large number of men from the production of pulpwood to the production of saw timber under existing conditions.

"Again, Canada is experiencing a shortage of fuel so serious that it assumes the form of national emergency. Only by a determined effort can the situation be improved this year, and here again it is simply impossible, in those sections of the country which depend heavily on wood for heating, to withdraw men from its production to increase the output of lumber. In the same way we cannot take men who are cutting pit props for coal mines away from their present occupation because we are faced with a shortage of coal as well as of fuelwood."

Italians Barred From St. Peter's

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept 16—(AP).— An Italian border dispatch to the Lausanne Gazette said today that German troops armed with anti-tank guns and machine-guns were preventing persons from entering or leaving Vatican City.

German parachute troops have mounted guard around Vatican City to check all contacts between Rome proper and the Holy See, it was reported. The dispatch said it now was impossible for faithful Italians to obtain permission to pray in St. Peter's. These measures were taken, an Italian crowd was told, to check the entry into Vatican City of anti-Fascists seeking refuge within its precincts.

The Lausanne Gazette said that German troops surrounded workers' quarters in Transtevere across the Tiber River in Rome, where "Communists, rebels and Socialists installed barricades in the streets and fortified their homes."

Flier Hides 30 Hours Under Burning Plane To Avoid Hun Capture On Italian Airport

By HAL BOYLE,
Associated Press War Correspondent

AN ITALIAN AIRFIELD, Sept. 16— (AP) — (The radio operator of the first American plane to land on an Italian field—it was on invasion day and the Germans still held it—told to-day how, after the Nazis shelled his ship with 88-mm. guns, he leaped through billowing flames to escape capture and lived for 30 hours under one end of a burning wing.

The British and German forces fought back and forth for control of the airfield while he lay under a searing hot wing with nothing to drink but a bit of brackish water from the plane's twisted four-gallon container.

"It tasted like ink, but it felt good. I was thirsty," said Sgt. Laurence Madison of Lyndhorst, O., who said he risked death to escape capture because "I would rather die than go to Germany and work in one of their factories."

Madison, who is married and the father of three children, still has blisters on his arm from the prolonged baking.

He and five other men were ferrying on invasion day and saw no signs of life when they approached the field at about 1,600 feet.

Just as the wheels touched the ground in landing, a German gun on the ground opened up and a shell smashed through the plane. His mates were captured.

Wavell Lauds Mountbatten As One To Finish Off Japan

LONDON, Sept. 16—(CP).—Field Marshal Viscount Wavell, Viceroy-designate of India, told the Pilgrims' Society today: "We shall use money against poverty, ignorance, unemployment and sickness at the same rate as against Hitler—when we pay our schoolmasters at a much higher rate and our lawyers perhaps at a somewhat lower rate."

Advocating a return to the "pilgrim spirit," he called lend-lease the "first attempt on a large scale for many years to put principles and men's lives first and money second."

The Viceroy-designate told the Anglo-American luncheon audience that the establishment of Vice-Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's East Asia command "will make Anglo-American co-operation even closer in India which is one of the principal bases for our common effort against Japan."

Hates The Japs.

"There can be no military or economic security for the east, for ourselves and for the world," he said, "until Japan is as thoroughly defeated as Germany."

Among the contents of a "mental handbag" he is taking to India, Sir Archibald said, "is a debt of hatred for a cruel, cold and treacherous people"—the Japanese.

Other contents, he added, include a love for India, considerable knowledge of the east and a conviction that British opinion wants to "give every possible assistance to India in her aspirations for full freedom."

He said, "We are approaching the end of the struggle with Hitler. We are only beginning the struggle to save civilization.... We shall many of us soon, I hope, be taking off our uniforms, but we must not cease fighting or let the sword sleep in our hands."

General Admires Canadian Units

By WILLIAM STEWART,
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE CANADIANS IN ITALY, Sept. 16 (CP Cable) —Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery told a group of Canadian officers and non-commissioned officers to-day that the war will be carried into Germany itself but until then it was premature to say that the end is in sight.

The 8th Army commander, paying tribute to the Canadians for the "great part" they took in knocking Italy out of the war, said it was a "great mistake" to regard the war as nearly over.

Gen. Montgomery spoke to the Canadians in a hill-top grove in the Canadian Headquarters area in Southern Italy. Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, Commander of the Canadian 1st Division, was at Gen. Montgomery's side as the latter recalled how a year and a half ago a Canadian Corps formed part of his command in Southeastern England.

Wanted Canucks.

"I like to feel I played some small part in fitting that corps, of which you formed a part, for battle," he said. "I used to hope the Canadians when they got into battle, would do so under my command. It was a great day for me when the Canadians came to the 8th Army.

(The Canadian 1st Division fought as part of the 8th Army in Sicily and is understood to be operating with the 8th Army in Italy).

"The day we started ashore on the maidland of Europe Italy unconditionally surrendered. When we look back over the last year or so there is no doubt the activities of the 8th Army played a great part in knocking Italy out of the war.

"The last two months have changed the whole picture of the war. The Germans have been put on the run in Russia. The Germans are on the run here. Italy has been knocked out of the war. The Canadians have played a great part in that."

Raid Berlin Montlucon Also Paris

Rubber Factory In France Main Target

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP)—Berlin was bombed by the R.A.F. last night in a widespread Allied aerial assault which included a heavy R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid on a vital rubber factory at Montlucon in France and followed evening attacks on Paris air craft plants and surrounding French air fields by U.S. aircraft making their first dusk flight.

It was the first attack on Berlin since the pre-dawn hours of Sept. 4 and presumably was carried out by the R.A.F.'s swift Mosquito bombers which pummel the German capital between the saturation attacks by fleets of four-engined craft.

Other R.A.F. bombers struck at additional targets in northwest Germany, the air ministry announced.

Supplies Tires

Montlucon, 43 miles northwest of Vichy, was the principal target of the night-flying formations which concentrated on a factory supplying much needed tires for Hitler's war machine.

R.C.A.F. headquarters announced the Canadian bomber group took part in the raids, losing one bomber. R.A.F. losses were seven bombers. One Canadian fighter is missing from intruder attacks on French airfields and transport targets.

The Vichy radio said the town of Chartres also was attacked, but the British announcement made no mention of this.

Last night's raid, first since the Sept. 6 attack on Munich, followed by a few hours the first after-dusk assault by an American force which raided the Paris area where the Hispana-Suiza and Caudron - Renault aircraft plants and a ball bearing works were the main targets.

At the same time German air raiders subjected suburban London to one of its severest bombings in months.

Last night's operations cost the R.A.F. eight bombers, one of them Canadian, and two fighters, one from an R.C.A.F. squadron. One enemy plane was shot down.

Although clouds made it difficult to see the results of the bombing at Montlucon, the communique said first reports indicated that the attack was effective.

Hit Airfields

While other night bombers were stabbing at Berlin and northwest Germany, R.A.F. and Canadian fighter squadrons attacked enemy airfields and transport targets in intruder operations over France.

The burst of widespread activity in the past 24 hours ended a lull in the extensive Allied air activities against western Europe which followed the climax of an eight-day non-stop offensive against the continent a week ago.

The U.S. raid on Paris marked the first time that Fortresses, Liberators and Marauders had joined in the same operation in the European war theatre and the first time they had gone out and come home after dark. Brig.-Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, commander of the U.S. 8th Air

New Offensive Successful Clark Says Bridgehead Safe

Aerial Barrage Sets Record Over Salerno Fight

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Allied Air Command threw every available fighter and bomber into the battle for the Salerno bridgehead for the second successive day yesterday and last night.

The second day of this record aerial assault found four-engined bombers assuming the role of mobile long-range artillery in close support of the ground troops, spraying bombs on communications, supply dumps and soldiers a short distance behind the front line in the sector where German armored troops have been attacking the Anglo-American 5th Army.

Eboli road junction—nine miles inland from the army's landing beaches—was the focal point of the attack as the R.A.F. and United States medium and light bombers and dive-bombers carried out an unceasing dawn to dusk assault and kept up the pounding all through the night.

Nazi troops, as well as their ammunition dumps and transport, were unable to escape the devastating aerial blows. Dive-bombers destroyed 47 motor vehicles and damaged at least 13 others when they crisscrossed over a German bivouac area with machine-guns wide open. The pilots saw more than 1,000 troops fleeing for cover and many of them were killed or wounded.

Blocked Roads

The same group managed to block three roads with bomb hits, destroyed a bridge, strafed several big, six-wheeled German vehicles loaded with troops and blew up a supply dump near Picerno.

An official said that the bomb tonnage rained on the Germans was "vastly greater than anything ever dropped on a single target area before in this war theatre. It has been vastly greater than the tonnage dropped on Pantelleria, and the heaviest load of bombs dumped on that island before it surrendered with three times the tonnage ever dropped in an enemy raid on London."

German pilots again avoided combat wherever possible and anti-aircraft fire was relatively light.

Four Allied planes were missing from the two days' total of far more than 4,000 combat flights, a percentage of loss so light it amazed aerial combat veterans.

Kissing Ban

LONDON, Sept. 16—(CP).—When the safety committee of the Salt Lake City Council of Women recommended a moratorium on kissing for the duration of the war, two nations were aroused. The local doctors' consensus seemed to be that a ban might as well be placed on hand-shaking, buses, elevators, or any of the other necessary things of life—kissing included.

Russian-Jap Border Clash Held Significant

By JAMES WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer
(Formerly Head of the Associated Press Office in Peiping)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Speculation about a Japanese attack on Soviet Russia revived here today with unconfirmed reports from Chungking that a border clash—the first reported in some time—has occurred along the Mongolian frontier.

The Chungking report said the incident occurred north of Pailingmiao, a Japanese-controlled Mongolian desert settlement below the border of outer Mongolia, an autonomous republic dominated by Soviet Russia.

Pailingmiao is a strategic base position for the Japanese if they should be planning a lightning drive across the Gobi desert through Ulan Bator, the outer Mongolian capital, to cut the trans-Siberian line in the vicinity of Lake Baikal.

For the past several years this region of contact between the Japanese and Soviets has been relatively quiet, while incidents occurred frequently along other sections of the 3,000-mile-long frontier.

Opinions Differ

Conjecture among experts on Asiatic affairs here is by no means unanimous.

One group holds that the Japanese will not attack, having enough on their hands already with the growing power of the Allies in the Pacific and East Asia.

Another contends that while the Japanese well may be concerned about this, they are nevertheless in this war with the Germans and must realize that once Germany is liquidated the Allies can turn their full attention to the Pacific. And the Germans, this group argues, undoubtedly are pressing the Japanese for a second front against the Russians in the east which would divert much Soviet strength from the advancing lines in the west.

It is assumed that the Japanese would take such a desperate step purely in self interest, but there is some contention here that they may be reaching that stage.

Pit-Boy Released Miners To Return

NOTTINGHAM, England, Sept. 16.—(CP).— Sidney Page, the 16-year-old pitboy whose imprisonment caused 15,000 coal miners to strike, was released to-day, but a miner's superstition against beginning work on Friday threatened to prolong the walkout at least another day.

Page, who was sentenced to a month's imprisonment a week ago when he refused to obey a Labor Ministry order to work underground, was freed after he changed his mind, it was announced.

His release came too late for the strikers to return to-day.

British 8th Army Expected To Make Junction Soon

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 16 (AP)—British and American soldiers of the 5th Army have lashed out at the Germans, driving them back from the Salerno bridgehead, and have clinched their foothold in Italy, Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark announced to-day.

Gen. Clark launched his offensive this morning on the eighth day of the biggest battle yet fought in the Mediterranean, and threw the German armored forces back between the junction of the Rivers Sele and Calore north of Altavilla in the central sector of the 27-mile front.

Simultaneously, Gen. Clark, in an order of the day to his troops, declared: "Our bridgehead is secure. Additional troops are landing every day and we are here to stay. Not one foot of ground will be given up."

Arrive Soon.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army, racing northward toward Sapri, but 39 miles from the southern anchor of 5th Army's front was mentioned by Gen. Clark, who said "in a matter of hours its presence will be felt by the enemy."

A military spokesman said the Germans were in flight in the Salerno sector for the first time since the original landings eight days ago and that this morning's assault was "the first serious offensive thrust we have been able to make since getting on the beaches."

Reinforcements pouring into the bridgehead during the past 48 hours made the drive possible, he said.

Biggest Since Dunkirk.

The biggest beachhead battle since Dunkirk raged back and forth under the thunder of 15-inch guns from British battleships and the fire of lesser warships. Reinforcements poured into the area The Allied air forces threw all their might into the struggle.

Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's 5th Army, composed equally of British and Americans, now was the largest Allied force engaged in a single battle since the Mediterranean war started, and it was supported again yesterday by more than 2,000 sorties flown by the powerful northwestern African Air Force and separate raids by Middle East heavy bombers.

With unchallengeable control of the sea, the Allied exploited the advantage to the utmost by moving their mobile naval batteries up close to the blackened, smoking beaches and hurling tons of screaming steel into the teeth of the Germans. The British battleships Valiant and Warspite with their 16-inch guns joined in the bombardment.

No Retreat.

Predicts New Order

MILLTOWN, N.B., Sept. 16 (CP)—Premier J. B. McNair, speaking last night at the annual convention of the New Brunswick Federation of Labor, expressed hope that predictions of a new social and economic order will come true. "It will not be an easy thing to convince people that an economy which can finance and conduct war on the present colossal scale cannot manage and finance peace and prosperity," he said.

Red Troops Capture Novorossisk

Hope To Sever Remaining Railway Line

LONDON, Sept. 16 — (AP). — Russian forces have captured Novorossisk, the Black Sea naval base in the German bridgehead of the Caucasus, Moscow announced today in a broadcast.

Premier Joseph Stalin disclosed the capture in a special order of the day, recorded here by the Soviet Monitor.

Russian troops in the northern Caucasus co-operated with units of the Black Sea Fleet in the combined land and sea operation. The port was taken by storm to-day after five days of fierce fighting during which the Russians routed three German divisions, a Rumanian division and detachments of German marines, Marshal Stalin announced.

Red Army troops surging swiftly toward Kiev and Zaporozhe, key cities on the Dnieper River, were reported to-day to have ripped apart the German defences east of the river.

The Army newspaper Red Star said the Germans no longer held a continuous line.

Capture of Nezhim, a main bastion of Nazi defences before the Dnieper barrier, already has cut all but one rail link between the enemy forces operating in the central and southern sectors of the Ukraine. If the Red Army spearhead can place themselves astride the Kiev-Poltava-Lozovaya line before the autumn rains make large-scale military operations impossible, the Germans in the south would face the possibility of another defeat as costly as that suffered at Stalingrad.

Premier Joseph Stalin celebrated the fall of Nezhin in another order of the day, terming it "the most important centre of the Germans' defence on the road to Kiev."

Huns Lose 3,000.

The Germans left 3,000 dead on the Nezhin battlefield, many prison-

Showdown Near On Burma Front

By OLYDE FARNSWORTH
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHUNGKING, Sept. 13—(Delayed)—(AP)—A journey across India into China such as I have just completed ought to convince the most critical observer of the generally high quality of men and machines that the Allies are gathering for the approaching showdown with Japan.

Everywhere along the route I found a tense air of expectancy among men and officers. It is easy to believe that some Allied blow will be struck within two or three months — perhaps not the main event, but at least an important preliminary.

Much of the speculation pivoted on the still ill-defined role to be played by Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied commander in southeast Asia, and the possible direction and nature of the attack that he has been commissioned to direct. Some clarification is expected soon with Lord Louis' visit to Chungking.

The capitulation of Italy has spurred an anticipatory feeling. Amateur and professional strategists see the surrender of the Italian fleet as a sure means of bringing magnified sea power to bear on Japan.

Chinese Surprise 200 Japs

Heavy Casualties Inflicted By Raiders

NEW DELHI, Sept. 16 —(CP)— Chinese troops trained in India and led by an American routed a band of 200 Japanese in a daring foray into the wild Naga Hills of North Burma recently, it was announced today.

The Chinese were equipped at a Chinese-American training centre and were under the command of Brig-Gen. Hayden L. Boatner, of New Orleans.

The raiders pushed on behind enemy lines and blew up supply depots and bridges along the Japanese communication route. A communique said Chinese infantry and motor units were active.

Heavy casualties were said to have been inflicted upon the Japanese before the raiding force withdrew. Chinese losses were reported as light.

R.A.F. Beaufighters, in new attacks yesterday on Japanese road, river and Japanese communications in Burma, damaged more than 30 sampans on the Irrawaddy and Chindwin Rivers and an equal number along the Arakan coast, some of which were sunk, a communique announced.

An oil tank at Yanangyat and a 100-foot landing stage at Monywa were heavily attacked.

Hitler Miscues Putting Il Duce Back

Italy's Collapse Exposes Fascists As Governing By Gangsterism

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

One of the finest services Fuehrer Hitler could render the Allies is his revival of the fallen and dishonored Fascist regime under the control — or so the Nazis say—of its old master, Mussolini.

The United Nations had carried out their aim of smashing Fascism. The collapse of the incompetent and corrupt government exposed the Fascist rule to the world for exactly what it was—a dictatorship of gangsters.

Hate Mussolini

The vast majority of Italians, while heart-broken over the straits to which their country has been reduced by Mussolini's wickedness and stupidity, nevertheless have been rejoicing that they finally have been rid of this nasty old man who personifies the "soft underbelly of Europe." No price is too great to purchase freedom from such a tyrant.

Now along comes the arch gangster of them all and sets up a little puppet government in the name of Fascism. He tries to give it life by announcing that Mussolini himself is the Quisling of this revival — a statement which certainly requires proof before the world will accept it. At this writing the whereabouts of the ex-dictator is a great mystery, and it's even rumored that he's dead. If he is, the devil has a new pal.

Why it Hitler thus exhibiting Fascism in its nakedness and so taking the chance of weakening his own dictatorship? In the first place he is playing for time, trying to fool the world for a brief period into the idea that Fascism really isn't dead at all but is still a potent influence and a tower of strength to the Axis.

Watches Balkans

Hitler is particularly anxious to convey this impression to the Balkans. He is trying frantically to prevent further disaffection among his Balkan satellites, whose allegiance to the Axis has been due in considerable measure to Italian influence. He also wants to reassure his home front that all is still well in the Axis camp. And he figures that his ruse may provide some discouragement for Allied peoples.

It is a stunt which the Nazi dictator scarcely would try under normal circumstances. However, he is fighting with his back to the wall to save his own position. He can't have the slightest expectation of putting Fascism back on its feet permanently, or of preventing the Allied conquest of Italy.

Offered To Pay Dues

TRENTON, N.J., Sept. 16.—(AP).—The business manager of a Cannery Workers' Union Local, commenting on an allegation that the union had "compelled" soldiers working as volunteer employees in South Jersey tomato canneries to pay union dues, said to-day the soldiers had offered to pay the dues "and everybody was satisfied." Leon Schacter, an official of Meat and Cannery Workers Union Local 56 (A.F.L.), asserted the allegation was "a smear against union labor."

Italian Commits Suicide

Former Chief Shocked By Treachery

LONDON, Sept. 16 —(CP) —The German-controlled Italian News Agency reported to-day in a Rome broadcast that Marshal Ugo Cavallero, 63, former Chief of the Italian General Staff, had committed suicide.

Cavallero, who resigned his staff post last January, was among a number of leading Fascists reported arrested by the Badoglio Government following Mussolini's downfall. A German broadcast only last Monday said he had been freed by the Nazis.

The Stefani broadcast to-day declared that the Marshal, "not being able to bear the burden of dishonor and shameful treachery of his country, has committed suicide."

Known as the "businessman-soldier," Cavallero had divided his time in recent years between the army and large steel interests.

The Berlin radio reported to-day that Mussolini, acting as head of the new Fascist "Government," the Germans says he has established in Northern Italy, had named Lt.-Gen. Renato Ricci as Commander of "voluntary militia for national security."

Ricci was one of the Fascist leaders reported arrested after Mussolini's downfall.

OCCUPATION OF ISLANDS IN DODECANESE BY ALLIES IS REPORTED

Eighth Army Drives 25 Miles Still 50 Miles Off Salerno

Claim Allies Capture 2 Greek Islands

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(CP).— Allied occupation of two island outposts to the Balkans, in a move strikingly similar to operations which preceded the invasion of Italy, was reported in dispatches from Ankara to-day.

One account said that the Greek island of Samos and the Dodecanese island of Lero, off the Turkish coast and about 150 miles north of German-held Crete, were occupied three days ago — the day before Great Britain's 9th Army was reported to have embarked from its Middle East bases 400 miles across the Mediterranean in Syria and Transjordania.

Other dispatches to London morning newspapers reported that both islands had been turned over to the Greek Gendarmerie by Italian occupying forces after their country surrendered to the Allies.

Seaplane Base.

Lero, 30 miles from the Turkish mainland has a valuable seaplane base and also was used by the Italians as a base for light naval craft. Samos is a much larger Greek island, 40 miles further north, with two of the best airdromes in the Aegean Sea. Both islands are north of the Italian island of Rhodes.

A Stockholm dispatch yesterday said the British 9th Army, headed by Lt.-Gen. W. H. Holmes, had sailed from its Middle East bases after two years of intensive training. Mystery as to the exact whereabouts of the 9th Army, coupled with reports of successes by Yugoslav guerillas who are in touch with the Allied Command, suggested a possible Allied invasion of the Balkans was shaping up.

There was some question in London as to whether Greek forces on Samos and Lero are loyal to the Allies or to the Greek puppet Government set up by the Axis.

Military circles also questioned whether the islands would be found particularly useful for large scale operations, such as an Allied invasion of the European mainland.

Occupation of the islands, however, if true, was regarded here as a portent of things to come.

German reinforcements, meanwhile, were reportedly being rushed to the Nish-Vardar line in the Balkans with the evident intention of strengthening the strategic base of Salonika, Grecian gateway to the Vardar Valley. Additional Nazi divisions were reported moving southward across the Danube river via Dobrudja to positions on the Black Sea coast.

Reports of guerilla activity received here by the Yugoslav information bureau told of the capture of Gorazade on the Drin river, cutting the railroad line between Belgrade and Serajevo. This line was the only one the Germans could use for troop movements south toward the Adriatic Sea.

Yugoslavian advices insisted that partisan forces had occupied more than 100 miles of the Dalmatian on the Adriatic, opposite despite a Berlin radio claiming that the entire Dalmatian and Albanian coastline was in German hands.

Brenner Pass

Because the Brenner Pass, vital supply route between Italy and Germany, contains the only rail line between the two countries, its strategic value is great.

British Eighth Army

where he told the troops that every soldier must fight to the last and that there must be no withdrawals.

Casualties in this battle have been the heaviest of any in the Mediterranean fighting.

At least four German divisions had been identified in the action against the 27-mile front, and more were being brought up. It was probable that as many as five had been employed in the all-out effort to smash the Allied grip.

The magnitude and fierceness of the battle undoubtedly was draining German strength even more rapidly than Marshal Erwin Rommel's effort in Africa.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army, racing dramatically up the Italian west coast, with the Italian toe behind it, passed through the ancient fishing village of Scalea, approximately 50 miles airline southeast of Acropoli, the southern anchor of Gen. Clark's position.

No Resistance.

Gen. Montgomery's dust-stained warriors were meeting no opposition in the dash that had carried them more than 15 miles in the last 24 hours.

The Middle East Air Force bombed railway and highway communications at Potenza, 50 miles east of the Salerno battlefield, in raids on Tuesday night and yesterday.

American heavy bombers bombed the freight yards there in daylight, scoring direct hits on a bridge and causing severe damage throughout the yards. R.A.F. Liberators and Halifaxes attacked a road junction the previous night.

Although Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters communique said the 5th Army had strengthened its hold on its bridgehead and was being reinforced and supplied, it was not considered likely that the critical phase would pass until it had been joined by the 8th Army to form a great unified force.

Meanwhile, the communique had nothing further to report of the British force which landed at Taranto and sliced off the Italian heel with the capture of Brindisi and Bari in a flanking drive on the east side of the peninsula. These troops were believed to be fanning out through the lower backbone of the Appennines.

The shifting nature of the hard-fought enggaement was indicated by earlier field reports that the Germans had been forced to make a limited withdrawal from the wedge they had driven at the centre of the Allied bridgehead near Eboli and apparently spent, were digging in in the higher ground, and by later reports that the German attack still was on the increase.

(A D.N.B. broadcast from Berlin said German troops had stormed Persano, at the mouth of the Sele River, indicating a claim to the splitting of the Allied front. Seventeen American tanks were destroyed and 700 prisoners taken, the broadcast asserted.

(The German communique made no such claim, but declared "landing heads were further narrowed."

Lose Big Transport

("When storming Altavilla, Americans lost numerous dead and prisoners," the communique, adding that the German air force destroyed an 8,000-ton transport and damaged 11 more ships of the landing fleet.

(The German International Information Bureau in a propaganda broadcast asserted that Allied shipping losses in the Gulf of Salerno from Sept. 8, the first day of operations, until Tuesday totalled four cruisers, 2 destroyers, 20 merchantmen and 15 landing boats sunk, and eight cruisers five destroyers 99 transports, tankers and freighters damaged.)

Stressing that the 5th Army was composed equally of Britons and Americans and that "there should be no attempt to make this either an exclusively British or American show" a headquarters spokesman said:

"I would like to emphasize that this Salerno attack always was considered a hazardous enterprise and hard fighting was expected. The element of surprise was missing and from the first day the fighting has been furious."

The Germans were rushing all available troops to the front despite the terrific Allied air bombardment and they were seizing Italian guns and munitions to throw into the fray.

Britons and Americans, on the other hand, were using some of the most daring tactics of the war and accepting "suicide" assignments as a matter of course, headquarters reports said.

A spokesman in London warned, however, that the struggle has a long way to go and would not be ended even by the arrival of the 8th Army which includes the Canadian 1st Division, or at least units of it, which is racing northward toward Sapri, 39 airline miles away.

At last reports the 8th Army was considerably more than 50 road miles from Salerno, but Gen. Clark may have had later information when he said its presence would be felt in the matter of hours.

Gen. Clark's order of the day said: "I am highly gratified by the efficient manner in which the British and American troops have worked side by side. Their performance has justified the confidence placed in them by the people of the United Nations. They know that we shall drive on relentlessly until our job is done."

Naval Support And Planes Playing Big Part

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 16 (AP)—The British-Canadian 8th Army, driving northward to the relief of the Anglo-American 5th Army has reached Scalea on the Italian west coast, approximately 50 miles airline southeast of the Allied bridgehead at Salerno, it was announced today.

The 5th Army commanded by Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark strengthened its hold on the Salerno sector with further reinforcements, a communique said, and the unloading of supplies was continuing.

Standing offshore, British and American naval units, including an unspecified number of battleships, poured heavy shells into German lines in the foothills in support of the land forces at Salerno. Thousands of aircraft also joined in the fray, smashing at the enemy back of and immediately on the battleground.

"Naval and air support are playing a great part in assisting the consolidation," the communique said.

Nazis Withdraw

Field dispatches indicated the Germans already had made limited withdrawals from the wedge they drove into Allied lines early in the week.

General Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army veterans, who had sped about 15 miles up the coast from Belvedere since the last official report, still are "pushing north." the communique said, after passing through the ancient fishing village of Scalea.

As in the previous 24-hour period, all aircraft in the northwest African airforces once again blasted German front line positions and communications, particularly in the Eboli area.

Safety Groups Review Year's Progress

A dinner meeting of combined accident prevention groups, namely Punch Press, Metal Machine Group, Woodworking Group, and the Food Group, was held Wednesday at Kawartha Golf Club with 109 persons representing 17 different firms in attendance. F. J. Overend, vice-chairman of the Peterborough and Lindsay section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association occupied the chair and in his opening remarks mentioned that this was the first meeting of this type to be held in Peterborough. He then called on George A Macdonald of the De Laval Company Limited, and chairman of the Metal Machine Group for his report on the activities of his group during 1943. Mr. Macdonald reported:

The Metal Machine Group made inspections of the following plants, the Genelco, De Laval Co., Ltd., Canadian General Electric, Western Clock and Outboard Marine, with an average attendance of 73 interested group workers. The efficiency of the group determined from the fact that we had an average of 11 suggestions per firm for the improvement of safety methods. Of this number the plant management of the different firms adopted 16 of the 18 average.

This I consider demonstrates the need to continue the present group inspection with perhaps a few added notations gained from our past experience.

Mr. Overend then called on A. Griffin of the C.G.E. and chairman of th Punch Press Group for his report:

Punch Press Accident Prevention Group held a dinner meeting at Kawartha Club on October 8 last year with about forty members present and representatives from seven different firms.

At this dinner meeting a committee of six was appointed to assist in arranging and conducting future meetings of the group.

As a group there were five visits to four different companies during the season, Westclock, Peterborough Lock, De Laval visited once, and the C.G.E. visited twice. The attendance for the five meetings amounted to 236 persons.

Numerous ideas were suggested in each plant and the majority acted upon immediately through the cooperation of the management in each plant. From the records it has been worthwhile, for in Peterborough in 1941 there were 9 lost time accidents due to punch presses and in 1942 10 lost time accidents, and in 1943 there was one lost time accident up to May.

Thomas Taylor of the Peterborough Canoe Company, Ltd., chairman of the Woodworking Group, then gave 1942-1943 report:

The Woodworking Group held 8 meetings during the past year. We visited the following plants: Canadian General Electric Co., Quaker Oats Company, Collegiate Institute, Woodworking Department, De Laval Company, Peterborough Lumber Company, and Peterborough Canoe Company.

The average attendance at the meetings was 58. We had an average representation from 8 plants at each meeting. We visited six plants in the city as already outlined and we offered an average of 16 suggestions for the improvement of machine guards and other hazards in each plant visited. In all cases where it was possible the suggestions were carried out.

The committee of this group were H. H. May, Canadian General Electric Company; Arnold Shallhorn, Canadian Ventilating Shades; Walter Bannon, Outboard Marine; Mr. Grey, Peterborough Lumber Company, and myself, Peterborough Canoe Company.

Our opening meeting for this season will be held at the Peterborough Lumber Company's plant on Monaghan Road Thursday, October 14, 1943. We would like to have a full attendance at this meeting so that we can elect a new slate of officers for the new term. Before closing I would like to offer my personal thanks to the Woodworking Group Committee who I had the pleasure of working with during the past season, their splendid spirit of co-operation was an inspiration.

Fred Innes of the Canada Packers Ltd. the newly elected chairman of the Food Group made a few remarks regarding the contemplated program to be carried out by this group during 1943-1944.

H. A. Cranfield, Chairman of the Central Ontario Division was called upon and in his remarks he gave an outline of the proposed "Safety Week" to be held in Peterborough commencing October 11 through October 16, according to Mr. Cranfield's statements this promises to be an eventful week for Peterborough. The City Council are giving their full co-operation to safety in the home, in the schools and on the streets and A. Sands has been appointed by the City Council as chairman to take care of the interest of safety in the city working in conjunction with the executive members of the Peterborough, Lindsay section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

Mr. Fred H. W. Brooks, Divisional Secretary outlined the program in connection with industries and Safety Week. He advised the meeting that all plants in Peterborough would be visited by some member of the executive committee to outline the activities expected of industries during Safety Week. There is to be plant meetings, inspections, safety committee meetings and meetings of the groups represented here tonight.

During the general discussion it was suggested that an Accident Prevention Group composed of women workers be formed as soon as possible. It was decided at this meeting to form a Transportation Accident Prevention Group with Mr. T. McCabe a chairman, this group will be composed of all bread drivers, milk drivers, truck drivers, etc.

Councillor J. Dutton introduced Dr. Kelly M.O.H. of the City of Peterborough who offered co-operation of his department during the Safety Week.

Liberals Dominate Election At Prince Edward Island C.C.F. Draws Perfect Blank

Third Consecutive Victory For Grits Whose Majority Was Whittled Conservatives Take 9 Seats For Gains

CHARLOTTETOWN, Sept. 16—(CP).—Another four years of Liberal administration was in the books for Prince Edward Island today after a general election that whittled down the Government's lopsided majority but left it with at least a two-to-one majority over the Progressive Conservative Opposition.

In winning their third straight contest in yesterday's balloting the Liberal forces swept 20 of the Legislature's 30 seats on the basis of unofficial compilations, while another eight went to the Progressive Conservatives. The Opposition was leading in the two seats that had not been conceded in last night's count.

Third party attempts to gain representation in the House were thrust back by the electorate, which relegated every one of nine C.C.F. and three Independent Liberal candidates to the foot of their respective polls. All lost their deposits.

Tory Leader Returns.

Premier J. Walter Jones, who led a group of 23 Liberals in the House at dissolution, was returned personally with all his Cabinet except one. J. P. MacMillan, a former Premier, also was re-elected personally with his party's representation at least double over the four seats it held at dissolution. Three seats were vacant then.

On the basis of the incomplete count, the Progressive Conservatives gained seven seats from the Liberals, while the government party took two seats formerly held by Progressive Conservatives.

Held 27 Seats

In the election four years ago the Liberals took 27 of the House seats, while the Conservatives won three. The government forces at that time were under Premier Thane Campbell, who went to the chief justiceship of P.E.I. last May in a move that brought the 65-year-old Jones to the premiership.

Premier Jones, a farmer, campaigned chiefly on the record of the Liberal party in the eight years since it took office in 1933. Among his pledges was that of establishing a ministry of reconstruction to deal with post-war problems.

Only member of his cabinet to be rejected at the polls yesterday was Hon. A. W. Matheson, minister without portfolio, who trailed R. R. Bell by 49 votes in the complete unofficial tabulation for the 2nd Queen's Councillor election. In this riding the Liberals also lost the seat that had been held by George Kitson, who was headed by a Progressive Conservative.

Reporter Now Hun Prisoner

OTTAWA, Sept. 16 — (CP). — Cmdr. Ernest H. Bartlett, R.C.N.V.R., of Toronto, officially reported August 19 as missing on active service, now is reported a prisoner of war in Germany, the Navy announced yesterday.

Also reported a prisoner of war in Germany is Lieut. P. R. Thompson, D.S.C., R.C.N.V.R., Oakville, Ont., who was reported August 20 as also missing on active service.

Cmdr. Bartlett, a former member of the editorial staff of the Toronto Telegram, was widely known as an author and newspaper and magazine writer before enlistment. He is attached to the directorate of naval information.

Lieut. Thompson has what is described officially as a "brilliant" wartime record of service with the light coast forces of the Royal Navy and has been mentioned in honors lists three times in little more than three years.

New Trial Ordered In Murder Of Baby

KINGSTON, Sept. 16—After over eight hours' deliberation the jury in the trial of Mrs. Annie May McCumber, 45, charged with the murder of an infant child in March, announced disagreement last night. A new trial was ordered by Mr. Justice McFarland. The defense contended throughout the eight-day trial that the woman was mentally ill.

Mrs. McCumber was charged with murdering a baby born to her daughter, Mrs. Rita Dagar, now out on bail on a charge of birth concealment. Walter Haley, 21, alleged father of the child, is charged with murder and will be tried at the Spring Assizes in February.

Councils Show Interest In Having Airfield

COBOURG, Sept. 16.—(ENS).—Proposed air field for Cobourg and Port Hope has already received the attention of the town councils of Cobourg and Port Hope and of late has aroused the interest of the counties council of Northumberland and Durham, it was revealed at the postponed meeting of the town council here.

Mayor Jack Burnet told the council that he had discussed the matter with some of the counties council members and that they had shown keen interest in the proposition. The mayor said that the mayor of Port Hope had not yet communicated to him the result of the council's decision in that town.

Ready Next Month.

Council was informed in a letter from the Naval Board of Canada that the Cobourg Corvette would be finished in October and would likely call at Cobourg on its way to the sea. The letter was passed on to the Corvette committee.

Resolutions of sympathy were passed in connection with recent bereavements of Councillors Rollings, whose son was officially declared dead by the R.C.A.F. and to Councillor Glenn whose mother died last week.

Mrs. Muriel Edwards of the Corvette committee wrote the council to explain that as an orchestra was not available at the time, the Corvette dance could not be held last Saturday. It is being held on September 17.

Dump Job.

To a question from Deputy-Reeve Robert Love as to who is to look after the dump, the man who has the garbage collection contract or the man who has been doing the work at the dump in past months, the mayor explained that the garbage collector had to look after the dump. However the town man previously on this work had been retained for a few months in order to clean up the heavy accumulation of garbage after the first few weeks of the garbage collection.

Chairman of Finance, Reeve Roy Dodge asked the committee chairmen to check over their expenditures in order to see how the totals compared with the budgeted amounts. Councillor W. Wenn told concil that building permits should be so worded that no more eave troughs be drained into the overburdened sewers of the town. It was pointed out in reply that the matter was covered in town by-laws and that anyway no new buildings ere being permitted.

No action was taken in regard to Councillor DeLany's suggestion in regard to town hall fire escapes. Councillor DeLany declared that fire escapes should be installed on the town hall, but council replied that they were not obtainable now.

Butter Output Up 2 Percent

TORONTO, Sept. 16 — (CP). — Ontario produced 9,029,000 pounds of butter during August, an increase of 2.2 per cent over August, 1942, the monthly dairy report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture stated yesterday.

In 1943, to the end of August, butter production in the province totalled 60,165,000 pounds, a 6.0 per cent increase over the same period in 1942.

Ontario cheese production, 15,956,000 pounds in August, was down 6.2 per cent from last year, while the total of 71,017,000 pounds for the first eight months of 1943 is a 2.03 per cent decrease from 1942.

In August, 390,067,000 pounds of milk was used in the production of milk and cheese.

Stockinger Appeals

COBOURG, Sept. 16—(ENS). — Frederick Stockinger of Cobourg, who unsuccessfully sued the town last May for damages to his property which he blamed on a town sewer blocking up, has entered an appeal, it was announced here by his solicitor. The original suit was heard before Mr. Justice Kelly, who found that the damage was caused by the plaintiff's own drain becoming blocked.

CAMPBELLFORD

Special Prizes For Students At Fall Fair

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 16 (ENS)—Some of the final details of the Seymour Agriculture Society's fall fair to be held here on September 28 and 29 were ironed out at a directors meeting here this week.

Already action had been taken to make horse racing more attractive to owners of good trotters by upping the total prize money to $450 this year. President W. W. Archer presided for the meeting and revealed arrangements had been made to have a public address system installed on the grounds for the fair. In order to get the grounds and buildings in shape for the event directors planned to hold a bee on September 18 to do the necessary repairing and painting.

One decision that will be greeted with enthusiasm by young farmers was the announcement that calves and foals would be shown and judged in the main ring as one of the special attractions instead of being relegated to a less important position as formerly.

Good Report

A report was given on the street dance which yielded a total of $315 to the Society. Proceeds from the bingo tables operated in connection with the dance were turned over to the local branch of the Canadian Legion for their cigarette fund and this plus contributions made to Legion for their cigarette fund and this plus contributions made to Legion Cigarette Fund cans ($40) amounted in all to slightly more than $139 all of which will be used to buy smokes for boys overseas from this district.

At the suggestion of fair officials who early in the year saw an opportunity of increasing the interest of high school pupils by making provision and offering prizes for exhibits in home economics and shop work at the fair, a prize list has been completed by the heads of these two departments at the school. As has been done for several years in the school art exhibits the Agriculture Society is offering prizes dollar for dollar with the Board of Education.

Classifications in the Home Economics Department are as follows: Class apron and head band; woollen shirt or jumper; cotton blouse; child's dress; cotton knitting bag; knitted baby jacket or dress; men's socks, hand knit; helmet, hand knit; turtle-neck tuck-in; babies' flannelette jacket and bootees; sample of darning in a woollen sock; knitted sweater. Shop Work: (Draughting), circular objects; tabout stand; (Wood working), bench hooks, stepladders, tabout stand, drawing boards; (Metal work), shelf brackets, book ends, plumb holes; (Wood turning), candle sticks, smoking stand; (Rope work), four common splices.

Exhibition Head

William J. Murphy, president of the Lindsay Central Exhibition, and well known business man, extended a warm welcome Thursday afternoon to Premier George Drew when the fair opened.

Premier Drew Given Maskinonge At Opening Of Lindsay Exhibition

LINDSAY, Sept. 16—(Special)—The Lindsay Central Exhibition, the largest exposition to be held in Canada this year, was officially opened today at 2 p.m. by Premier George Drew. An unique ceremony was enacted during the opening when the premier was presented with a 24-pound maskinonge caught in Sturgeon Lake by Clare Western. The presentation took the premier completely by surprise but as he stated no other gift could be more fitting from the town of Lindsay, recognized as the gateway to the Kawartha Lake district.

With the cancelling of the Canadian National Exhibition and other leading Fall Fairs, Lindsay has assumed the mantle of "Ontario's leading Fair" and is setting new highs in entries and prize list values. The dirt track at Lindsay Fair Grounds was never in better shape for sulky speed trials, and prize money for the three-day program is at a new nigh. Some of the finest harness horses in the province will compete at the show, with classes arranged to give a wide range of trotters and pacers.

Today will not only be Citizens' Day, but will also be Children's Day and a public holiday has been declared for all district schools. Special attractions have been planned for the youngsters, and the junior fair events will be run off. The day will also be featured by judging of dairy cattle, climaxed by a grand parade of dairy type winners. Leading herds from across the Dominion will be represented in competition in this division.

Peterborough Day

Friday has been set aside as a day dedicated to the surrounding municipalities and mass delegations will be on hand from Peterborough and district councils. With no other fall fairs in the area, Lindsay Central Exhibition has been adopted as the home fair of Victoria County.

Beef cattle will be featured on Friday and there will be a parade of prize winning animals in this sections following judging. On Saturday there will be a parade of all prize winning livestock. Accommodation has been extended and improved in every department with new pens added to practically every livestock building. A new entrance has been provided near the pens to allow handling of exhibits without jamming up the main vehicle gate.

Conklin Midway

To accommodate the heavy traffic a special parking area of more than 10 acres has been set aside adjacent to the fair grounds while special police will facilitate traffic movement through the town. Saturday will be a general day with fair officials looking forward to a new all-time high in attendance which they hope will shatter the mark set at last year's closing day. Conklin Brothers carnival will feature a score of shows and games galore with the greatest concentration of amusement rides ever seen in the district.

Two of Canada's finest military bands will be on hand for the fair, with the Royal Canadian Air Force musical unit from Toronto and the Kingston Military Band. In front of the grandstand there will be a special program headlighted by Patricia Bailey, songstress of radio fame and Al and Bob Harvey, comedy artists. Dr. E. W. Nickle, world famous whistler will also be present and will render special selections which he has used in helping to produce pictures for the Walt Disney Studios. There will be several "extras" at the Fair for War service purposes, including Lindsay Rotary Club and Kiwanis Club draws.

Additional seating accommodation has been arranged for the grand stand and the new dining room located just inside the main entrance will be in operation. With accommodation for more than 300 persons at a sitting, the new hall is one of the best quipped at any fall fair in the province.

CAMPBELLFORD

Governor Rice Visits Rotary

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 16 — (ENS)—H. E. Rice, District Governor of the 168th District, paid his official visit to the local Rotary Club here on Tuesday, after the club postponed its regular luncheon in order to facilitate his initial visit.

The founder-president of the Huntsville club, who was mayor of that city for nine years and in addition was a former president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, was introduced to members by President S. Stuart. His remarks were designed to be of particular interest to his Rotary audience, and he recalled several of the principals of Rotary, which if adopted on a world wide scale would make for closer understanding between men and make future wars less likely.

Governor Rice paid tribute to the enthusiasm and spirit of fellowship which he found in the local club and he emphasized that Rotary was based on fellowship which must necessarily followed by service. Rotary was one of the greatest ideals ever conceived by men, and adequate proof of this was seen from the international character of the organization and he felt that it could make a great contribution to the post war world. He said Rotarians were already doing much but should be thankful for the opportunity that had been provided to them to offer service.

Back Appeal

Following the announcement of several weeks ago that the Club would whole heartedly back the annual canvass staged by the Salvation Army for their Red Shield Home Front Appeal, the following officials of the campaign, which will begin to work towards its $1,300 objective on September 20, have been appointed:— Honorary chairman, Mayor F. Malta's Day Of Rejoicing

Malta on Sunday celebrated the surrender of Italy and the Italian fleet. Many Italian warships were in sight and others arrived at night and the great ships are today lying in the harbour as if humbly saluting their conqueror.

Raids on Malta started within a few hours after Mussolini's declaration of war, and for more than two years that little stronghold was raided at least four times daily. Her capital was pounded to pieces. Her churches and historic buildings are in ruins, and her people, scantily fed, lived a part of every day in caves.

Their courage and their spirits never flagged. Their long days of darkness brightened and from there torpedo planes and bombers went forth to sink Axis shipping and to shoot down Axis troops in Libya, Egypt, Tunisia and Sicily. War in the Mediterranean changed for the United Nations. The Axis were driven from Africa, Sicily, only sixty miles away, was captured, and the few Axis raiders of late, who sought to bomb the island, were hammered down by returning Allied airmen. These were changed days and Malta had won. We cannot praise enough the British and Canadian fighters in the air and ground and the native Maltese who made her their "unsinkable carrier."

A Neighborly Act

Premier Drew of Ontario has been consulting with heads of Quebec departments in regard to problems of mutual interest that will arise after the war.

No detailed information has been given out as to the subjects under discussion so that it is possible to judge of the practical value of the ideas that may emanate from these conferences. It is possible that in the long run the discussions will not go very far toward solving the problems that have been considered. But at least something has been gained in the direction of interprovincial goodwill by Premier Drew's action in visiting Quebec and talking across the table with the heads of the provincial administration in that province.

It so happens that the political viewpoint of the two provinces at the present moment differs sharply but Quebec and Ontario are neighbours. They have much in common in the way of provincial problems. There are many things in which they are jointly interested. It is the act of a good neighbour, as well as sound common sense, therefore, to go down and talk things over with our fellow-Canadians in Quebec.

If nothing else comes of it than a little better understanding between the governments of the two provinces, Premier Drew has made a helpful contribution toward that unity that is so essential in this country if we are to pull our full weight in the war and if we are to have any success in grappling with the onerous problems that will crowd in on us during the post-war reconstruction period.

Army Change Distorted

Isolation zealots in the United States have been quick to seize upon the announcement of Defence Minister Ralston, of a re-organization of the Home Defence Force in Canada, as a reason for not inducting fathers into the American armed forces. Representative May, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, along with Senator Burton Wheeler and others, have grabbed Canada's move as a heaven-sent argument in their favour against calling up men with families.

It is unfortunate that Col. Ralston used the word "disband" when announcing the change in formations of the 7th and 8th Divisions and part of the 6th Division. Nevertheless in spite of all this furor raised by the isolation zealots across the border, Col. Ralston made it clear that top category men in the divisions "suitable for potential reinforcements will be absorbed into units or training or other establishments and that general servicemen—and that excludes draftees—who are below category for operational duties will, as far as are required, be absorbed into less active posts in Canada for which their physical category may be suitable".

By the terms of the announcement few draftees may expect release to civilian posts, for they were called within the defined age limit and not many have passed beyond the active service age. As to category, latest tabulation of army personnel statistics shows that, of the 65,000 draftees, 50,000 are of A category and can be made available as overseas reinforcements once the Mobilization Act is invoked. The same report states that 60 per cent. of the general service personnel in home war establishments, or on the staffs of training centres in Canada, are below category A, or more than 35 years old or both.

Representative Harold Knutson, Minnesota Republican, has this to say: "If Canada doesn't need any more men at the fighting fronts neither do we," and asks, "What happened to Winston Churchill's speech in which he said, 'Send us the tools and we will do the job'?" Canadian officials in the United States have been quick to notice the misrepresentation by Congressmen of Canada's reasons for the move, and have pointed out that there is not the slightest suggestion in the Defence Minister's statement that the army strength is being sapped except that personnel, not of age, rank or medical category suitable for operational duties and who are not required for less active posts in Canada will be discharged to resume civil occupations.

President Roosevelt at his press conference lauded Canada's effort, and advised everyone to look up the comparative wartime exertion of Canada and the United States production totals, the number of men in uniform and in war plants. On a per capita basis he inferred, Canada's war effort is ahead of that of the United States.

"Canada At War," a publication of the Canadian Government, lists the size of the Canadian army, navy and air forces as of August at "more than 720,000". In addition we have in service more than 40,000 merchant seamen, and of the 4,240,000 Canadian women over 14 years of age, 1,152,000 are in industry with "more than 31,367" in the armed services. This is the record of a country with a population of 11,500,000 and we feel that if the American isolationists will just study these figures they will laud rather than condemn Canada and her war effort.

Spitzbergen And The Weather

To the weather even men in sheltered cities must fit their plans for work and play, for clothing, food and travel. Directly or indirectly it is the greatest ruling force in all men's lives. It makes farming, the occupation of 65 per cent. of the world's population, the most speculative enterprise of all.

However, with all its variations, in the past generation, the science of weather has come a long way toward making the weather make sense, and it works so well, that weather has become a military secret.

The sailing of convoys, the timing of landings, the air raids and campaigns of present war are planned to follow certain routes and timetables, which are first laid down by scientists, who are continually studying the weather and making observations.

All this is the reason why the Canadians attacked Spitzbergen in August, 1941, and captured the island. Ever since this island, situated away above the Arctic Circle, has been garrisoned by a handful of Norwegians who manned the barren outpost and operated the weather station. Scientists tell us that much of our weather is made away above the Arctic Circle and this island outpost was of great aid to the Allies in plotting their weather maps.

On September 8 the Germans staged a hit-and-run raid and wrecked the weather station. The Germans failed to leave anyone on the island, for apparently weather now can have little effect in their defensive war.

The British forces again landed this week on this small island and all goes to show just how important the weather is in plotting the course of the war.

NOTE AND COMMENT

New York man who caught a 24-pound 'lunge claims the big fellow bit him. If that kind of thing keeps up we may have to ration tourists.

Troops in Nova Scotia are going to be used to harvest the apple crop. One thing is certain that if there are no medals to be won on that front there are no shells to dodge either.

Editorial in the Globe and Mail on the work of the parliamentary war expenditures body sounds as if the writer were using a meat axe on the Cleaver committee.

Fact And Fantasy

From
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

MIGHTY drama and operatic fantasy mingle as the history of fascist Italy draws to its close. In the harbor at Malta the bulk of the surrendered Italian Navy sets an impressive stage. Out of Berlin, and evidently credited by London rescue in technicolour of Hitler's old pal Mussolini from Italians who were said to be holding him prisoner.

The chief importance of the surrender of the Italian Navy lies in the fact that it will release a very considerable part of the British Navy, heretofore needed in the Mediterranean, for use in the Indian Ocean and in co-operation with American units against Japan. The Italian Navy's main function was to keep British ships tied up watching the Mediterranean route; it had avoided battle but remained as a menace or at least a nuisance. The Allies' possession of Taranto may make possible the use of this Navy for our cause, for at that base are the great workshops of the Italian fleet, believed to be well supplied with materials.

This victory clears the short Mediterranean route for shipments to our allies in Russia and for supplying India and, in the future, China. It also removes one factor which had to be reckoned in all military calculations in the Mediterranean area, even though that factor had not materialized to prevent or even seriously hinder the operations against Sicily and the Italian mainland. Now the whereabouts of the Italian Navy need not concern our leaders as they plan new attacks on the southern shores of Europe.

Apparently a sizable number of Italian submarines are in German hands, and one should not be too quick to say that the Germans can make no use of them. It naturally will be asked whether these could not have been assured to the Allies through careful moves during the armistice proceedings. The extent of Nazi control in Italy, however, may well have precluded such a manoeuver.

The reported rescue of Musolini reads like the legend of Icarus and Daedalus who were imprisoned in a labyrinth but escaped on wings made of feathers. But its purposes were probably not purely romantic. Fascists in Italy may be inspired by the news of their leader's "release" to attempt to loose disorder in Italy, something we cannot now welcome as we might have earlier when only German forces were in that country. Doubtless it is Hitler's way of making good that telegram he sent to Mussolini when the ill-advised Duce permitted Germany to seize Austria and bring the Greater Reich's borders to the threshold of Italy.

The surrender of Italy's fleet, and this spectacular report of Mussolini's rescue, epitomize much of the history of recent years. The practical effect of the dictator's policies on the positions of their own countries is proving disastrous. But the propensity for indulging in mesmeric spectacle remains as strong as ever. It is a propensity we should reckon with as we go steadily about the serious business of winning the war.

Russian Revival

Seventy-six-year-old Metropolitan Sergei of Moscow has been elected Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia by the revived Holy Synod of that jurisdiction of the Greek Orthodox Church. This seems to prove that Joseph Stalin was not sending out mere propaganda feelers when he let it be known that the Soviet Government would restore the authority of the Orthodox hierarchy over the practice of the ancient religion of the Russian people.

While the patriarchate of Moscow is much nearer than the historic patriarchates of Antioch, Jerusalem, Alexandria and Constantinople, there was a time when the Russian primate headed the most numerous branch of the Eastern Orthodox Church. With an end put to Soviet obstruction to religious practice there seems little doubt that millions of Russians will return to the open and unhindered profession of their ancient faith. —Buffalo Courier-Express.

Cost Of Living Higher

If, at the end of October, the index remains at its present figure or higher, it will be necessary to increase the cost-of-living bonus to hundreds of thousands of workers. It is true that some of this is drained off in taxes, but additional purchasing power will be placed in the hands of a great many people, and it is the pressure of purchasing power in a scarcity market that thrusts prices upward. No amount of government regulation can put an absolute stop to this trend, and there invariably comes a moment in the process when the price ceiling is shattered and the way opened for the inflationary process.—Montreal Daily Star.

Whitehall Notebook

(By SCOTT YOUNG, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Sept. 16 (CP)—The summer recess of the British Parliament, far from reducing political activity, gave representatives of Commons and Lords an unusual opportunity for official and unofficial ambassadorial work abroad and a chance to sound out public opinion at home on matters with which parliament will be mainly concerned in its new session.

One of the more important jaunts took James Griffiths, one of the most popular labor frontbenchers, to the United States for discussions with union leaders. The possibility that labour will become Britain's most important party again within a few years of the ending of the electoral truce gives its international activities now a post-war significance. This Welsh M.P. from the coal-mining district of Llanelly should have considerable in common with American miners.

Irene Ward, the Conservative M.P. for Wallsend, has gone further afield—to China for the ministry of information to tell Chinese women what the women of Britain are doing in the war. Three M.P.'s went to Newfoundland to investigate conditions there.

Of those who remained at home, many were in constant demand as speakers at savings shows and demonstrations, and others spent their time planning their activity for resumption of the House.

Tom Wingringham, who narrowly failed to win a by-election in Midlothian against Sir D. King Murray, the solicitor-general for Scotland, a few months ago, will enter the field for Common Wealth again at St. Albans. A vacancy has occurred there through the death of Sir Francis Freemantle, Conservative, who had a majority of about 17,000 in the last election.

A new angle to the discussion of Labour's position in post-war politics has been raised by Alfred Wall, secretary of the London Society of Compositors. He suggests the party lineup with Prime Minister Churchill, presumably in a maintenance of the current coalition, in the immediate post-war years.

He believes that Mr. Churchill's position will be "unassailable" after the war and that Labour should make sure his eminence will be employed on Labour's side.

The Labour paper, the Daily Herald, disagrees strongly, flaying all for "defeatism" in assuming that Labour "should jettison its aims rather than risk his opposition at the polls." The Herald, which speaks with the official voice of Labour in this country, says that events will decide whether the coalition will be continued after the war but if so "it will certainly not be in Mr. Wall's mood of worshipful submission."

Miscellany: Capt. A. H. Maule Ramsay, Conservative M.P. for Peebles who has been detained under the defence of the realm act since May 1940, was allowed out of Brixton Prison for a few hours to attend a memorial service for his 25-year-old eldest son, a captain in the Scots Guards....His escort was another son, also a Guards officer.

One of the last things Ribbentrop and his German embassy staff did before they left London in September, 1939, was leave several worthless cheques with tradesmen....The embassy left 25 automobiles in storage which have been sold for a total of about $25,000....Ribbentrop's own car brought almost $5,000 from a film magnate.

Even months ago three war cabinet ministers set out to reduce the civil service by 45,000 employees....Since then, the civil service rolls have risen 10,000, instead of decreasing....The reason, mainly, is that the defence ministries didn't fall within the comb-out, and the expansion there has offset reductions proposed elsewhere.

Churchill Like A Caged Lion

(RAYMOND DANIELL IN NEW YORK TIMES)

LIKE all works of art, Mr. Churchill's best speeches are born slowly and painstakingly, with much thought and arduous work. No matter how spontaneously a quip seems to fall from the Prime Minister's lips, the chances are that it was premeditated and prepared. He almost never speaks extemporaneously, and when he does his remarks have the flavor but not the polish of Churchill at his best.

When he has a speech to make, the Prime Minister dictates it to a secretary. The opening paragraphs and the final peroration come hard and he spends a great deal of time on them, sometimes trying a dozen or more lines of approach before he hits on one that satisfies him. He has a deep-seated distrust of shorthand notes and insists on dictating directly to the typist. All typewriters used by his secretaries at 10 Downing Street have exceptionally large type so that he can read easily and at a distance, for he likes to see how the words look in type as he paces up and down like a caged lion behind his secretary. His thoughts don't seem to come right unless he's got a cigar between his teeth.

Even when he has got the speech all typed he is never satisfied with it. He fusses over it, changing a word here and a word there, shortening sentences, re-arranging the order of words and phrases right up until the moment of delivery. That is why on those rare occasions when the text of a Churchill address is given out before delivery, the copy always carries a warning that it must be checked against delivery before it is published. By the time he delivers the address the Prime Minister usually has virtually committed it to memory, a trick which is almost essential for a good parliamentarian because the tradition of the House frowns upon the reading of speeches.

Some of the best "Churchill" lines are struck off the anvil in the course of his daily associations. One classic that is going the rounds just now took place after a conversation with a particularly intransigent doctrinaire politician who had got in the Prime Minister's hair. As the recalcitrant one walked off with an air of injured righteousness Churchill nudged the Cabinet Minister next to him and remarked, "There's but for the Grace of God goes God."

That's probably the best Churchillism of all.

Hearst On Churchill

(FROM OTTAWA CITIZEN)

WILLIAM Randolph Hearst, ancient notorious twister of the lion's tail, comes out with his New York Journal-American to attack Prime Minister Churchill, accuses him of British propaganda on "our soil."

Time was when this might have made a difference. It makes no difference now. For the sun of William Randolph Hearst, the father of American yellow journalism, has long been in eclipse. A day was when, with his journalistic war-cry of "wine, women and wampum" he shot his circulation into millions, when his newspapers, thriving on hate of Britain and exploitation of sex, filled his coffers to overflowing, permitting him to indulge his fantastic "empire of St. Simeon," and his imports of castles from Spain, and the company of movie "stars," and his delusions of power and grandeur.

Those were the days when Hearst was running up bills of millions (many of them still unpaid) with our Canadian manufacturers of newsprint, when his newspapers were in every city and his magazines in every home, and when his pride even betrayed him into dreams of the United States presidency.

The dreams never came true. The American people might buy Hearst's newspapers; might read his comics and his highly-paid writers (Benito Mussolini was one of his steady contributors) and even the superficialities of his Arthur Brisbane. They none the less saw through his insincerities and shoddiness, despised his character, or lack of it, consistently denied him power. A day came when his empire collapsed, when his New York American could no longer meet the competition of newspapers like the New York Times and Herald-Tribune, when his own imitators of the New York American passed from other cities, and when, his enterprises in failure and bankruptcy taken over by a receivership, the once mighty emperor of newspaperdom was reduced to an ordinary salary.

Today William Randolph Hearst, now an old man, still lives at his St. Simeon estate, wiring out his editorials to the few uninfluential papers that still bear his name and stain: editorials with the old hate of Britain, and with a new hate of Russia. No publisher in all the United States is so pitifully bereft of power. It is the price of a life that has been barren of good; of a career that sought to raise itself on the foundations of hate and suspicion, plus pandering to the basest of passions.

A Bible Message

Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever. (I John 2: 15-17.)

It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. (John 6: 63.)

This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would....

If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. (Gal. 5: 16, 17, 25.)

Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. (Gal. 6: 7, 8.)

Cafe Society

Editors and reporters have long been well known for their far from sedentary habits and the fact that they are sometimes called upon to eat their meals at unearthly hours and sleep when the opportunity presents itself. Having completed his assignment a Times-Gazette reporter recently had occasion to visit a local eating emporium at an early morning hour and was not a little shocked by what he found.

Seated in booths and on stools were a large number of youths and girls who could not have been more than 15 years of age. They were smoking and carrying on conversations which would have made their staid ancestors of a generation or so ago blush with shame. Such conditions are nothing new and this particular evening, or early morning to be exact, was no exception to any other during the year.

In recent months much has been heard of the increase in juvenile crime in the community. Need the authorities look any further afield for the cause. In our youth when we were the age of these youngsters we were never allowed out much after dark and if an exception was made we had to be home and in bed by 10.30. We are firmly of the belief that much of the present situation could have been avoided if parents had imposed similar controls over their children. They are still not grown up and have no right to assume the privileges of their elders.

The whole situation, as we see it, comes down to a matter of parental control. Too often parents have no interest whatsoever in the welfare of their children with the result that they are allowed to do as they please and ultimately all but run the home. Many children are today allowed to come and go as they please with no regard as to whom they associate with or the hours they keep. Is it any wonder that there is a lack of interest in studies and that crime is to the increase.—Oshawa Times-Gazette.

Reporters Must Be Tough On Front Lines

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 16—(CP)— One of the inevitable results of the end of a military campaign is the return to civilization of the hosts of correspondents who had covered it.

Thus it is that London in the last few days has been brought up to date on transmission facilities and censor problems in Sicily and other parts of the Mediterranean all the way from Lisbon to Turkey.

Newspapermen in London who, through others' despatches, followed the trials of the ubiquitous Eighth Army news, have learned more of the story of one of the toughest jobs a war correspondent ever tackled and completed—landing with airborne troops.

The correspondent—the only one in the world officially entitled to wear the Red Beret of the "Red Devils," the men he covers, is Roderick McDonald of the Sydney Morning Herald, whose stories also appeared in the London News-Chronicle. He is back here convalescing after a Tunisian crash.

Long Training

Part of McDonald's story is known already, by his own hand—how he covered the war in the Far East for two years, then trained with the Airborne Division and landed in Sicily about five hours before the first assault troops came in from the sea.

Then he spent the night fighting and marching with the airborne troops, was captured by the Germans, freed by a counter-attack, got to Syracuse, "borrowed a bicycle, and although covered with bruises from the crash landing his glider had made and his later experiences, he pedalled over the rough Sicilian country to the beaches.

By that time he had been without sleep about 60 hours. He waited for a launch to take him to headquarters' ship so he could file a story, but when he caught one it broke down. That finished him for the time being and he went to sleep. It was the night of the 11th before he reached the ship. Then, although correspondents were only allowed 50 words each, officials relented when they heard his story and agreed to send 400. When he had written 400, he collapsed and had to be drugged to sleep.

Campaign Climax

That was his part of the campaign. He left Sicily a few days later with the airborne units. Back in Tunis his car was hit by another, and he was injured enough to send him back to London.

There are about 60 correspondents in Algiers now, waiting for the next big push and resting from the rigors of one some of them have just been through.

Capt. Warwick Charlton, formerly with the London Sunday Dispatch, is the editor of the Eighth Army News, and has a roving commission from General Montgomery to capture any printing presses he feels are necessary in the continuance of this daily army newspaper. Charlton went into Sicily with the Seaforth Highlanders, got to Syracuse early, found a printing press and a Sicilian printer he nicknamed "Nelson" and set to work. The News has been printed from there every day since.

NAZI's DESPERATE.

LONDON—(CP) —C. R. Attlee, deputy prime minister, said at the opening of a Netherlands social centre that the "growing savagery of the Germans in Holland shows they are becoming increasingly aware the war is lost."

At Surrender Of Italian Fleet

Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, R.N., commander-in-chief of the Allied Mediterranean naval forces, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of the Allied forces, are shown here on the bridge of an Allied destroyer, discussing the surrender of the bulk of the Italian fleet, which they just had observed.

Il Duce Starts To Re-form Fascists

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP).— Nazi propagandists moved to manufacture a new regime for Benito Mussolini—a regime described by the United States Office of War Information as dedicated to the continuation of the war alongside Germany and the punishment of all Italians who complied with the armistice accepted by Marshal Pietro Badoglia and King Victor Emmanuel.

German broadcasts reported to the O.W.I. by the U.S. foreign broadcast intelligence service asserted that:

1. Mussolini had issued a series of decrees re-establishing the Fascist Party under his "supreme direction" with the label of "Republican Fascist party."

2. Gen. Calvi di Bergolo, puppet commandant of Italian forces in Rome, had formally liquidated the Badoglio Cabinet and named commissioners—all of them well known in the Fascist regime—to take over the functions and responsibilities of the ministries.

The Mussolini decrees, said to be signed by the former Premier, were read over the German radio station, Zeesen. They were read not by Mussolini but by Alessandro Pavolini, former Italian Propaganda Minister, who was named in one of the decrees as "temporary secretary" of the new Fascist party.

A Swiss broadcast said Guariglia had been placed under arrest in Rome and that other ministers of the legal cabinet still in Rome also were reported under arrest.

The Mussolini decrees said all former Fascist officials are to resume their posts; all party organizations are to be reformed; all Italians must support German authorities; the ehavior of all Fascists will be reexamined in relation to their present behavior; all traitors are to be punished; the voluntary militia is to be reformed.

Council Investigates Need Of Road Repairs

BONARLAW, Sept. 16—(ENS)— The Rawdon Township Council met in the Orange Hall at Springbrook recently, Reeve W. J. Tanner presiding and all members present.

The Reeve and Deputy-Reeve were appointed as a committee to interview the county engineer to arrange repairs to the road between the two bridges in the Bronson Settlement. The clerk was instructed to reply to the letter received from J. L. Fair, of Stirling in regard to spraying weeds along the roads in the township.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: Road voucher No. 7 for $691.65; gas tax of $7.32; Reg. McKeown account, $1.45, bulbs for street lights; committee pay, $35.00; Municipal World account for school rate book and supplies, $9.02; tax collecting account for balance of year, $50.00; Clarence Wellman, $68.80, error on 1942 pay sheet.

A by-law was passed appointing Geo. E. Thompson tax collector for 1943.

The clerk was instructed to write Sawyer Massey Co. regarding prices on gravel conveyor and the same committee before appointed was given power to act upon the purchasing of same. The Stirling Agricultural Society were voted a grant of $35.00 for Fall Fair. The council as a whole were appointed by motion to investigate McGowan property and see about purhasing a number of buried tile.

The council adjourned to meet October 4 at one p.m.

Eight More Vessels Reach Allied Port

NICOSIA, Syprus, Sept. 16—(AP) —Eight Italian vessels, including a gunboat and two minesweepers, reached this eastern Mediterranean port today, carrying about 200 Italians from the Dodecanese islands who told stories of fierce fighting going on there between Italians and Germans.

The refugees included a number of Italian military officers, who exchanged their automatic pistols for biscuits and tea—the first tea, Mahy said, they had tasted in three years.

The small armada, flying the Italian flag, was escorted along the Cyprus coast by a British naval launch. With the gunboat and minesweepers were three auxiliary schooners and two small cargo ships.

War Risk Insurance Rates Scaled Down

LONDON, Sept. 16. (CP Cable)— New cargo and war risk insurance rates to and from the United Kingdom and Canada of 4½ per cent. went into effect Monday.

They were part of a general reduction in such rates announced by the Government and the Institute of London Underwriters last Saturday, reflecting improvement in the shipping outlook.

(Owing to a cable transmission error, The Canadian Press said Saturday the new rates between the United Kingdom and Canada were 2½ per cent.)

Otonabee Buys 2,000 Feet Of Snow Fence

Otonabee Council recently adopted the assessment for 1944, as prepared this year, and decided that future assessing be done between April 1 and September 30 for the following year.

Warden Mather and Councillor McIntyre were appointed to interview Peterborough City Council in regard to the agitation of owners of property along the canal road between No. 7 Highway and the old Norwood Road to be annexed to the township.

While North Monaghan sentiment along the western boundary of the city favors incorporation with the city, the urban taxpayers on the south-eastern border are seeking to revert to rural status. As a matter of fact that southern strip of Armour Road is not eastern front of the city. The boundary line is further to the east, but the present request is being promoted by dwellers along the road north from Downer's Corners.

Township Clerk Weir was authorized to buy necessary books for a new bookkeeping system.

William Patterson was appointed tax collector for 1943 in a motion by W. W. Dawson, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Harry Reid.

Purchase of 2,000 feet of snow fence from the Lundy Fence Company was directed by Councillor Harry McIntyre's motion, seconded by Councillor Dawson.

Moved by Mr Dawson, seconded by Councillor Roy Spears, that $2.50 an hour be charged for the power grader when used outside the township roads.

Melville Pimmett interviewed the Council in regard to a grant for Lakefield Fair.

On motion of Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. McIntyre, the following accounts were paid:

Postmaster $3.00, Peter Ross $30, Thomas Heffernan $15, Andrew Rennie $2.50, Provincial Treasurer $1.72.

GANANOQUE, Sept. 16 — (AP).—Residents of Gananoque are used to unusual sights but a youthful, hitchhiking mother carrying her year-old son strapped to her back papoose style was enough to turn heads. DOURO

Road Laborers Get 40c An Hour

DOURO, Sept. 16 (ENS) —At the Douro council meeting it was decided to change the wage rate of laborers. This rate to apply to work done since September, 1943, and that all by-laws or resolutions contrary to this resolution be repealed.

The following accounts were ordered paid: Department of Health of Ontario, insulin to Douro patients, $1.89; Peterborough Examiner, notice Court of Revision, $2.34; Whillies and Co., Toronto, assessors supplies, $49.92; Miss Nellie Douglas, printing voters lists, $49; J. Dunnitt, culvert pipe, $36; J. J. Leahy, 123 yards gravel, $12.30; W. Wright, trucking, $1.50.

CORN BEEF RESERVED.

LONDON—(CP)— Canned corned beef is being removed from the meat ration Sept. 18. A Food Ministry official said Food Minister Lord Woolton attaches great importance to canned corned beef as a reserve to meet future emergencies and does not feel justified in reducing stocks of it on hand.

China Demands Formosa Korea's Liberty

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15—(AP) — China's first major declaration of policy on post-war territory in the Far East, voiced by Foreign Minister T. V. Soong, called today for complete eradication of Japanese influence in strategic Korea and Formosa.

Japan annexed the Korean peninsula in 1910 but patriots have fought the domination ever since and even now have a "free Korean" organization.

Formosa, an island between Japan and the Philippines, was ceded by China after the Sino-Japanese conflict in 1895. Soong says this area is essentially Chinese.

Soong laid down this tentative blueprint of Chinese aims at a press conference yesterday.

He said Korea should be made independent and Formosa should become a part of the public of China.

No Aims At Indo-China.

"We don't want to see Thailand—even though they're fighting us—ruled by anyone but the Thais," Soong added, and China moreover has no desire to control Indo-China.

He said he wasn't prepared to discuss the future of Hong-Kong and Mongolia at this time.

He told reporters Japan was constantly bombarding Chungking with peace proposals, growing in liberality as the Allies exert more military pressure on the far-flung Japanese outposts of Empire.

"They are now ready to get out of China—except for Manchuria and Formosa—if we'll go over to their side," Soong said. "You see, they're trying to make it a racial war."

But China isn't having any of this, Soong indicated as he declared that Chungking's newly-announced decision to end one-party rule and adopt a constitution showed that China was implementing its political course "toward a broadening and deepening democracy."

HAMILTON—(CP)—In a bantam O.B.A. semi-final game here last night Toronto defeated Welland 2-1 in 11 innings, with Pitcher Phillips for the winners fanning no less than 22 men and allowing eight hits. It was the deciding game of the series.

Jack Shifner, who rode more than 2,000 winners in France and Belgium before the war, won his first race in his native England on Pennyleaf, a 20-1 shot in a Windsor sprint.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

Peterborough's sporting public are apparently lining up solidly behind the R.A.F. soccer game at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon in aid of the British War Victims' Fund, judging by the manner in which the tickets are being snapped up. The game between the Picton and Mount Hope Fliers, made up for the most part of former professional players, is regarded as an outstanding event and a chance to see first-class soccer played by star performers. There is no doubt of the strength of the two teams. Peterborough saw many of the Picton squad play here last year and their calibre is acknowledged while the Mount Hope eleven has been strengthened by the addition of some new stars from overseas and hopes to get revenge for the convincing victory of the Picton team a year ago by beating the Easterners here Saturday. Whichever outfit wins the fans can be assured of a fast, spectacular game of soccer played at its best by men who love the sport and are adepts in every department. On top of that the sporting enthusiasts will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are helping a most worthy cause for every cent taken in will go to the British War Victims' Fund. The Peterborough-Whitaker Cricket Club which is sponsoring the event is paying all the local expenses while the two Air Force teams are looking after their own travelling costs.

Rain washed out the Girls' Softball League intermediate final between Brintons and Generals scheduled for the Bowl last night. It was coming down steadily at game time when the umpires called it off and shortly after President Bill Bennett ordered the battle to be played on Friday night. So tomorrow night it is, and it should be a merry little battle between two every evenly-matched teams. They have run along all season on even terms and in the playoff series, after coming through the semi-final round in good style, each of the rivals has beaten the other once and by a substantial margin in each case. So that leaves it all up to Friday's deciding battle. We prefer to let you do the guessing as to the outcome. On the record we would not take a chance on trying to make a selection. Both are capable of good ball, and both have played some of the other kind as well so that it is just a matter of which outfit happens to strike its best form in the crucial test. If both of them do the game should be one of the most interesting of the season. It is called for 6.30 o'clock sharp and by a league ruling must go at least seven innings to decide a winner.

Tempest In A Tea Pot

Softball battling on the Peterborough front is apparently not at a. end yet and the latest development in regard to the City Softball Leagu is a statement from Secretary F. R. Feaver of the O.A.S.A. "demanding the presence of O.A.S.A. member Dave Leether, Secretary Fred Scates, a representative of each team in the City League, and the sports officer of No. 32 Military Training Centre at a meeting of the O.A.S.A. sub-committee to be held in Hamilton on Sunday, September 26. This move arises out of a letter sent to the O.A.S.A. some weeks ago and signed by the manager of the Genelecs, the manager and sports officer of the Soldiers and bearing the name also of the manager of the Switchgear team but not signed by him. Charges, most of them aired in a recent letter from C. M. Krug appearing in the Examiner were made of alleged irregularities that had occurred during the league season. None of these charges, in the opinion of this column, warrant the compelling of nine Peterborough citizens to travel to Hamilton to discuss them. The two teams most interested in the complaint won their point. The 4th Battery were disqualified as O.A.S.A. representatives, Genelecs had their chance in their stead and were sadly beaten twice by Oshawa and why in the name of common sense ball clubs which have been disbanded for the season should be asked to send representatives all the way to Hamilton to thresh over a lot of old straw is beyond us.

* * * * * *

We respectfully submit that if the O.A.S.A. sub-committee wants to do some investigating that it should do a little delving into the case of Player Hattie Eakins of Lindsay and see if it can discover one logical reason why Secretary Feaver should have allowed that player to participate in the O.A.S.A. playdowns as a military replacement. That is a much more serious matter than any of the alleged irregularities that have occurred in the operation of the City League this season because it was an official ruling that created a precedent that may cause the governing body plenty of trouble in the future. If Secretary Feaver was in possession of all the facts in the case when he sanctioned the playing of Eakins, his decision stamps him as hardly big enough for his responsible position. Why he should have authorized a military replacement for a player who never played a single innings with Genelecs and who was still here and available to play if his club had had any intention of using him is something that he should explain for the benefit of his colleagues on the sub-committee and softball clubs in general. And if his only excuse is that the "player" was on the R.C.A.F. reserve list and the Air force had stated that it would not be responsible for expenses if he happened to be hurt surely the secretary of a provincial softball organization is not credulous enough to fall for anything as transparent as that. He of all persons should know that that same prohibition applies to every soldier, sailor or airman who engages in sport. It doesn't keep thousands of them from playing.

Murder In The Air

The Brock St. Arena management had better get the ring reinforced and a special riot squad of police enlisted for next Monday night's doings for Promoter Frank Tunney announces today that he has booked Rowdy Dick Hogan and Irish Pat Flanagan for a return engagement. That means a sure-fire riot. The battle—and it will be exactly that—will be a grudge affair for both men came out of the ring Monday night fit to be tied. Hogan claims that Maxwell had no right to disqualify him. The Housepainter declares that other wrestlers have pushed the official around and got away with it and he sees no reason why he should get the hook for doing exactly the same thing. And he is plenty hot about the assault Flanagan made on him after the bout was officially over. He says he wasn't looking for an attack at that stage and that Flanagan caught him off his guard. The Toronto Irishman, on the other hand, is just as angry over the treatment Hogan handed him before the bout was stopped. "I'm willing to wrestle anybody who wants to really wrestle," Flanagan said yesterday, "but if this plug-ugly from the coast wants to fight it out in back alley style it's all right with me. I can take anything Hogan hands out and hand him back a receipt for it." All of which adds up to a stormy evening.

The Toronto Leafs took a firm grip on the semi-final round with Montreal Royals in The Governors' Cup series last night when they defeated Fresco Thompson's athletes 7 to 3 in the second tilt. Nick Strincevich pitched steady ball for the Toronto gang and timely hitting by his supporting task did the rest. Montreal started with Max Macon on the hilltop, switched to Lloyd Dietz and wound up with Harry Sunkel doing the firing. One feature of the game was the chucking out first of Outfielder Bob Oritz and then Manager Fresco Thompson of the Royals for kicking too vehemently about umpire's decisions. Incidentally there some evictions, too, in the Syracuse-Newark game. Manager Billy Meyer and Outfielder Frank Silvanic of the Bears got the gate for roughing up the officials after an argument as to whether Goody Rosen caught or trapped a low liner. The Chiefs won 4 to 3 and are leading their bracket with two straight wins.

Toronto Fliers Eliminate Trenton

TRENTON, Sept 16—No. 1 Training Command, RCAF, last night defeated Trenton Fliers 6-4, to win the O.B.A. 'A' series and the right to enter the finals for the title. Already the Toronto nine has won the Toronto baesball championship.

Chief factor in the Command victory was a home run by Chip Redmond with Nap Therous on base and his wide-awake base-running in the eighth when he scored from second on Red Heron's hard grounder. Redmond was on his way to third with the wind-up and went roaring on home to beat a close play at the plate.

Pitches No Hitter

HAMILTON—(CP)—Russell Johnson pitched a no-hit game last night to lead Hamilton Majors to a 3-0 victory over St. Catharines in the senior playdowns of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association, the teams being deadlocked at one win each. Johnson fanned 14 of the 27 batters to face him.

Batawa Loses

GRIMSBY, Ont.— (CP)— Peach Kings trimmed Batawa Bombers 14-4 in the third and deciding game of their O.A.S.A. Intermediate "B" best-in-three final softball series, bringing Grimbsy its first softball title. Winning pitcher Bellcott yielded six hits, struck out 10 and drove in six runs.

The first undecided race of the season came at famed Ascot when the Hon. Dorothy Paget's It's a Girl ran a dead heat with Hestia. On the same card there was almost another dead-heat in the Eton Stakes where Samovar, with Mike Beary up, beat Sunblind and Ramelia in a finish of noses.

THREE RUGBY GAMES OPEN SEASON IN ONTARIO NEXT SATURDAY

Ottawa Meets Beaches On Home Ground

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The reconstituted Ontario Rugby Football Union, balancing war tabulations against the twist of circumstances which give it stature as the savior of Eastern Canada's major ball sport, opens its 61st consecutive season Saturday with games in Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton.

Its playing talent diluted in some cases and almost drained dry in others, Ontario's oldest football compact still has many blessings to count. Almost for the first time. it had achieved an intersectional flavor rivalling that of the old Interprovincial Union in its palmiest days. There are only two teams outside Toronto, but those two—Ottawa and Hamilton—are two of the best football centres in Canada.

The O.R.F.U. had to wait for a war to gain ascendancy over the Interprovincial Union, which folded in 1941 after Toronto Balmy Beach withdrew and the stop-gap Eastern Rugby Football Union lasted only a year. Prospetcs were dark when the O.R.F.U. under affable Harold Bailey stepped in last fall to create a six-team league with clubs in Toronto, Hamilton and Kitchener.

Kitchener Out.

When this year's six clubs open a 30-game schedule Saturday the tail-end Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers of 1942 will be replaced by Ottawa Combines. The other five clubs are the same as last year.

For its first home showing (against Beaches), Ottawa will field a sprinkling of former Rough Riders, Service talent and some highly promising youngsters. Arnie McWatters, formerly of Sarnia Imperials and Rough Riders, will handle the club from quarterback post.

Beaches, a disappointment last year, may be revitalized by the acquisition of voluable Annis Stukus from Toronto Indians. Big Stuke, who scored all 15 of his club's points when Indians handed Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes their only defeat last year, will call signals and, he says, help Coach Alex Ponton "keep an eye" on the backfield.

Hamilton Gets Crowe

Hurricanes, the 1942 Dominion champs, likely will be strong favorites to repel Toronto Navy in their opening engagement at Toronto. Two of the airmen's outstanding stars—Flt. Lt. Eddie Thompson and PO. Bill Stukus—are among the host of experienced personnel no longer with the club. Thompson was reported missing after enemy action at sea last spring and Stukus is stationed on the East coast. This year, too, the team will be guided by a new coach—Ross Trimble, who returns from Ottawa to Toronto to take over from FO. Lew Hayman.

Navy, retaining only OS. Sandy Milne from last year's squad, will count on youth and fight to supplant experience. Among the newcomers are Royal Copeland, Steve Karrys, Tim Waldon, Les Heinbuck and Bruce Richardson.

Hamilton Wildcats play host to Indians and introduce a new coach in Brian Timmis in the third game on Saturday's card. Their prize addition is Don Crowe, who starred for Hurricanes in the Dominion final last season. Triple-threat Joe Krol will be back along with Jimmy Fumio, selected for an all-star berth at outside wing last fall. An added feature will be the return to action of Jimmy Simpson and Abe Zvonkin, Tiger stars of former years.

They'll Be In Action Here Saturday

Here are the members of the crack Picton R.A.F. soccer team who will meet Mount Hope R.A.F. in a game at Riverside Park Saturday in aid of the British War Victims' Fund. The players, most of them former professionals, are as follows: Back Row, LEFT to RIGHT: LAC. Aitcheson, linesman; LAC. Harper, centre half; LAC. Flockett, right half; Pilot Officer Alexander, goal; LAC. Davey, left back; LAC. Hutton, left half; LAC. Meeks, right back. Front Row, LEFT to RIGHT: LAC. Farnsworth, outside right; AC. Parkinson, inside right; Sergt. Miller, centre; Flying Officer Campbell, inside left; Flying Officer Lawson, outside left.

Hamilton Co-ops Beat Welland

By The Canadian Press.

Baseball fans who predicted Sal Maglie would pitch Welland Atlas to their second straight Ontario Baseball Association championship can start looking for another oracle to-day.

Welland toppled surprisingly from 1943 contention at Hamilton yesterday, losing 4-3 after Maglie pitched shutout ball for eight innings. The result left Hamilton Co-Ops, Toronto R. C. A. F. and London Army sole claimants for the title Welland won last year.

Maglie, former International League hurler with Jersey City Giants, was ahead 3-0 entering the last of the ninth. Then the ceiling collapsed.

Victory earned Co-Ops the right to meet London or Toronto in a best-of-five O. B. A. final, scheduled to start at Hamilton Sept 25.

TORONTO, Sept. 16 — (CP) — Coach Ted Morris of Toronto Navy isn't sure he'll have much of a football team on display when the season opens next Thursday but the football team won't be the whole Navy show anyway. A couple of pretty Wrens, Mary Campbell and Mona McDiarmid, will be cheer leaders nattily dressed in blue sweaters and white skirts..The public address system will not be used to explain plays at Varsity stadium here this fall. It seems the noise disturbs R.C.A.F. personnel attending classes nearby.

N.H.L. Sidelights:

Montreal Gazette reports additional business conducted at last week-ends N.H.L. meeting. It was decided to permit amateurs to play three games with an N.H.L. club without losing amateur status...The N.H.L. waiver price was reduced from $7,500 to $5,000...Montreal Canadiens refused offers for Goalie Bert Gardiner and Forward Murph Chamberlain, both of whom finished last season with other clubs.

Puck Prospects:

There's a chance the Alberta Senior Hockey League this year will comprise Calgary Army, Calgary R.C.A.F., Calgary Navy, Red Deer Army and Calgary Buffaloes..Harry Eisen of the Sudbury Star reports four Nickel Belt youngsters will try out with Eddie Shore's Buffalo Bisons. They are Ray Powell, 17. Charlie Ethier, 19, Nick Evanshen and Louis Prete...The Montreal Gazette says Gordon Drillon has enlisted and is expected to team with his old side-kick Syl Apps, on the Toronto Army team next winter ...Now that service hockey has been banned on Vancouver Island, negotiations are for entry of the island's two civilian teams, Victoria Machinery Depot and Nanaimo Clippers, in the B.C. Mainland league.

Incidentally:

Renewal of Frankie Frisch's contract as Pittsburg manager stopped in a hurry the rumors Burleigh Grimes might get the job...Jack Eley, the Brandon boy who played goal for Hamilton's O.H.A. senior team the last three seasons' is slated to enter the R.C.A.F. next month.. Among football players lost to Winnipeg R.C.A.F. Bombers since last fall are Wayne Sheley, Andy Branigan, Sammy Lavitt, Bill Judza, Ken Charlton, Harry Johnston and Bob Fritz.

Leafs-Chiefs Dominate Loop

By The Associated Press.

Newark Bears put on some verbal fireworks at Syracuse last night in their second game of the International League play-offs, but Syracuse won the game, 4-3. This gave the Chiefs a 2-0 lead, matching the advantage of Toronto Maple Leafs over Montreal Royals in the other play-off series.

Manager Bill Meyer and Outfielder Frank Silvanic of Newark were thumbed out of the game during an exciting eighth inning. Behind 3-2 the Bears filled the bases with one out. Rosenthal hit a liner to centre. Rosen made a shoestring catch and threw to second base for a double play.

Meyer and Silvanic contended Rosen had trapped the ball instead of catching it. After they had their say and wound up in the clubhouse, Manager Jewel Ens of Syracuse protested that no run could be counted on the play. Umpire Van Graflan had ruled that Korte, on third, had tagged up at third after the catch and had crossed the plate before the second putout of the double play was completed, tying the score at 3-3.

Syracuse shoved over the winning run in the last of the eighth on a walk, two infield hits and an infield out. Tommy De La Cruz, of Syracuse, struck out 11 in pitching six-hit ball.

Toronto had little trouble beating Montreal, 7-3, behind the effective pitching of Nick Strincevich. Strincevich was touched for nine hits, Max Macon getting three of them, but he was tough in the pinches.

The teams are idle to-day. The play-offs are scheduled to resume Friday at Montreal and Newark.

Yankees Named Favorites To Take Title

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York Yankees are riding the crest of an eight-game winning streak, matching their longest previous victory string of the season, but the team is just coasting.

Ignoring the fact that the campaign has two weeks to run and they haven't clinched the pennant yet, the Yankees simply are taking their day to day business in stride and concentrating on the World Series.

In their clubhouse before the games the players are autographing baseballs by the dozens and striving to round up series tickets for their friends. Also before the games Charley Keller and Nick Etten, the heavy armament of the bombers, are taking special batting practice—not because they need it for the American League opposition but to get ready for the big test against St. Louis Cardinals.

27th Homer

Yesterday Keller hit for 20 minutes before most of the players were on the field and then, when the tussle with Philadelphia Athletics got under way, hit his 27th home run with two aboard in the first inning.

Arthur Beauregard (Bud) Metheny hit his second homer in two days and Joe Gordon notched his 14th of the season while Hank Borowy pitched six-hit ball to easily overpower the A's 7-3. Borowy had a shutout till the eighth, when he made the mistake of grooving a pitch to Rookie George Staller, who socked it for a three-run homer.

About the time this was going on James J. Carroll, St. Louis betting commissioner and nationally known odds-maker, disclosed that he had established the Yankees as overwhelming favorites in the series, quoting 13 to 20 against New York and 13 to 10 against St. Louis.

Redbirds, although idle, moved within three games of clinching the National League pennant when weather forced cancellation of second-place Brooklyn Dodgers' final game with Boston.

Divide Double-header

In the only National League game the Phillies divided a doubleheader with New York Giants. Jack Kraus pitched four-hit ball as the Phils won the first 1-0 on Ray Hamrick's triple, but the Giants bagged the second game 6-3. The double bill started at 11 a.m., less than 10 hours after the completion of the Phils-Giants game of the previous night, and drew only 903 paying customers.

Washington strengthened its hold on second place in the American League by shutting out Boston Red Sox 5-0 on John Niggeling's three-hit hurling while Cleveland dropped another decision to St. Louis Browns 4-2 through Al Zarilla's three-run homer in the seventh.

Detroit downed Chicago White Sox 8-2 with Rube Gentry pitching a six-hitter.

Sport Shorts From Britain

LONDON, Sept. 16— (CP)— The King, who didn't stable as many racers this season as last, took his fifth success of the 1943 racing program when the favored Open Warfare galloped to a head victory in the seven-furlong Long Stanton Stakes at Newmarket.

The filly, with Jockey Dee Smith in the Royal colors, raced nerk-and-neck to the winning post with Cincture, Lord Durham's three-year-old filly, and the crowd actually groaned at fears His Majesty's mount wouldn't win. That's because there are no more popular horses on the tracks than those carrying the King's silks.

Earlier in the season Open Warfare placed fourth behind Cincture in the 1,000 Guineas, first of the season's classics and was beaten a short head in another seven-furlong race by Lord Rosebery's Ribbon, a close second in the classic Oaks.

The King's other horses which have won this season are Knight's Daughter and Putting Green but the Royal trainer, Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, thinks he has a better prospect than any of them in Alencon, a big colt that hasn't run yet. Alencon probably will make his first start this month.

Sqdn. Ldr. Stanhope Joel, who keeps a close eye on the turf despite his Royal Air Force duties, appears to be following the Joel tradition that made his father, Diamond Magnate Sol Joel, a prominent racing figure during the reigns of King Edward VIII and George V.

Altogether, he's rounding up a bunch of likely racers to be trained at Newmarket by R. Perryman, the former jockey. Early this year Stanhope went to $12,450 to obtain a National Stud yearling filly whose sire was Nearco, famed stud never beaten in his racing career. Recently he figured he grabbed a diamond in the rough by purchasing a colt from Lord Stanley for $9,300.

Stanhope's cousin, H. J. Joel, also is coming into racing on a grand scale and owns some of the season's best two-year-olds, including Picture Play and His Excellency.

All this buying has convinced turf follower that after the war the famous rivalry of the two branches of the Joel family will be revived.

The "green and pink stripes" of Solly and the "black, red cap" of Jack Joel, father of Stanhope's cousin, frequently were seen as the opposition in Britain's classic races of other years.

Daily Pumpage Declines 400,000 Gallons

Assent to the laying of 456 feet of six-inch water main on Brioux Avenue, 456 feet westerly from Park Street, was given to North Monaghan Council by the Utilities Commission at its meeting on Wednesday afternoon.

Brioux Avenue is the first street south of the Ovaltine plant, extending westerly off Park Street. The township in a letter from its clerk, Bruce Johnston, proposed that it would dig a trench, and asked the Commission to lay the pipe, make the connection to the Park Street main, and supply water to prospective customers.

The Commission will ask the Council for 4,000 cubic feet of floor space and a similar basement area in the proposed new city hall. R. L. Dobbin, manager, preparing the estimate, suggested a minimum width of 35 feet. Merely as a comment of prospect, the Commission will expect to pay a proportion of the cost of the property site

Pumpage Decline.

Consumpion of water in August averaged 400,000 gallons a day less than a year ago, according to Mr. Dobbin's monthly report as follows:

The peak of electric power for August, 1943, was 12,700 horsepower as compared with 11,400 horse-power in August, 1942. The increased peak is due to the load taken by the Quaker Oats Company, and will be deducted from our bill.

The pumpage at waterworks for August, 1943, was 10 .175,000 gallons as compared with 11,988,000 gallons in August, 1942. This is a decrease of over 400,000 gallons per day and is probably due to the greater precipitation this year. Then too August this year was not as hot as last year.

The following table gives the precipitation for the summer months for four years in inches of rainfall.

	1940	1941	1942	1943
June	1.97	0.91	2.41	1.63
July	1.52	2.91	2.64	2.81
August	2.60	6.74	0.99	3.85
	6.09	10.56	6.04	8.29

Eight new water services were laid and four relaid. Inspection and testing of the valves in the system was completed during the month. A concrete valve chamber was constructed at George and Charlotte Streets to replace an old wooden one.

Gas made at the plant was 589,000 cubic feet over August, 1942.

Pope Virtually Nazi Prisoner

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 16—(AP)—A dispatch from Chiasso on the Swiss-Italian border to the newspaper De Bund said Tuesday, Roman Catholics were concerned about the fate of Pope Piup XII who was reported to be practically a prisoner of Nazi Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring.

It added that the German troops so far had respected the neutral territory of Vatican City.

The dispatch said that when the Allies begin their march northward "one must certainly suppose that German forces will be concentrated around Rome and will fight to the last."

The newspaper said Catholics were discussing the possibilty that the Pope might leave the Vatican if Rome becomes a battleground.

The Cardinals and other high churchmen in Rome were said to have withdrawn into the Vatican when the Germans occupied the capital. Cardinal Luigi Maglione, Secretary of State, conferred with the German minister, the border dispatch said.

about 16 miles southeast of Salerno.

Heavy, medium and light bombers, fighter bombers and fighters all joined in the attack.

Fighters, maintaining an almost constant patrol over the area, destroyed five enemy aircraft. For all the night and day operations, four Allied planes were listed as missing.

Night bombers swept slightly away from the battle sector last night and attacked roads in the Terra Annunciatia, or Pompei, area.

The communique said there was no action to report from the Taranto district across the peninsula on the heel. In that area, British troops last were reported sweeping out from captured Bari on the Adriatic and also up the backbone of the mainland.

Twenty-eight additional small units of the Italian navy were said to have arrived at Palermo, Sicily.

The fierce fighting that turned the 27-mile bridgehead near Salerno into an inferno of screaming shell and thunderous gunfire on Monday night and Tuesday morning tapered off to some extent yesterday and Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark took advantage of the lull to reorganize and reinforce his lines.

(The Berlin radio, taking a far different view of the situation than when it was proclaiming an Allied evacuation 48 hours ago, admitted this morning that the numerical strength of the Allied forces at Salerno is "far greater than had been originally believed.")

Get New Supplies.

In spite of occasional German air attacks, new units and great quantities of heavy equipment streamed ashore during the day to relieve the original formations, some of which had been fighting almost without let-up since the first landing a week ago.

Back from the beaches where the Allied forces were deploying the Germans, said to number at least five diivsions, were reported digging in on the mountain slopes.

British and Canadian naval units standing offshore to protect the steady landing operations, lobbed a constant flow of shells over the heads of the Allied forces and upon the German lines.

A big group of German planes attempted a ground strafing operation, but anti-aircraft and other batteries scored heavily. A field dispatch quoted an Allied officer as declaring a "considerable number" were knocked down.

The fast-striding 8th Army, chasing the remnants of a Nazi division before it, covered some 25 miles on Tuesday in spite of enemy mines and demolitions. However, considerable rough terrain obstructs its advance.

(The makeup and whereabouts of the Canadian formations with the 8th Army remained a secret. Presumably it consisted of units of the Canadian 1st Division which fought in Sicily.)

Spring Grain Yield Below Normal

TORONTO, Sept. 16 — (CP) — Yields of spring grain, now practically cut and threshed throughout the province, are far below normal and will not be sufficient to meet the demands for livestock feeding, the monthly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture said yesterday.

Several cars of western grain have been ordered to meet the shortage, and many more will be required to maintain production of meat, milk and eggs and provide seed grain for next spring. Fall grains and feed crops, the report said, show prospects of better yields.

All classes of livestock are reported in good condition, but purchases of feeder cattle are down due to high prices and crop shortages. Demand for dairy cattle and sows is good.

Fewer Potatoes

A drop in the potato crop is expected, due to weather condition, the high cost of seed and the scarcity of labor. Carleton county, major potato producing district, reports a crop cut of 60 per cent, and the North Bay section of Northern Ontario less than 40 per cent of normal due to patchy fields and disease that has affected potatoes in all parts of the province.

The tobacco crop is reported as "reasonably satisfactory," with the improved flue-cured crop expected to produce between 55,000,000 and 60,000,000 pounds of tobacco. The burley crop is estimated roughly as 6,500,000 pounds.

In western Ontario, the department said the apple yield was expected to be approximately 373,000 barrels, a seven per cent increase over 1942. The expected grape crop is 28,150 tons, 22 per cent less than last year and peaches have decreased 73 per cent from 1942 totals. Pear production will probably be 282,100 bushels, a decrease of 31 per cent.

In Eastern Ontario, apples are below normal in development; the cherry crop is reduced by 57 per cent from last year, and pears, by 35 per cent.

Germans Raid

Force Bomber Command, pronounced the experiment a success and presaging the possibility that they would soon team up with the R.A.F. in bombing Europe by night.

Hit Romily Airfield

Heavy bombers also attacked the German airfield at Romily in northern France while other four-engined aircraft blasted Nazi bases in that area. At the same time United States medium bombers hammered an airdrome at Merville and R.A.F. Mitchells struck another at Bryan-Sud, 20 miles east of Le Tourquet.

These bombings forays were supported by swarms of Allied fighters, including R.C.A.F. squadrons. All Canadian planes returned safely to hteir bases.

Germany yesterday lost 20 planes, while the Allies listed as missing six heavy bombers and three fighters.

Some casualties were caused in the greater London area by the German overnight raids, but the only bomb which fell in the city proper dropped in a football field now used as a community garden. Actually the number of planes which participated in the Nazi assault was comparatively small and heavy gunfire kept them away from the heart of London.

Australia Faces Manpower Task

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 16 — (CP Cable)—The Sydney Daily Telegraph in a front-page editorial yesterday said that one of the first jobs facing Prime Minister Curtin's Labor government, now that is has been re-elected, is recasting Australia's manpower policy.

"The Pacific war entered a new phase when Mr. Curtin announced Australia is no longer in danger of invasion," the paper said. "The next step is to drive the Japanese out of our northern islands.

"A big American army will gather here for the job. We must feed that army. At the present moment we could not do it. Our army has agreed theoretically to release 20,000 men but the job may need 50,000 or even 100,000.

"We are not alone in facing this problem. Canada has decided to disband two divisions from the fighting services to the job of supporting and feeding its army. Food for fighting men now and for the population they will rescue is Australia's No. 1 commitment."

(Ottawa announced last night that Canada's army reorganization "involves no letup or modification in its overseas program" and said that certain men in lower medical categories not required by the army will be discharged "and made available for essential civilian service.")

The director of the rural research committee writing in the same paper said the fighting services at present include 150,000 men from rural production. He said much valuable land has deteriorated in areas which have been stripped of manpower while shortages of material, petrol and manpower has led to the writing off of much farm machinery.

ers were captured and large quantities of war material were abandoned as the Nazis fled to the west with Russian troops in close pursuit, a Moscow communique said. Capture of the Nazi base climaxed a Russian advance of nearly 200 miles in 40 days.

Wednesday's fighting cost the Germans in all more than 6.000 dead and they surrendered more than 200 towns and villages as they fell back before the relentless Red Army sweep, the Russians said. There was no indication anywhere that the enemy would halt short of the Dnieper river, which they have built into a formidable defence barrier.

The Soviet forces to the south, driving toward the great bend in the Dnieper, captured Guiai Pole and Pokrovskoye, both 90 miles from Zaporozhe, a Dnieper river city which also is an important point on the railway line leading to Melitopol and the Crimea

Could Cut Crimea.

Cutting of this line would jeopardize another large segment of German forces which are garrisoning the Crimean Peninsula and the Tamensk area aross the Kerch Strait.

More than 2,000 Germans were killed in the battle for Guiai Pole and Pokrovskoye. Large numbers of enemy tanks and guns were destroyed. A covering umbrella of Soviet warplanes downed 34 German planes in the drive. The Moscow war bulletin termed the German retreat there a "rout."

There was still no announcement by the Russian High Command of the capture of Bryansk in the north, which the Germans said they evacuated several days ago. The Russian communique reported fierce fighting in the Bryansk sector toward Smolensk and disclosed the capture of Dyatkova, 20 miles north of the German base.

In the central sectors of the 600-mile active front Red Army columns were everywhere advancing. Fall of Romni, Poltava, Krasnograd and Lozovaya to the west of Kharkov appeared certain, with the consequent straightening of the Russian front in this area.

Torpedo Victims Swim Ashore

TORONTO, Sept. 16—(CP)—Canadian soldiers torpedoed shortly before the Sicilian invasion swam to rescue ships by the light of their own flaming transports, spent more than 48 hours in a former Italian prison camp and still managed to land in Sicily with the early assault waves, says a dispatch from War Correspondent Ralph Allen published yesterday in the Globe and Mail.

The dispatch, delayed two months by the British Admiralty, said only eight Canadians are missing of several hundred aboard two equipment carriers sunk in the Eastern Mediterranean out of a convoy carrying part of the invading army directly from England to Sicily.

Survivors chosen for key invasion roles, Allen said, were picked up at a North African port and ferried swiftly to their original destination in time to go ashore with the units. Others were held for securit reasons a few days at a prison cam near Algiers before joining rein forcement groups.

Canadians rescued included Lieu Donald Shaver, Brockville, Ont., an Lieut. J. Smith, Belleville, Ont.

Alex Walker Raps Latest Army Shift

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 16—(CP)—Alex Walker of Calgary Wednesday termed recent Ottawa announcement of the disbandment of two divisions of Canada's home army "an example of the terrible manpower muddle we are up against."

The Dominion President of the Canadian Legion, speaking in Kingston, said the divisions are no longer needed for immediate defence of Canadian soil. "I do say that these men have been trained as soldiers at great expense to the country and should certainly be retained in the armed forces."

Battery Awaits Ack-Ack Guns

In line with its recent change-over from a field artillery unit to an anti-aircraft outfit, the 4th Reserve Heavy Anti-Aircraft Battery will soon receive a number of 3.7 heavy ack-ack guns for the training of its members.

The 3.7 gun is a stationary battery, weighing more than 12 tons and capable of firing nearly 40,000 feet into the air. It is standard equipment in the defense of cities against bombing raids.

Two trained instructors, members of the active Army, and one of whom has had several years' service overseas, are coming to Peterborough to teach the gun drill and handling of equipment for these heavy guns.

The change-over of the Battery to its present duties occurred less than a month ago as the result of new emphasis placed upon adequate preparation against possible bombing forays over Canada. The 4th was selected along with a number of other field batteries throughout the country to make the shift, and under the new establishment it will require a larger personnel. At the present time approximately 100 vacancies exist in the ranks.

In recent days two recruits have been added to the Battery's strength and two Battery members have gone into active service. Those enlisting with the Battery are Jesse J. Brown, 532 Roger street and Neil H. Alton, 697 Water. Going active are Joseph J. Bencze, 279 Wescott, and Harris Glen of Lansdowne street.

First Airmen Sworn In On Radio Hour

In the first ceremony of its kind in this district, 10 boys were sworn into the R.C.A.F. at air crew in a radio broadcast on Wednesday night over CHEX. Sqdn. Ldr. J. M. Roberts, commanding officer of the Recruiting office in Toronto, and a veteran of the last war, paid a special visit to Peterborough for the purpose of taking the boys into the service. Up until 11 o'clock today, 15 other men had also been sworn in.

After administering the oath and having the recruits sign the necessary forms, Sqdn. Ldr. Roberts explained that the R.C.A.F. was giving each boy a testament in his own faith on which he had taken his oath of allegiance. He said that on the first page the airmen would find their names, ranks and numbers, on the second a message from His Majesty and he suggested that on the blank page at the back, each boy should list his parents' names and their birthdays, so he wouldn't forget when the going gets tough.

The ten boys sworn into the service in the radio broadcast were: Glenn M. Hanes, 201 Stewart street; James T. Hunter, R.R. 5, Peterborough; James V. Hollingsworth, 206 King street; Arthur C. Porter, 16 Brown street; and Joseph Fergus Cavanagh, 20 Stewart stret.

Popular Branch

The recruits were interviewed following their acceptance in the R.C.A.F. and almost 50 per cent hoped to make the grade as fighter pilots. The others were divided between bomber pilots, air gunners and navigators. The average age was 18 years with about four between 20 and 26.

The other airmen who have been sworn in are: Donald Hamblin, 634 Rubidge street; Glen D. Daniels, Claraday P.O.; Alexander Clark, 701 Park street; Ralph E. Millage, Lakefield; Ross S. Rylott, R.R. 7 Peterborough; Wilson C. Newman, Bobcaygeon; Henry A. McIsaac, 58 Victoria avenue; John M. Fitzpatrick, 503 Murray street; Ronald M. Clarke, Wilberforce; William A. Hamley, a veteran of the Royal Flying Corps of the last war, will give out applications for men, and information about training and courses. Miss Helen Carson at the Y.M.C.A. will do the same thing for girls interested in the Women's Division.

Personnel with the unit included Sqdn. Ldr. J. M. Roberts, Flt. Lieut. T. Pryde, Flt. Lt. W. Cowan (doctor), F.O. W. J. Watts, Flt. Sgt. M. Lumley, and Cpl. H. King. A.S.O. Pauline Patterson and LAW. P. MacKenzie represented the Women's Division.

Miss M. A. Collins Is Laid To Rest

"She reaped a golden harvest of good works and charitable acts," said Rev. C. J. Carroll of Norwood at the conclusion of the requiem mass at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning in memory of Marita A. Collins, who prior to her illness had been secretary of St. Peter's Cemetery Board.

Several hundreds of the friends of the late Miss Collins attended the mass which was chanted by Rev. Father Malane assisted by Rev. V. J. Corkery and Rev. Gregory Wolff. Present in the sanctuary were Bishop MacDonald attended by Rev. Father Finn and Rev. Father Carroll and also Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

A wealth of beautiful flowers were transmuted into the grateful memories of friends of the late Miss Collins whose character was recalled in the same spirit of tribute to a warm hearted personality called from life before her time. "The church she loved so well has just chanted a last requiem for the eternal repose of her soul. She has gone on that journey with the credentials of the church in its last sacrament to embellish her holy and acceptable life on earth."

Father Carroll said Miss Collins had been endowed with unusual qualities of heart and mind, deep sympathy and sense of compassion for the sick and those in distress, a warm charity and unfailing friendliness, combined with the basic virtues of religion, faith, hope and charity, and obedience to the will of God.

"Marita Collins was an examplar of Catholic Christian girlhood and young womanhood. Our sympathy goes out to her bereaved sister and brother in their loss of a devoted sister. Her friends in religion and of the laity unite today in interceding for her before God that He may grant her pure soul eternal rest."

The pall bearers were Lewis W. LeBarr of this city and R.Q.M.S. Wilfred T. LeBarr of Toronto, Aleric A. Letellier, V. J. McElderry, K.C., John F. Lynch and Edward Overend.

Among those from out of town were: John McElderry and Miss Rose McElderry and Mrs. Norman McLeod of Guelph; Dr. and Mrs. Callaghan of London, Ontario; Mrs. Wm. Young and Mrs. Houlihan of Young's Point.

Market Efforts Add $16.66 For War Victims

The market stall made available by the City Council to assist the work of the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, more than ever continues to demonstrate its worth in raising money to help those who have suffered from air raid attacks over the British Isles.

Probably no other one activity offers greater opportunity whereby urban and rural citizens may cooperate with one another in assisting the cause, and while the wares offered for sale may come from either or both groups, experience has taught that in the matter of sales, both also play their part, which also applies in the direction of workers who play their part in acting as sales clerks.

At the stall last Saturday, Girl Guides Phyllis Whyte and Margaret Florence of the 1st St. Andrew's Company acted as sales clerks, their returns from the sale of produce amounting to $3.91, which was augmented by an additional 70 cents turned in by Mrs. Sweeting of R.R. 5, Peterborough, from sales made later in the day on the open market.

Several Donations

The produce offered for sale came from regular donors in both the city and district, with a quantity of sage coming from Mrs. Kohn, in addition to which a sale of tickets for a draw on a silver cheese dish donated by Schneider's Jewellery Store was conducted under the supervision of Mrs. Sweeting, who sold a large number of those disposed of, which in all netted the sum of $12.05, thus making a total of $16.66, which is credited in today's list from the market activities.

The draw for the dish was made by Miss Eileen Schoales, which resulted in ticket No. 176 being the winner, which gave the prize to Mrs. William Bolger of 760 Duffus street, this city.

Next Saturday this market effort is to be conducted entirely by the Fairview War Workers Group which has given considerable help to the fund on previous occasions, and in conjunction with this, the members are selling tickets for a draw on a pair of pillow slips worked and donated by Miss Mary Fowler, a resident of that district, who at 80 years of age is thus doing her bit to help things along.

Penny Box Passes $100

Among the first to be placed when the penny boxes went into circulation to assist the fund, the box at the Bell Telephone Co. Ltd. Office on Hunter street has now passed the $100 mark in money raised, the latest collection of $2.05 credited today giving it a total of $101.13 raised to date.

This coming Saturday will witness one of the outstanding sports events of this season, when a real game of soccer will be played at Riverside Park commencing at 2 p.m. between teams from the Royal Air Force Stations located at Picton and Mount Hope. The majority of the players were in peace time connected with many of the leading amateur and professional teams in the British Isles, and these lads in blue, representative of the few to whom so many owe so much, are coming here purely for the purpose of raising money to help the local fund in its work of assisting their compatriots in the motherland.

Last year they gave a first class exhibition of this very popular English sport, which alone deserves a bumper attendance, let alone the cause they seek to serve, and every cent thus spent will come to the fund. Secure your ticket at once, and give both the gallant men who form the teams and the fund a real boost.

Crown Presents Evidence In Murder Trial

COCHRANE, Ont., Sept. 16 (CP)—Defence Counsel Dean Kester opened his case today in the trial of Wilfred Desroches, 23, charged with murder last July 1 of Mrs. Alfreda April of Driftwood, 22 miles west of here. The crown completed its case yesterday.

Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier admitted as evidence yesterday two statements police officers said they obtained from Desroches in the afternoon and evening of the shooting, July 1.

Desroches had not signed the second statement but signed a note added to the foot of the statement saying he admitted the statement to be correct but would not sign until he had seen a lawyer. In the statement Desroches said he shot both the husband and wife. He told of drinking beer until 11:30 p.m. June 30, after which he went to his father's house in Cochrane where he obtained a revolver and package of shells and stole a car.

He drove to his father's farm near Driftwood to obtain money, the statement said. He obtained more beer and drove to Driftwood River where the car became stuck in the mud.

The statement, which police said was obtained from Desroches late July 1, said Desroches walked to the April farmhouse to get assistance to release the car. He drove back to the barn ahead of 66-year-old Jean Baptiste April. When Mrs. April came to the barn to milk a cow, he shot her.

The statement said Desroches then waited for the farmer to arrive, shot him, searched him for money and finding none, went to the farmhouse and drove away.

Desroches admitted shooting the farmer in an earlier statement but claimed two other men shot Mrs. April.

Sneak Thieves Rob 3 Homes

The police department issued another warning this morning to householders to be on their guard against sneak thieves. They are advised to keep their back doors locked and to be careful where they leave their purses as there seems to be an epidemic of this kind of stealing in Peterborough at the present time.

A number of cases were reported to the police Wednesday. Mrs. Hazel Barnes, 555 Aylmer Street, complained that after dinner yesterday she went out into the garden, and in her absence from the house, some one entered the place, went upstairs, stole $20 from her purse and then threw the wallet on a studio couch where Mrs. Barnes found it soon after, with the money gone.

Arthur Murphy, 288 Brock Street, had a wrist watch stolen from his house some time yesterday by a sneak thief, and the loss of $49 from another residence, under somewhat different circumstances was also reported.

Woman Hit By Car In Crossing Street

Mrs. Ellen White, 291 Burnham street, received bruises on the back of her legs when she was struck by a car at Hunter and Aylmer streets on Wednesday night.

Mrs. White in company with Miss M. McCabe, 291 Burnham street and Miss M. Morrow, Water street, was walking across the north side of the intersection from the east side of Aylmer street to the west when a car owned by Edward Cooney and driven by his son Edward Cooney, Jr., of 112 McDonnel street, travelling south on Aylmer street approached the corner.

It was raining at the time and the pedestrians had an umbrella up. According to the driver the women started to run toward the curb as the car drew near. Mrs. White was almost at the curb when she was struck and knocked down. The driver had applied his brakes but could not stop his car entirely before hitting the pedestrian.

This will be under the supervision of Miss Musa Cox, Supervisor of Music of the public schools of the city. Arrangements are also under consideration for the supplying of block memberships to the local Training Centre. At present the association is planning for a series of three concerts although an increased membership would make four concerts possible. Mr. G. R. Langley of the C.G.E., president of the association was in charge of the meeting and Miss Patterson representative of the Columbia Community Concerts was present.

Cables From England

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. M. Jamieson, 317 Maitland Avenue, have received word that their son, Pte. Gordon Jamieson, of the R.C.O.C., has arrived in England. He enlisted a year ago and trained at Toronto, Camp Borden, Newmarket and Barriefield. A brother, Lieut. Fred Jamieson, is with the R.C.O.C. in Winnipeg.

Duck Hunters Soaked By Late Rain

Envy of the sunshine autumn haze of the opening day of the duck shooting season in the local district north of No. 7 highway would probably not extend to the switch to rain late in the afternoon.

The day had been ideally pleasant along the shores of Pigeon Lake, but around five o'clock the weather lapsed to rain, and most of the local sportsmen reached home in the evening thoroughly dampened.

Cyril Lech reported six black ducks falling to his gun and carefully husbanded shells. Roy Hutchison and Bill Jeffries had four between them, and lost several others in the marsh.

The crop of bulrushes or cat-tails this season has grown to a remarkable height, cutting the vision from blinds and also adding difficulty to retrieving some of the birds that were knocked down in the opening fusilade. Quite a number of Peterborough sportsmen had enough ammunition in stock for the new season.

The only ducks seen yesterday were blacks that have nested in district waters all summer.

Alex Walker Writes Mayor Jas. Hamilton

"Dear Mr. Mayor:

I want to express my sincere thanks and keen appreciation for the civic reception and dinner given me by you and the members of the City Council in behalf of the citizens of Peterborough. The kindly feeling towards ex-service men and the evident respect in which the Legion is held in your city was particularly gratifying to me, and I enjoyed every minute of my visit.

Two Wyllie Brothers Arrive In Britain

Two Peterborough brothers, John O. and Robert J. Wyllie, sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Wyllie, 227 McDonnel Street, recently arrived in the Old County on military duty.

Mrs. John O. Wyllie, Jr., Armour Road, received a cable last week that her husband, a wireless operator in the Canadian Merchant Navy, had landed safely. This morning a letter from R. J. Wyllie, of the R.C.O.C., was received by his parents telling of his safe landing somewhere in Britain. Thousands of troops comprised the convoy.

The Poor Whites

PAPEETE, Tahita, Sept. 16—(AP)—Because Polynesians thought the first white visitors had a disease—since they were not dark skinned—they termed them ta'ata pupure, meaning leprous man. For the same reason a blond today is called vahine pupure, meaning leprous woman.

It Didn't Matter

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 16—(CP)—"In whose name?" asked the bank cashier, preparing a United States War Bond. "Corporal . ." "I'm sorry," the cashier interupted. "We cannot designate any military rank." "Then make it General ." said the woman—who wanted the bond for Cpl. General Washington Waters.

Board Requests New School

The Board of Education at a special meeting held in the Board room of the administration building on Wednesday afternoon decided to request the city council to have Wartime Housing erect a two-room school in the Park Hill Road area. K. S. Wightman, public school inspector stressed the need for extra classrooms in the west end as the Queen Mary school is now overcrowded and Prince of Wales school in all the lower grades has reached its capacity. Sufficient children are now attending Queen Mary school in kindergarten, Grades 1 and 2 from the Park Hill Road area to warrant the opening of a class room in that area and from the number who will be coming on in another year the second room would be required the inspector intimated.

He said that an extra teacher would not be required as the teacher now used in a makeshift class room in Queen Mary school would likely be sent to the new school.

MILLBROOK

Crown Deeded Cavan Family Land In 1848

MILLBROOK, Sept. 16 —(ENS)— —George Richmond Widdis, who died recently in his 88th year, was one of the oldest residents in Cavan Township and many events of historical interest are connected with him, for he was a member of a pioneer family.

His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Widdis, came to this country from Ireland, settling first near Janetville.

Their family consisted of three sons, George, Robert and Jeffrey, and the homestead, Lot 16, Concession 4, Cavan, was first taken out and cleared by an uncle of the deceased, Robert John Brown, the land being registered on July 6, 1804, in what was then known as the District of Newcastle, Province of Canada.

Crown Deed.

This land was latter taken over by Jeffrey Widdis, father of George Richmond Widdis, who was the youngest, and last surviving member, of a family of twelve children. One of the latter's most cherished possessions was the crown deed to this property; it was issued at Montreal, January 25th, 1848, bore the name of Queen Victoria, and "was witnessed by our right trusty, and well-beloved cousin, James, Earl of Elgin, Kincardine, Knight of the Most Ancient and Most Noble Order of the Thistle, Governor-General of British North America, and Governor-in-Chief and over our Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the Island of Prince Edward."

Having had practical experience in farming from the days of the ox-team, hand sickle and cradle, George Widdis, though so advanced in years, kept up his interests in his life occupation by doing some ploughing in 1941, then in his 85th year, and in the summer of 1942 helped with the harvesting of the hay crop.

UrgesMonument For Dr. Bethune

MONTREAL, Sept. 16 — (CP).— Delegates to the Canadian Congress of Labor convention here Tuesday expressed "deep appreciation" of the work done by the late Dr. Norman Bethune, "a great Canadian who unstintingly aided and gave his life in the cause of freedom for all peoples," and recommended to the Federal Government that a "living monument" be built in honor of his work.

The convention voiced its views by adoption of a resolution submitted by the Oshawa and District Labor Council and which was amended somewhat by the resolutions committee.

An Oshawa delegate noted that Dr. Bethune's father had founded a college in that city and asked that if possible any monument be erected there.

Dr. Bethune, former consulting surgeon to the Department of Pension, organized an ambulance unit which served in the Spanish war, and died in China in 1939 while in charge of a similar ambulance unit there.

Balloon Barrage Crews Land In Italy

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 16—(AP)—R.A.F balloon barrage crews clambered ashore with British and United States assault forces on the beaches in the Salerno area of Italy to give the ground troops and barges immediate protection from low-flying bombers, an R.A.F. statement related today.

"One detachment landed with their balloons in the Gulf of Salerno before daylight on invasion day," the statement said, "and waded ashore through 3½ feet of water carrying their balloons which they planted on the beach in a wave of heavy machine-gun and mortar fire."

The balloons were brought in at 200 feet altitude and then raised.

"We had hardly set foot on the sand when the German guns and mortars opened up on us and the balloons," said the British leader of one of the first detachments. "One of the balloons was shot down, but a new one was sent up immediately. We all lay down flat on the sand and watched the battle between the coastal guns and the salvoes of a destroyer."

The balloon crews were only 100 yards from a powerful German gun. A boat approached and a naval officer shouted, "is that the enemy on your left?" The balloon men replied: "You bet it is. Can you clear him out?" A few minutes later a broadside from a warship knocked the gun out.

Then the gun crew came out to surrender. The balloon men rounded up 20 prisoners and took them to landing craft.

R.A.F. Service Commandos also landed soon after the assault wave, ready to service Allied aircraft as soon as an airfield could be captured and put into operation.

Reserve Army Not Affected By Change-over

Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16—(CP)— Theoretically at least, Canadas Reserve Army stands promoted to a more important role in the defence of the country as a result of the decision to reduce and reorganize the three division of the Active Army stationed in Canada, under an interpretation placed on Monday's announcement by Defence Minister Ralston.

The reserve, numbering some 100,000 part-time soldiers around a nucleus of full-time paid administrative personnel, has just completed its summer camp training, which showed it had reached a state of efficiency never before attained by such a large nonpermanent force in Canada.

With the threat of actual invasion of Canadian soil receding, the question arises whether there should be a slackening off in Reserve Army atcivity as well as the reduction just announced in active army operational troops stationed in Canada.

Carry On.

There is no officail answer yet but there may be soon, and it is expected to be "No."

The order for the Reserve will be "carry on. The country needs you."

Speaking at Shilo, Man., early this week, Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of the General Staff, said: "It was the existence of the Reserve Army that enabled Canada to carry out the hundredfold expansion of its active army during the war. I look on the Reserve Army as being the backbone of Canada's military system, and I think it will remain so."

It is recalled that after the First Great War during which the skeleton organization of the non-permanent active militia—as the reserve was then known—was not used to a great extent, there was a letdown in military activity.

This was considered unfortunate, and army authorities hope when the present war ends to have the reserve units very much alive, so that ex-servicemen who wish to continue part-time military training will have organzations with which to affiliate.

U.S. Navy Loses Sub, 2 Chasers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)— Loss of the submarine Grenadier and two submarine chasers was reported by the United States Navy today.

The communique also told of a Japanese raid Sunday night on the United States base on Funafuti Island in the Ellice group in which one enemy plane was shot down and little damage was caused.

The Grenadier, reported overdue and presumed lost, apparently was one of the American submarines which have been inflicting heavy damage on Japanese supply lines throughout the Pacific. She carried a crew of about 65 men.

The subchasers 694 and 696 went down in the Mediterranean area as a result of enemy bombing. The attack, the Navy said, was made Aug. 23.

KEENE

Christians Must Win Both War And Peace

KEENE, Sept. 16 —(ENS) —The Preparatory and Reception service was held at Keene United Church and on Sunday the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed with a large attendance.

The topic of the sermon was based on "Elijah's triumph over the prophets of Baal." "In these days," said the Rev. Mr. Murray, "the test is on 'Shall the Lord Jehovah triumph over the heathenish gods of Nazism?' This will depend very much on our faith in God and our lives being worthy of such a triumph. The big task before us these days is not only to win the war but to win the peace. Both are very much in keeping with our attitude towards the worship of God and of Christ who said 'In the world ye shall have tribulation, be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.'"

The choir sang an anthem "Is It Well With My Soul Today."

Senators Told Of Need To Enlarge Army

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)— Lt.-Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, told senators today an army of 7,700,000 by the end of this year is "the minimum force required for the tasks ahead" and warned that any reduction would necessitate a change in the strategical commitments of the United States.

Gen. McNarney was the first of an all-star procession of high United States army and navy officials called before the senate military committee to testify on the need for further enlargement of American fighting forces.

Congressional leaders have indicated the decision on whether to defer or end the general drafting of fathers will hinge on high command "justification" for such enlargement.

Gen. McNarney said the 7,700,000-man army figure had been approved by his chief, Gen. George C. Marshall. The deputy chief-of-staff added:

"The collapse of Italy does not affect these figures."

"Any curtailment, reduction or postponement on an army of 7,700,000 on December 31, 1943, will necessitate a change in our strategical commitments," Gen. McNarney testified.

"Whoever initiates such a change must assume the grave responsibility for ignoring the considered judgment of our military leaders arrived at after careful and prolonged studies."

He said that on September 1 the army's strength was approximately 7,300,000 officers and men.

Canadian Jap Loves Boxing Detests Axis

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 16—(CP)—Little Katsuma Marioka, one of Canada's fighting men, came to Britain nursing a rifle, a passion for boxing and a hatred of the Axis.

A Canadian-born Japanese adopted by a Scottish couple, Katsuma hasn't aimed the gun at an enemy fighter—not yet. Just completing army training, he took time out to line his fistic sights on a weaving form in a London ring and discovered a two-year vacation from Bash Boulevard played hob with his speed and timing.

The 25-year-old featherweight who faced world champions in his varied travels, dropped an eight-round decision to Jimmy Hayes of Leeds, an unorthodox gent who boasts a victory over the Welsh feather titlist, Katsumo traded him punch for punch and a packed Quensbury Club gathering gave him a great ovation. The verdict went against him because he persisted in clinching.

Rfmn. Marioka, native of New Westminster, B.C., who enlisted at Toronto with the Queen's Own Rifles, didn't worry much about the loss because boxing holds a secondary spot to his ambition of "getting at those German ——"

"I've never been knocked out while fighting as a professional," he said, spitting blood from a cut lip in his dressing room after the bout with Hayes. "And I consider it a good omen that I won't get knocked out in this bigger fight."

Varied Ring Career

Adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Russell of Vancouver after his parents died, Katsumo joined the forces under his Christian name of Kazumi James Inomata and reached Britain at the start of the year. But it was under the ring name of Katsuma Marioka that he fought and lost decisions to World Champions Small Montana, Lou Salica and Joey Archibald.

Britain isn't new to this Japanese-Canadian. He went through 15 scraps here in 1937 during which he beat Jimmy Campbell, the then flyweight champion of Scotland. Later, he fought the best of the lighterweights that South America could offer during a two-year tour of that country.

"I didn't have much trouble down there," Katsuma said. "They weren't very good fighters."

A couple of Canadians Katsuma beat back home are serving with the Canadian Army here and in Sicily and he would relish the chance of meeting them again. They're Eddie Petrin of Montreal and Bobby Docherty of Toronto, a private with the 48th Highlanders who won the featherweight championships of the Canadian and British Armies in 1942.

DOROTHY DIX

HONEYED TONGUE CAN REWIN HUSBAND WHEN WRATH WON'T

Wife Should Have Sense of Humor and Make Herself and Home Attractive.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—My husband works hard, brings his money home, is pleasant to live, a good father to our son, and gives every indication of loving me. But I have reason to believe he is unfaithful to me. The evidence is more or less circumstantial, but nevertheless convincing. However, I have not confronted him with it and don't exactly know what to do. I know a woman who found the gloves of another woman in her husband's car, and who merely laid them beside his dinner plate and said nothing about it. But in the end he left her for a woman of poor character, anyway. So I wonder if a docile wife is the most successful one, and if I should go into a tantrum? What would you suggest?

TROUBLED WIFE.

ANSWER—Did you ever hear of a wife who won back her husband's wavering affections by having tantrums and bawling him out? You never did. Nor did anyone else. There is nothing else in the world, not even raging lions or roaring guns, of which men are so much afraid and which they dread facing so much as an angry woman. So any wife who wants to entice her husband back to his own fireside should put honey on her tongue instead of pouring over him her vials of wrath.

I grant you that dealing with a philandering husband is a ticklish job, and there are no blue prints for doing it that a woman can follow and be sure of success. But I am always struck with the fact that when the great majority of women are called upon to solve this momentous problem they almost invariably go about it the wrong way.

Of course, if a man is born with a wandering foot the case is hopeless. Nothing his wife can possibly do will stop him from getting up and following any good-looking woman who passes his way. When the average husband, however, wanders a little off the straight and narrow matrimonial path it is not because he is driven by some cosmic urge. He still loves his wife and thinks her the greatest woman in the world, and is devoted to his home and children, but he has gotten fed up with domesticity and wants to have a little fling. He does it in precisely the same spirit that a boy plays hookey from school, and he expects his wife to take it just as his mother used to do when he was naughty—spank him, kiss him, and forget it.

If the wife meets the situation with this understanding, she laughs it off, teases him a little about his girl friend, gets herself some new clothes, feeds him up on the things he likes to eat, and makes home so attractive he decides the pleasures of sin are overrated, and rarely strays off of the lot again.

But few wives have the gumption to do this. They make a tragedy instead of a farce of their husbands' little affairs. They overwhelm them with reproaches, tell them what good wives they have been and how they have sacrificed for them. They salt them down with their tears. Some wives go about like early Christian martyrs, and make home so dreary and unpleasant that their husbands cannot bear to come home of a night, and that naturally drives them for consolation to women who are gay and amusing and good company.

It seems to me that you are going out of your way to borrow trouble about your husband. As long as he is giving a convincing performance of being a good and faithful mate you should give him the benefit of the doubt. When he slacks up on his job, quits bringing his money home, and takes to staying out at night, you may begin doing some sleuthing about how the lipstick got on his shirt front, but not before.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a decent happy, young married man with a wonderful wife. I am a defense employe and work with hundreds of women whom the men call "she-wolves." These girls are supposedly working for Uncle Sam's vital war industry, but it looks to me as if their chief business is the pursuit of men. They ask men for dates, offer to pay the bills, and make men handsome presents. And whether a man is married or not does not make the slightest difference to them. These girls have no respect for marriage, or any of the conventions, or what we call the decencies of life. They don't wait for men to pursue them. They take the initiative.

Of course, there are many fine, good women working in defense plants, but there are so many of these "she-wolves" that I wonder what the world is coming to?

J. S. J.

ANSWER—I get so many letters similar to this from men workers in defense plants that it looks as if Uncle Sam will have to hire chaperons for the male employees instead of the females.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I quite frequently go out with men in uniform. Should I go Dutch treat, or expect the man to pay for everything? After all, I know he is only making $50 a month and hasn't much to spend while I have plenty. Yet I hesitate to do this because I am afraid it might be humiliating to a man for a girl to insinuate that he is unable to pay for her entertainment. Also, would it be proper for me to invite him to my home for home-cooked meals? Would he consider it a hint for marriage if invited into the home?

MURIEL.

ANSWER—The Dutch treat plan as between men and women is a modern problem that has not been definitely settled. On the face of it, this seems a practical and common sense way of meeting an up-to-date situation, and that it is only fair for a girl, who is earning as much or more than a boy, to pay her share of the expenses when they step out together.

The majority of girls would like to do this, and it would enable them to have many more dates than they do now, since a boy has to save up and maybe go on a thin diet himself before he can afford to take Angelina to the movies and buy her a hamburger afterwards.

But while the girls have gone modern on the finance question, a lot of boys haven't. They still feel that they have to put on a show when they take a girl out and spend as if they were a Rockefeller. So the poor girl doesn't know what to do. She would like to grab the check, but she is afraid it would be a mortal offense to the boy if she did.

Hence, the best answer I can make to your question is that you will just have to feel your escort out, see how he stands on the Dutch treat proposition, and act accordingly.

Certainly, there is no reason why you shouldn't ask your soldier or sailor friend to a home dinner, and you need not be afraid that he would think that it meant an overture to matrimony, and that you were trying to win his heart and hand through his stomach.

For Friday, September 17

ACCORDING to the lunar transits of this day there may be confusions and perplexities in business affairs, in which there may be discord or want of cooperation from employers, elders or others whose endorsement is imperative to the successful development of issues at stake. Endeavor to meet amiably all opposition and be sure to abide by accepted rules and reghlations. Changes may bring benefits, with quick definite action.

Those whose birthday it is may be obliged to make changes and reversals in their plans and objectives in order to reap desired returns, for decisive and constructive enterprise. There may be opposition or friction with those in inflsential positions, and these should be placated or met on a basis of accepted rules and regulations. But yielding judiciously may bear results. In social, affectional and domestic associations there is forecast of pleasant and profitable contacts.

Corp. Lelio Bettina wouldn't say today, but it's a safe guess he's convinced army life and Jimmy Bivins don't mix.

Before dropping a 10-round decision to the Cleveland negro last night, the New York military policeman declared the army had made him a better fighter and vowed to prove it at Bivins' expense.

"I'm not talking," was Bettina's tired reply to questioners who invaded his dressing room after the scrap.

The 14,900 customers who contributed $52,650 to witness the skirmish in Cleveland's Lakefront Stadium didn't see the same Bettina who southpawed his way to an easy triumph over Bivins in November of 1941. They didn't see the same Bivins either, for the long-armed Clevelander warded off the M.P.'s portside slants and connected more consistenly and more effectively with ripping right hands.

In stretching his own victory string to 13, Bivins handed Bettina his first loss in 15 engagements as a heavyweight. The Clevelander weighed 182½, three pounds less than Bettina.

All-Time Record

The Phillies of the National League established an all-time attendance record at Shibe Park this season with an aggregate of 466,876 fans, doubling the 1942 total, and the club is expected to show a nice profit after having curtailed training trip and team expenses.

In the first round of the "World's Series" in Women's Softball at Detroit, opening Saturday, Vancouver has been drawn to meet Cleveland; Regina will clash with Cranston, R.I., and Toronto is scheduled to play Phoenix, Ariz. A preliminary tonight will see New Orleans Jax, defending champions, meeting Detroit Ford Bomberettes.

Because of lack of interest last fall, the city championship baseball series between the Chicago White Sox and the Chicago Cubs is not to be staged this year.

Purchase Pitcher.

Pittsburgh Pirates last night announced the purchase of Elwin (Preacher) Roe of Columbus, leading strikeout pitcher of the American Association with a total of 125. The southpaw won 14 games and lost six during the past season, allowing 51 runs in 150 innings.

Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis said yesterday that the plan approved by the U.S. Army authorities, to send two major league all-star teams to the war fronts was not his idea. "I'm not hostile to it, but it's not my baby," he added. The players are donating their services.

Player Deal.

Catcher Stewart Hofferth was yesterday sold by the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association to the Boston Braves with the minor league club receiving cash and two players in the deal.

Beating a field of 126 golfer-curlers, Harry Guy captured the Granite Club's 10th annual curlers' golf tournament at Kitchener yesterday, touring the Westmount course in 77. George Ewena, Waterloo, was runner-up with an 81.

Bow Dresses Take a Bow

By ALICE ALDEN

BOWS TAKE a bow when used on a dress designed for meetings with one's best beau, says the college girl, judging from reports from college shops the country over. Here is an attractive and wearable frock for campus belles. It is fashioned of warm wool in a dark green and has two bows, one tied together at the bustline, the other at the waistline, to give suggestion of a draped silhouette.

Dorothy Challice Married To Henry Jewison

MILLBROOK, Sept. 16—(ENS)—An early fall wedding was quietly solemnized in St. Andrew's United Church on Saturday at 2:30 p.m., when Dorothy Grace, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Challice, of Millbrook, was united in marriage to Henry Roscoe, son of Mr. Norman Jewison, and the late Mrs. Jewison of Baillieboro, the Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D., performing the ceremony.

The bride looked attractive in a smartly-tailored navy suit, with pin stripe, matching hat and veil, white sheer blouse with fine tucking and insertion, white gloves, navy suede shoes, and corsage of dark red roses; the groom's gift, a gold heirloom locket and chain was also worn.

Miss Marjorie Sutton of Peterborough, was bridesmaid, wearing a black suit, with matching hat and white accessories, white triple sheer blouse, and corsage of yellow roses. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Arnold Barnard of Baillieboro.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and a buffet luncheon served, the guests including only the immediate relatives. Later Mr. and Mrs. Jewison left by motor for their wedding trip to points east, and upon their return will reside on the groom's farm, Baillieboro. The bridesmaid's gift from the groom was a Dresden corsage pin, and that of the groomsman a gold bar tie pin.

MAY'S SCHOOL

May's Home and School Association re-opened their meetings for the fall term with the vice-president, Mrs. E. Frizzelle in the chair, for the meeting on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Frizzelle opened the meeting with the usual exercises and then the president, Mrs. G. H. Robinson, took the chair, and after a few words of welcome, introduced the new principal, Mr. Burns, who succeeds Mr. Wedlock. Mr. Burns in reply spoke briefly, assuring the ladies of his interest and support.

Plans were made for a rummage sale, and also for the graduation night program at the October meeting. It was decided to sing a favorite hymn at the beginning of each meeting. Mr. Burns was introduced to each mother in turn at the social period following the meeting.

Something To Remember

Miss Gertrude Cox, hospitality convener for the W. V. S. would like hostesses to bear in mind, when offering hospitality to members of our armed fores that a lavish meal is not supposed to be the main feature of this part of their war effort, especially in these days of rationing and difficult shopping. The idea of such hospitality is to give the men and women in uniform a chance to spend an afternoon and evening away from the camp, preferably in a home, since they are often far away from their own homes.

Relaxing in Slacks

Nancy Coleman's wool slacks are of authentic clan plaid; her Shetland knit pullover has a turtle neck; her wool gloves and socks match in color; her polo coat is camel's hair; her belt is leather.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

EVERYTHING pretty Nancy Coleman of the films, above, is wearing for this fashion photograph is correct as can be . . . and comfortable. Wool protects her, from chin to toes and finger tips . . . she's ready for a hike, a fuel shortage at home, a tramp in the country, a campus visit, a ski trip, sunny October day of sailing. It's a pity she can't have an automobile, too, for she is dressed but perfectly for a week-end on wheels.

If you are wearing slacks except in the privacy of home chores, make a costume of them. High heels, frothy blouses, form fitting top coats, are bad fashion medicine with casual pants.

TESTED RECIPES . . .

By MARY MOORE

Both of these recipes are super good, but one is ultra super—and is called Peach Snowbank Pie—since it contains ice cream—but yet is baked!—it is a tricky little accomplishment. It calls for ½ cup sugar.

Peach Snowbank.

One-quarter teaspoon cream of tartar, 3 egg whites, ½ cup sugar (or ¼ cup sugar and 3 saccharin tablets dissolved in 1 tablespoon hot water), 1 baked pie shell, 4 or 5 whole peaches fresh or canned, 1 pint ice cream, frozen hard. Add cream of tartar to egg whites and beat them stiff; add sugar gradually, beating until sugar is dissolved and meringue is stiff. Line pastry shell with freshly sliced peaches. Sprinkle them with the sugar if fresh peaches are used. Cover the fruit with slices of the stiffly frozen ice cream and top with a few reserved slices of fruit. Cover entire surface with meringue thickly enough to keep ice cream from melting. Bake in hot oven until meringue is delicately browned. Pie should be placed near top of oven or near broiler so that it will brown quickly. Serve immediately.

Peach Roll.

Two cups all-purpose flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons fat, 1 egg, ½ cup milk, 1½ cups fresh peaches sliced thin, 1-3 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon nutmeg. Sift together first 4 ingredients. Cut in fat until mixture resembles coarse oatmeal. Beat egg, add milk. Add to flour mixture; mix with a fork until flour disappears. Turn out dough on floured board; knead lightly for a few seconds. Roll into a rectangle 8 to 16 inches. Spread peach evenly over dough. Sprinkle with sugar mixed with nutmeg. Roll up like jelly roll starting with small end. Transfer to greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven for 10 minutes, reduce heat to moderate for remainder of making period, 25 minutes.

The sugar in both these peach desserts may be reduced and replaced with 1 or 2 saccharin tablets dissolved in a little hot but not boiling water.

The Peach Snowbank pie can be assembled as far as the peaches in the crust; just before serving have the top oven very hot, put on ice cream, cover with meringue, brown quickly and immediately serve.

Henry-Lunney Nuptials At Bailieboro

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 16—(ENS)—Amid a setting of beautiful hydrangeas in Christ Church on Saturday, September 11 at 3 o'clock the marriage was solemnized of Eda Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lunney to Earl Borden Thorne, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henry of Campbellcroft. Rev. A. E. Chevis officiated and Miss Mamie Collins of Millbrook played the wedding music. Miss Loretta McDougall of Peterborough sang "O Promise Me" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a golden brown crepe suit with dark brown Rembrandt bonnet and accessories. She carried an arm bouquet of Sweetheart roses. Miss Marguerite Macklin of Port Hope was bridesmaid and wore a moss green crepe suit with brown hat and accessories and carried a nosegay of cornflowers and button asters. Mr. William Dean of Garden Hill was best man and the ushers were Dr. J. W. Wright of Millbrook, cousin of the bride and Howard Henry, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception for about 70 guests was held at 'Dunnwoody Farm' the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fisher. The bride's mother was gowned in Queen's blue sheer with matching accessories, while the groom's mother wore black and white printed crepe with black accessories. Both wore corsages of pink gladioli. A buffet luncheon was served by six of the bride's friends, Misses Elva Jewison, Hazel Armstrong, Isabelle McCamus, Winnifred Gainer, Dorothy Smith and Eleanor Haddow. A color scheme of pink and white was used throughout and a lace covered table held the beautiful wedding cake flanked on either side by tall pink tapers.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry left for a motor trip to Toronto and points west. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm near Campbellcroft.

Dawson-Tate Vows At Centreville

CENTREVILLE, Sept. 16.— Centreville Presbyterian Church, prettily decorated with a profusion of gladioli, was the setting for a beautiful wedding on Saturday, when Madge Robena, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tate of Millbrook, became the bride of James Alan Dawson of Baillieboro. Rev. Walter Patterson officiated at the ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, played by the groom's aunt, Mrs. Walter Dawson of Toronto, who also played appropriate music during the ceremony.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin with lace inserts and sweetheart neckline, long sleeves coming to a point at the wrist. Her floor-length veil fell from a white net halo head dress caught with orange blossoms worn by her mother at her wedding. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses with ribbon cascades.

Misses Barbara Argue and Mary Whittington attended her as the bridesmaids, and they were dressed respectively in floor-length gowns of orchid and yellow net over taffeta, with contrasting head dress of flowers. They carried nosegays in corresponding colors.

The groom was supported by Morley Bickle of Canton and the ushers were Gordon Might and Alvin Tate, cousin and brother of the bride.

During the signing of the register Dr. Walter Dawson of Toronto sang "I'll Walk Beside You."

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for about fifty guests, the rooms being decorated with pink and white gladioli.

Mrs. Tate in a two-piece dress of blue crepe trimmed with white and corsage of roses, was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. Dawson, mother of the groom, gowned in a moss green crepe dress with corsage of Talisman roses.

A buffet luncheon was served by four girls, Lois Harper, Marion McGill, Esther Might, and Audrey Wood.

The happy couple left on a motor trip through Northern Ontario, the bride travelling in a two-piece wool suit of gold with brown velvet trimmings, brown hat and accessories. Upon their return they will reside at the groom's home, Baillieboro.

Sartorial Perfection

By ALICE ALDEN

THE GENERAL effect of the smart woman is always that of a well-thought-out, harmonious sartorial scheme, with no one particular detail standing out or obscuring the complete effect. Elaine Shepard gives her version of a well-chosen costume which includes a simple black frock, a tailored jacket of biscuit colored woollen, a black hat, shoes and bag, gold jewelry and brown furs, a smart and attractive color scheme.

Children Always Hungry So Week's Menu Is Laid Out

By MARY MOORE

"Dear Mary Moore: I wonder if you can help me with the problem of feeding my family properly?

My husband is a clerk at ——— paid on the usual production basis of six days a week. Of course bond payments and savings certificates are deducted.

We have five children, three girls, age twelve, eleven and six, and two boys, four and three. What amount should I pay for groceries each week? The children are always hungry. They are very active and healthy and will east almost anything, but they rae never satisfied from one meal to another.

I have been using three quarts of milk a day, two of Jersey and one homo with an occasional extra quart and about 3 dozen eggs a week, and our quota of butter. We have a vegetable garden of tomatoes, carrots, beets and green beans which is a help, but it seems to me that if I bought all the fruit and meat that the children crave it would take our entire pay.

Would you have time to arrange a week of main dishes and desserts for me, that would provide good nourishment without being expensive? My husband takes his lunch each day and we have dinner at night.

Thanking you very much for any help you can give me, Mrs. J. W. F."

Dear Mrs. J. W. F.: You make me ashamed that I ever even slightly wondered how I was going to satisfy the perennial hunger of my youngsters—and I only have two to fill.

However I certainly can help you with a feeding and budgeting problem.

Your egg quota of 3 dozen per week is sufficient, for actually 1 egg per person every other day is sufficient for adequate nutrition. But.... three quarts of milk per day are not enough for a family of seven. You should buy 5 quarts ordinary run-of-the-cow milk every day, for it is your cheapest and best food without any doubt.

You should serve a 4-oz. serving of meat (before it is cooked) to each member of the family every day unless you replace it with sufficient quantities of beans, or peas or cheese or nuts which are also protein food. Beans are filling food and I would like you to notice particularly after you serve dinner on Thursday (see lists below) calling for Boston Baked Beans how satisfied your youngsters are—that is if they eat a generous portion—I venture to say they won't be plaguing you for a snack an hour or two after the meal is over.

Moral: Serve beans often — they are satisfying food.

You will have to lay in a good supply of canned tomatoes every week too—these supply vitamins in generous amounts and are inexpensive. Apples and cabbage should be served raw and often—cabbage should not be cut more than 5 minutes before serving time unless immediately coated with dressing and covered with a lid.

Right now you can buy small potatoes for less than the ceiling price. Scrub these (or let your big girls do it) and cook them with the skins on and let the children have a generous serving of them—they are filling and "stick to the ribs."

If the children are not satisfied when a meal is over let them have a slice of whole wheat bread and butter to fill in the crevices.

One week's adequate, but, minimum cost menus for 2 adults, 5 children. (Note: Home managers who are interested in this number of people should clip this now—as we do not have space to repeat.)

NOTE:—The above plan for a minimum-cost adequate diet for an indefinite period gives the cheapest combination of foods that is desirable. In order to meet all nutritional needs cheaply this diet calls for many cereal products and plenty of milk. Just enough fruits, vegetables, eggs and lean meats are used to supply the vitamins and minerals and protein not generously enough supplied by cereals and breads and milk—and enough fat and sweets to fill in needed calories and satisfy a craving for them.

There can be very small variety in weekly meals or even breakfasts when the cost of a well-rounded diet is kept at a minimum. The cost of this suggested diet at average city prices is between $15.00 and $16.00 per week for a family of seven.

These cobweb, pure wool, light scarfs can be worn in any number of ways to be fascinating and protective. The colors are complexion flatterers with tailored or dress clothes.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE light as a zephyr, cobwebby wool scarf is back for another big season. Manufactured in heavenly colors taken smack off a sunset or dawn sky, these cloudy lengths of knit wool protect your coiffure from breezes, cherish your ears against bitter weather. Shown here on school girls, presumably happy as tots because it's between-class time on the campus, these scarfs are also very good choice for evening wear. They don't muss a hair-do .. act rather as a hair net might .. and are removed and pocketed easily during dinner or theatre dates.

ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

Question: I am a constant reader of your column and have received many good recipes and cooking hints, but would appreciate some further advice on a recipe which appeared in your column some weeks ago.

This recipe was one for brining of beans, corn, etc.

My problem is what do you do after the period of time required for the vegetables to remain in the crocks? Do you transfer them to sealers? Is the corn brined on the cob or is it cut from the cob? Also is the brining method used mainly for small cucumbers? Thanking you,

Answer: The vegetables do not need to be taken from the salt until used. Details are given below.

Salt Canned Beans

String and cut fresh snap beans as if for immediate use; tightly pack a sterile jar with alternate layers of the sliced, uncooked beans, add salt, allowing ½ cup of the salt to each quart of beans; then fasten air-tight with some of the salt at the top. If enough brine to cover the beans does not develop in a few days, a little slightly salted water may be added. These will keep crisp and green for months. When opened soak overnight—or if opened within a month or so 1 hour may be plenty; then parboil and drain once or twice in fresh water to remove salt, then cook until tender.

Salting Corn

Husk the corn and remove the silk. Precook it in boiling water for from 5 to 8 minutes. Cool it enough to handle, then cut the kernels from the cob. Weigh the corn and mix it with from 1-6 to ¼ its weight of salt. Pack it in a stone jar or crock that has been washed with boiling water. Cover the crock with a plate or a paraffined board. Weight the board with a jar of water. The brine should just cover the corn. Store in a cool place. If the corn shows a tendency to mould transfer it to smaller jars and seal them. Freshen and cook according to directions given for beans above.

Brining Cucumbers

Select 10 lbs. cucumbers, wash and remove all grit and dirt. Place cucumbers in a clean crock which is free of any fat. In making a brine use pure salt. To nine pints water at 85 deg. Fahr. add 1 lb. salt. Cover cucumbers with the brine. If extra brine is needed, add ½ cup of salt to each quart of water. Cover with disc of tasteless wood cut 1 inch thick and 1 inch smaller than diameter of jar.

Place weight on top of wood cover to keep cucumbers submerged. Cover crock with a piece of rubber (inner tube would do) cut several inches larger than the opening in the jar. Keep weight on top to make container as airtight as possible. Keep jar in cool place. On following day add 1 lb. salt for each 10 lbs. cucumbers. Place the salt on the wooden disc. At the end of 1 week and for each succeeding week until cured, place ¼ lb. salt on the wooden disc. Keep gray film removed from surface of brine. Before fermentation is completed add 2 tablespoons of sugar to each 10 lbs. of cucumbers. This raises the acidity of the brine. This is fermentation brining.

This Week's Best Wartime Recipe

Contributed By Mary Moore Readers

Dear Mary Moore: I do not think I am bringing you anything very wonderful this time, but I only want to remind your readers of old-fashioned little meat pies. Not the kind you buy in pork shops but those you can make at home in your muffin tins.

~~Home-ma~~de Individual Meat Pies.

Make your best plain pastry, being sure to use 1 cup lard to 3 cups flour, 2 teaspoons salt and water to moisten—if you use less lard than this, unless you are an expert, your pastry will be tough. Cut out large rounds of pasty which is rolled quite thin, and fit into bottoms and sides of your muffin or tart tins. Fill with filling made from leftover roast beef or pork, or better still, fresh beef which has been floured and browned in hot fat, then barely covered with water and simmered tender. Add salt and pepper to make it a good rich flavor. After filling the pastry lined tins 2-3 full with this mixture, cover with pastry tops, pinching edges very well, but gashing tops to allow escape of steam. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. until pastry is golden brown.

I can get enough for 12 of these little pies out of 1½ lbs. flank steak (2 coupons) and have enough for 2 for each member of my family of four, and 1 for each of our lunches —I eat lunch alone—the others carry theirs to work.

I hope this idea is helpful to some other mother who needs to stretch her money and coupons a long way—Mrs. Milton.

Thanks for a pleasant reminder of a too-often-neglected dish.

Clever Color Contrast

By ALICE ALDEN

LIGHT colored frocks with black or dark brown accessories is a fashion that seems to interest women all over the country. One reason for this is that many women are wearing good Spring frocks and dressing them up with new accessories for Autumn use. Ruth Warwick likes jet black with light blue and so, with this frock of hyacinth blue crepe, she wears a skimmer of black felt, elbow length black suede gloves, and a black kid bag with lucite trim. A pair of silver leaves and two silver butterfly earrings complete the accessories.

Kitchener Boy Shot By Police

KITCHENER, Sept. 16— (CP) — Police said to-day that Clarence Kudoba of Kitchener was in hospital in critical condition, the result of a gunshot wound suffered when he and a companion Bruce Pufhall, also of Kitchener, attempted to escape from officers after breaking into the Kissner Milling Company.

Constable Harold Winnfield and Patrol Sgt. Hall said they chased the pair along a railroad track and ordered them to halt. Four warning shots were fired in the air, said Winnfield, and as the two left the railroad tracks he fired a fifth shot, "this time lower," and it apparently hit Kudoba.

Kudoba was found by a Dill Street resident on his lawn shortly after. He was rushed to hospital. Constable Winnfield meanwhile caught up to Pufhall and took him to headquarters.

St. James' Invites Sectional Rally

A brief devotional service led by Mrs. E. L. Woodley opened St. James' W.M.S September meeting, which was held in the church parlor Monday night.

Mrs. W. Rose, the president, presided over the business session. The annual canvass for the Bible Society was discussed and Mrs. A. E. Prest appointed convener for St. James' Auxiliary.

It was decided to invite the Sectional Rally of Peterborough W.M.S. Presbyterial to hold their gathering this year in St. James' United church.

The president suggested, owing to the coal situation, that as many meetings as possible be held in the homes of members.

Reports from departments were heard. Christian Stewardship was presented by Miss M. Deyell, who read an interesting account of the Japanese evacuation from the coast, as outlined in the leaflet "Opportunities for dark days." Mrs. W. K. Sloane reported for Temperance and cited several facts which came to her personal experience which showed the great need for work among young people.

New Course

"For all of Life," the new study book for Auxiliaries, was introduced by Mrs. A. Hunter, who read the preface "They are finding a way."

Mrs. E. Beavis, group leader for the self denial meeting, always held in September, took the chair, and announced the theme "A service of dedication to the Great Commission." The hymn, "The King of Love" chosen by Mrs. Waterman, an absent member, opened the worship, when all joined in a litany of dedication, led by Mrs. T. Meredith.

A responsive reading followed with Mrs. Beavis and Mrs. Godfrey taking the leading parts.

Whitby School

The work being accomplished by the W.M.S. school for leaders at Whitby was presented in an intimate glimpse of the various activities, by Constance E. Wagar, one of the Whitby school staff.

Some concrete suggestions included joint meetings with the junior organizations, the appointment of a secretary for these junior groups, and stressed missionary education and reading contests. A plea for a 5 per cent increase along all lines this year, she said, was being asked by the Bay of Quinte branch.

A highlight of the school was the daily period of worship led by the Dean, Mrs. W. L. Smyth.

Mrs. E. Kitney and Mrs E. R. Frost sang a duet "He Understands and Cares" accompanied by Mrs. F. W. Craik at the piano.

Preceding the reception of the self-denial offering, an appropriate story on the subject "Mrs. Morgan's quarter" was read by Mrs. Beavis and was an inspiration to giving for all. The offering was taken by Miss Deyell and dedicated by the pastor, Rev. F. W. Craik.

Kissed By Marlene

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 16—(AP)— When Sgt. Carl E. W. Bell of Rising Star, Tex., ventured into the Hollywood Canteen, Marlene Dietrich, Deanne Durbin and Lana Turner met him at the door. Two name bands blared a welcome, and Eddie Cantor was master of ceremonies for a show presented by Ginnie Simms, Red Skelton and Lena Horne. He got a kiss from Miss Dietrich, too. For Sergt. Bell, invalided home from New Guinea, was the millionth service man to visit the canteen.

Dreams Rise From Your Secret Self

Another "You" Wakes in Sleep

Do you know you have two selves?

One is the self everyone knows. The other not even YOU want to know! It thinks thoughts you're ashamed to recognize. It does things you'd never do.

And you can't get rid of it! It wakes when you sleep. It makes you dream of the wierdest, most puzzling things. Riding to work, your train whizzes past your station and the next one and the next one! You're filled with panic!

This is because your secret self, your "subconscious," is seething with problems, emotions you ignore. In dreams it tries to tell you about them, using its own strange, symbolic language.

In the dream of the train it says: "Don't let your impulses run away with you!" If you've been attracted to someone else's beau, that is an obvious warning!

Our 32-page booklet explains many such common dreams and dream symbols—according to psychoanalysis; including flying, falling off cliffs.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service for your copy of THE MEANING OF DREAMS. Be sure to write plainly your name, addres and the name of booklet.

COAL PRODUCTION DOWN

LONDON — (CP). — Britain's coal output for the four weeks ending August 7 was 12,388,000 tons, a drop of 1,926,000 tons from the previous four-week period. The Ministry of Fuel said the fact most miners are taking their holidays in July and August was the main reason for the drop.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

DUPLICATE VS. RUBBERS

THERE ARE many close differences between the play in rubber bridge and match point duplicate, as well as between the bidding of the two games. It extends to the defense as well as to the offense. In rubber bridge, every effort must be expended by one side to make its contract, and by the defenders to defeat it. In match point duplicate, however, the risk of giving the declarer an extra trick must not be assumed if you think the chance of beating the contract is very remote.

South: ♠A Q 6 ♥K Q 9 5 ♦A Q 9 ♣K J 5

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1♦	2NT
Pass	3♣	Pass	3♥
Pass	3♠	Pass	6NT

That reverse bid of 3-Spades by North was the tip-off to South that the 3-Clubs call had not been based on weakness. It showed up East's weak opening bid so badly that West did not even open the suit. He decided instead to try to kill North's club suit by knocking out its side entry or entries in spades. His lead was the fourth-best 2.

South saw a certain 12 tricks in sight, he reckoned, and a chance for all of the tricks if East could be induced to lay off with the heart A in case he had it. So he won the spade lead with dummy's K and promptly led the heart 8. East visualizing South as possibly finessing a J to a Q held by West, played low, and the K won. East felt that two heart tricks by his side might beat the contract.

After this, South took the spade A and Q, the club K, J, A and Q, the spade J and then the club 10. East had been pared down to the heart A and three diamonds. He was squeezed, but of course did not discard the heart A and make the Q good. Instead, he picked the diamond 10, whereupon the diamond Q was finessed, the A dropped the K and the 9 took the thirteenth trick for South.

LAKEFIELD

Garden Brigade Wins Praise For Year's Work

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 16 —(ENS)— The members of the Girls' Garden Brigade displayed the fruits of their labour at the annual Achievement Day held in Memorial Hall recently.

There were eleven exhibits of vegetables, arranged with speciments of carrots, squash, broccoli, beets, turnips, tomatoes, cabbage, onions and cucumbers, and also two jars of tomatoes which had been canned by the exhibitor.

Mr. Frank Patterson, local agricultural representative, judged the vegetables and Miss Elizabeth Scott, representative of the Women's Institute branch of the Agricultural Society, decided who won high honours in the canning.

Helped Girls.

A great deal of credit for the successful year which the Garden Brigade had, is due to Eva Higgins, assisted by Edna Higgins, who were the leaders for the year and gave the girls help and encouragement with their gardens. Miss Scott said each girl had made good use of the seeds with which she had been provided.

Miss Scott awarded the prizes as follows:

The leaders' badges, which were presented to Eva and Edna Higgins.

2nd year girls—1 Faye Crawford, 2 Mrs. Alec Nicholls, 3 Gertrude Dunford.

1st year group was very closely contested, with Elva Sweeting winning 1st prize money and Elizabeth Watson a close 2nd. 3rd Rose Mary Nicholls, 4 Peggy Holmes, 5 Margaret McNaughton (the only girl to complete the unit from Young's Point.) 6 Edna Elliott.

The prize money was donated by the Women's Institute and Mrs. Patterson.

Quiz Contest.

During the afternoon Miss Scott conducted a quiz on vegetables and Edna Elliott, Rose Mary Nicholls and Elva Sweeting put on a canning demonstration.

Peggy Holmes was also given a certificate for satisfactorily completing two home-making club units.

"The girls," said Miss Scott, "have worked very hard to have a good scoring garden. Outstanding garden of the year was that of Mrs. Morley Bullock."

Five new girls began club work this year and Miss Scott expressed the hope that the girls would plan a well-rounded program for the year in their Junior Institute work.

Persqonals.

Miss Edna Higgins was the guest last week of Mrs. Henry Edwards in Apsley.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Coons and son spent the week-end in Toronto and Niagara Falls.

AC2 J. Selman of Fingal, was a recent visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Higgins.

BABY'S CRY IS NOT ALWAYS TEMPER

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. When it's the "pain cry" give Baby's Own Tablets at once. Mrs. May Mundy, of Toronto, finds they work every time.

"I am the mother of nine children, three of them prize babies, and Baby's Own Tablets have been my only medicine in raising them to the healthy children they now are. As soon as my children became a little feverish I at once gave them Baby's Own Tablets and in a very short time the fever disappeared and the children were normal again."

Nobody Is Safe

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 —(AP).—Life isn't dull even in a manhole. Thomas Foran, an electrician, was working several feet underground when he saw a horse's iron-shod hoof flying down at him. He dodged the flailing equine underpinning for 20 minutes and then escaped through a narrow passageway and out another manhole. A horse had become frightened, kicked away a barrier beside the manhole and stepped in—almost on Foran's head.

HAVELOCK

Old Conductor Dies Suddenly

HAVELOCK, Sept. 16 — (ENS) —William Hillis Backus died suddenly in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, on Monday evening. Although Mr. Bachus had been in failing health for nearly five years with a heart condition, he was able to be about until six weeks ago at his summer home at Belmont Lake when he took ill and had been confined to bed since.

The late Mr. Bachus was born September 13, 1874, at Forks-of-the-Credit, son of the late James and Sarah Bachus, but moved with his parents to Blairton, where he received his education and at Old Havelock School.

As a youth of 16 years he commenced working in an interlocking tower at Walkerville Junction in 1890, and in 1897 he came to Havelock and commenced his railroad career as a brakeman with the C.P.R. and soon was promoted to conductor, a position he held until his retirement in 1939, after almost 50 years of railroad service.

Forty-five years ago he married Miss Bessie Weymark in Havelock, where they resided for twenty years then moving to Smith's Falls where they have resided for the past 25 years; but all his vacations were spent at his cottage at Belmont Lake, and fishing was his main hobby.

He was a life member of Havelock Masonic Lodge No. 435 and a P.N.G. of Royal Lodge No. 286, I.O.O.F. of Havelock and was for years local chairman of the Order of Railroad Conductors in Smith's Falls. Since his retirement he was active in Red Cross and salvage committee work and was interested in any worthy projects.

Left to mourn him, besides his sorrowing wife are two sons and one daughter, Arthur of Verona, Dr. Leslie of Toronto, and (Madaline) Mrs. William Godfrey of Darien, Conn., U.S.A., also three brothers and a sister, Ernie of Winnipeg, George of Toronto, Harvey and Mrs. Mary Weymark of Drumheller, Alta.

His funeral, which was largely attended, was held from B. Curtis' Funeral Parlors to St. John's Anglican Church at 2:30 to-day, conducted by Rev. R. E. Lemon under the auspices of Royal Lodge No. 286, I.O.O.F., then to Maple Grove Cemetery for interment.

Pall-bearers were railroad associates, Dan Kennedy, James Barlow, Harry Roche, Russell Gendron, John A. Garrett, and Thomas Lloyd. Many relatives and associates attended from Toronto, Ottawa, Smith's Falls, Trenton, and Kingston.

Had Weak, Nervous Stomach; Limbs, Back Pained Badly

Was in Poor Health and Badly Rundown for Three Years —Tells of Grand Relief by Taking Syntona.

To persons who suffer from stomach disorders, constipation, nervousness, backache or aches and pains throughout the body, this message is one that tells them how many people have found relief.

Mrs. Emma Haywood, a highly esteemed resident of 99 Glenwood Avenue, London, Ontario, said: "I have suffered from a badly disordered stomach and rundown condition for the past three years. Food that I ate caused such distress in my stomach, I would bloat up with gas and belch up hot, sour liquids. I was badly constipated, often had sick, dizzy feelings and dark spots would come before my eyes. This made me so nervous and upset, I'd get sick headaches and couldn't sleep at night. I was seldom free from backache and aching, sore joints and muscles. My complexion was sallow and my skin rough and pimply.

"Syntona was praised by so many people that I got some and this medicine has given me the most wonderful results I ever had. My digestion has improved so nicely that I can eat full meals and have no trouble with gas, sourness or acid risings. My bowels are regular and I am free from dizziness, headaches and those torturing aches and pains for the first time in many months. My nerves have relaxed so that I enjoy restful sleep and even my complexion has cleared up. It is wonderful to feel well again and I am glad to add my praise for a medicine like Syntona, that does so much good.

MRS. EMMA HAYWOOD

If you who read this, suffer as Mrs. Haywood did, come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and find out how Syntona can help you, too. —(Advt.)
